FASHIONS FOR CANADIANS

The tailored blouse, whether of silk or cotton fabric, is one of the popular types of the present season.

The sketch shows a very charming tailored blouse recently brought out. It was made of pink crepe de chine in a trim, heavy weave, and finished simply with fine embroidery in black velvet ribbons in the waist line.

Another smart little blouse of the tailored type recently seen was made of a heavy silk net, really very much like an open scrim, cut on smock lines, reaching just to the hips, and trimmed with sampler stitch embroidery in two shades of blue.

Still another very plain smock was of natural color pongee, with an all over sampler stitch embrod-

Home Run Baker and Daughter Who Has Aided His Comeback on Diamond

J. Franklin Baker, who lost his Home Run King alias, when Babe Ruth bobbed up, hasn't been able to resist the lure of the diamond. He didn't play last season, but every baseball fan respected his reasons. His wife died and Baker decided that his place was at home with his children until he could arrange to have them cared for properly.

When Marquard Had Real Battle

BOSTON, Mar. 8.—It was Jimmy Lavender whose name conjured up memories of lavender and old lace, of flowery delis and gentle zephyrs, who stopped "Rube" Marquard in his remarkable run of consecutive victories back in 1912.

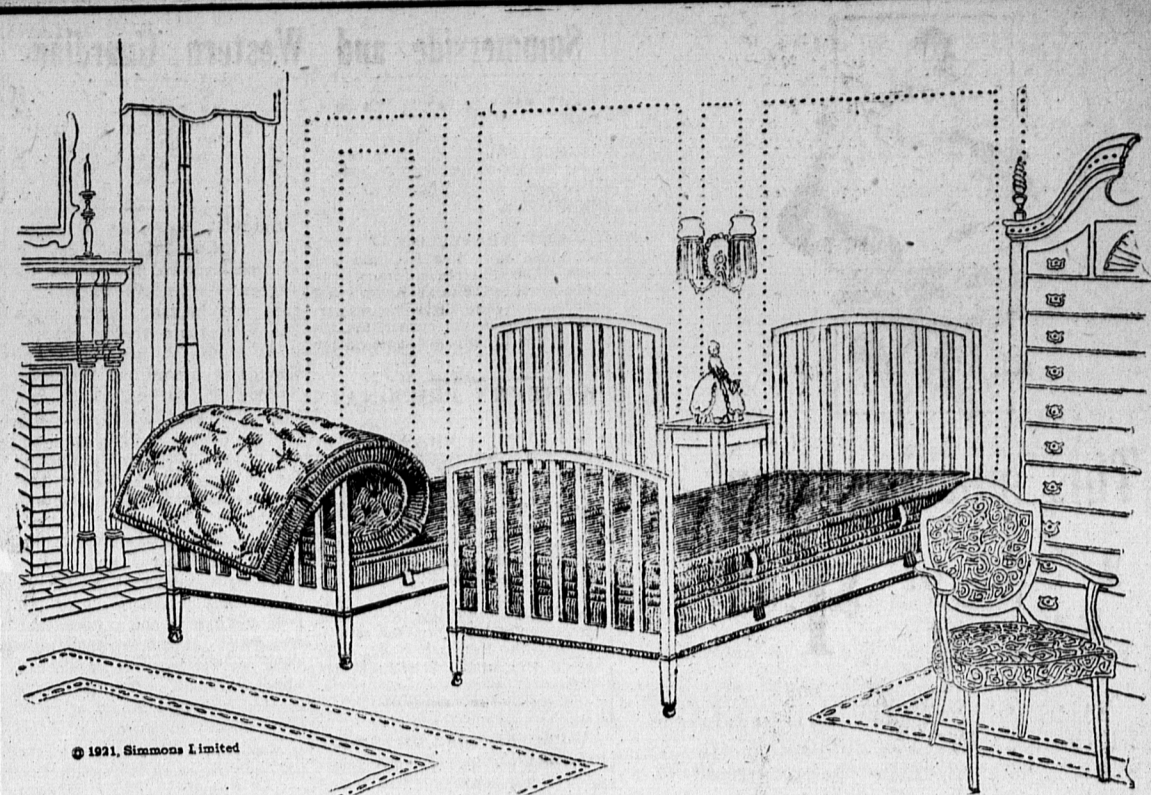

secutive innings. The struggle took place at Chicago on July 8, 1912, and was fast and furious for three innings. The break came in the fourth when the Cubs added two runs to their score making it 4 to 1. Marquard wavered, broke and sprinted for the showers.

The big southpaw seemingly took his defeat calmly but underneath a smile there was a body denied heart for that game would have given him the absolute title. Lavender the victor, who had struggled long to make good, suddenly

HELP MOST NEEDED—A man just back from Westminster told the following story on his return to his native village: "A gentleman, accompanied by his alert little son, visited the houses of parliament while the house was sitting. The lad looked on with keen interest from the gallery as the house came to order. Then, turning to his father, he said: "Father, why did the minister pray for all those men?" "He didn't the cynical parent replied: "He took a look at 'em and then prayed for the country."

DICKY DIPPY'S DIARY.

THURSDAY:—CAME ACROSS BLONDY GAZING UP AT A STEEPLE-JACK AT WORK ON A TALL CHIMNEY. WHEN I ASKED BLONDY TO COME WITH ME HE SAID HE WAS GOING TO WATCH THE MAN.

AN HOUR LATER I FOUND BLONDY IN THE SAME SPOT "WHAT?" SAID I "HAVE YOU BEEN HERE ALL THIS TIME?"

"YES," SAID HE, "BUT IT'S NO USE STAYING ANY LONGER, BECAUSE
