Ch'town Oddfellows Visit Amherst Lodge

(Amherst Daily News)

Making their first fraternal visit to Amherst in many years, the combined Third Degree team of Wildey Lodge and St. Laurent Lodge, Charlottetown, made a great hit with local Odd Fellows in the manner in which they exemplified this degree on a candidate at Ivy Lodge Friday evening. A large gathering of the fraternity was in attendance and witnessed this demonstration with a feeling of delight. Many commendations were expressed to the visitors at the conclusion of the ceremony.

The regular meeting of the Lodge was followed by a social function at which P. N. G., W. N. Collicutt presided and in which a number of the members participated. It was a happy affair throughout and a warm invitation was extended by the visitors to the local fraternity to visit them as early as possible. The address of welcome was given by Mayor N. S. Sanford and was responded to by A. O. F. Gill, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the Maritimes, in a pleasing address in which he expressed the pleasure of the visitors at being able to attend this gathering.

One of the features of the regular lodge session, in addition to the degree work, was the presentation of pins to three veteran members of the Lodge who had completed forty-five years of continuous membership. These were A. P. Harlow, James Garvin and David Grey. They were extended hearty congratulations by Past Grand Master Gill on such an outstanding record of loyal membership. Each of them made short addresses at the banquet function.

The greetings of Eureka Lodge and of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia were brought by the Grand Warden, H. N. Soley of Springhill, who has been doing notable work for the fraternity within recent years and who expressed delight at being present at this function.

Others participating in the speechmaking were H. R. Carruthers of Hillcrest Lodge, Montague, P. E. I.; K. T. Tomlinson, Noble Grand of Wildey Lodge, Charlottetown; Earl McDonald, Noble Grand of Ivy Lodge; Fred Smith, Noble Grand, St. Laurent Lodge; D. F. Bethune; J. R. Compton; M.A.S. Goodwin, Chief Patriarch Encampment No. 9; John G. Reid, Skowhegan, Lodge, Wakefield, Mass.; veteran of fifty years; Fred C. Annis, Crescent Lodge, Henniker, N. H.; and others.

Those taking part in the Degree were A. O. F. Gill, D. F. Bethune, K. T. Tomlinson; Fred Smith, James Campbell, Gordon Rodd, Arthur Cudmore, Percy Acorn, Wm. Warren, Vernon Howatt, Clifford Keenan, J. R. Compton, Austin Graham, John Williams, Theodore Sentner, George MacDougall, Stanley Bryant.

Royal Family Styles Spark Smart Tweeds

BY DENISE DALTROFF

Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, June 3 — Hobble skirts for evening, longer sleeves on autumn woollen dresses and influence of styles worn by the Queen and Princesses in South Africa were seen at a show held by the Drapers Organizer.

Bishop type sleeves were the most popular, rather full, and gathered into a wristband or cuff. Another new sleeve was wrist-length and open-ended in the manner of the old bell sleeve. It can be worn three-quarter length by turning the lower part up as deep cuff or it can be even shorter by rolling it above the elbow.

Long swallow-tailed jackets appeared in another autumn style, and the bare-shouldered bodice on evening dresses was replaced by a diagonal one-shoulder line.

Autumn colors were purple, smoky blue, burgundy and orchid beige for day wear, and popular accessories were parasols, long white kid gloves and artificial flowers on evening frocks.

An off-the-face hat made with a garland of roses, a black velvet bow and some veiling followed a style launched by Princess Elizabeth with her Hartnell hat of pale grey-blue leaves. A two-piece in dusky pink jersey with straight box coat and two pockets were copied from the favorite style of both the Queen and Princesses.

Two double-duty dresses were shown, one was a dinner ensemble in slipper satin. The jacket could be removed to show a slim draped dinner dress with cap sleeves.

A short afternoon dress with corded fringe epaulettes could be transformed into a dinner gown with black cape doubling as a ground-length skirt.

MISS MATILDA CARLTON

Her many friends on the Island will regret to learn of the passing of Matilda Jane Carlton aged 79 years, on Sunday evening, May 25th in the city of Verdun, Quebec. Born in Souris where she lived all her life, Miss Carlton was the last surviving member of a family prominent in the commercial and civic life of her town.

As a devoted daughter in the home, she took care of her father and mother, the late Caleb Cushing Carlton Sr., and his wife Matilda Jane Spencer, in their declining years. She was also a loving sister and companion to her brother C. C. Carlton Jr., well-remembered as a leading citizen who predeceased her in 1936.

Surviving relatives include a niece; Mrs. Joyce, wife of Rev. J. G. Joyce of Verdun, Quebec, and nephews, J. E. Mellett, Atlanta Ga.; G. W. Mellett, Regina, Sask.; L. W. Mellett and R. S. Mellett, Wetaskiwin, Alta.; Lloyd Carlton of this city, L. W. Carlton, Van Nuys, Cal., and Edgar Carlton in Western Canada.

The funeral which took place from the old home in Souris on May 30th was conducted by her pastor, Rev'd. W. A. MacQuarrie, B. D., with members of St. James United Choir assisting. Interment in the family plot Souris West cemetery.

Many beautiful floral pieces paid silent tribute to the affectionate memory in which Miss Carlton was held and seemed so appropriate at the passing of one whose beautiful old-fashioned garden, in which she manifested such an interest, was just coming into bloom.

The pall-bearers were as follows: H. D. MacLean, J. Peter MacPhee, Dr. A. H. Smallwood, H. G. Matthew, George MacEachern and R. A. Leard.

God hath not promised skies always blue,
Flower-strewn pathways all our lives through;
God hath not promised sun without rain,
Joy without sorrow, peace without pain.

But God hath promised strength for the day,
Rest for the labor, light for the way,
Grace for the trials, help from above,
Unfailing sympathy, undying love.

An Island that Shouldn't Be

How long he had slept he had little idea, but he had been going to sea long enough to have the "feel" of a ship. He sensed rather than knew that at the moment he opened his eyes something had happened. He raised himself on his elbows, his ears alert. The first silver glimmers of dawn were breaking through his port-hole. It was not that the yacht's engines had stopped. Their rhythmic note had been the first sound for which he had sought. It was something different . . . indefinable. Suddenly, he realized it. The Lapwing despite the almost indeterminate throb of her engines was not moving. Stephen leaped from his bunk and, clad only in his pyjamas, flung open the door. As he did so he heard the swift patter of feet on the deck above him. Turning in the direction of the bridge he ran full tilt into the running figure of a man. It was the helmsman.

"Come up, sir, come up on deck." he panted, "we're aground and yet . . . we can't be."

Stephen felt a strangely cold sweat come to his face.

"Have you checked our bearings?" he asked.

"Yes, sir! That's what makes it so queer."

Out on deck Stephen saw that silvery haze across the great arch of the sky heralding the dawn that would soon break in a great burst of fiery splendour.

"I'll check it myself" Stephen told the wild-eyed man and ran swiftly up the ladder leading to the wheelhouse. There he saw the charts hanging up on the wall and checked The Lapwing's position meticulously. The man was right. The nearest land was almost a thousand miles away and yet . . Stephen dashed from the wheelhouse and along the deck to the bow of the yacht, but before doing so he rang down on the engine-room telegraph to stop the engines.

Below him he saw the slim straight bow of The Lapwing buried deeply in a stretch of white sand. The beach rose from the water's edge in a pleasant incline of probably two hundred yards. Beyond that was a fringe of what he took to be low undergrowth and beyond that again a belt of tall, stately-looking palms.

From his knowledge of the yacht's position it was unbelievable This land did not exist. Charts nowadays did not lie. If a new island had been discovered all shipping would have been aware of the fact Stephen wanted to laugh. He did laugh, but he did not at that moment know that it was not the laugh of a sane man.

The helmsman's voice behind him pulled him up.

"Shall I tell Captain Ventriss, sir?"

Stephen turned to face the man.

"Not yet," he announced, quickly. "I just want to make sure, Bailiss, that we're not both of us suffering from bats in the belfry. I'm going to climb down on to the anchor and go ashore." Stephen laughed hysterically. He suddenly remembered last night. The fairy lights slung between the awning supports. The Hindu legend. The island flung up from the depths of the ocean . . . The Paradise where dreams come true . . .

Stephen climbed over the side of The Lapwing and lowered himself until his bare feet touched the horns of the anchor. It wasn't far the drop down to the sand . . . a matter, he judged, only of about fifteen feet. Slowly his fingers grasping the rail released their hold; his feet slid from the anchor horns and he began to fall. But he had not allowed for the protuberance of the anchor. His head struck something extremely hard, and Stephen Hylton was unconscious when his limp body crumpled up into the soft, yielding sand.

CHAPTER V

The Awakening

Unknown to Stephen Hylton, and indeed, to his guests, Sir Timothy had been skulking in the shadows of the deck the previous evening while the Chief Officer had been engaged in telling his story. Secretly, Sir Timothy had been an interested listener, but not being himself a superstitous man had nothing but disbelief for Hylton's Paradise of Dreams, and the millionaire had stolen unobtrusively away before the story ended.

By the time the dawn came, Sir Timothy was sleeping with fewer dream-state interruptions, but he was awakened by a peremptory hammering on the door of his cabin.

He raised himself quickly in his bunk as people will when aroused suddenly from sleep. The dawn had broken rosy-pink through the curtained window on the far side of the cabin. Who the devil could want to awaken him at this hour. They knew he wouldn't be breakfasting until near mid-day.

"Come in," he growled, unpleasantly, and heard the handle of the cabin door rattle, only to remember that he'd deliberately locked it after his valet had put him to bed. Why he had locked it, he had no clear recollection. Just an impulse, he supposed.

He climbed from his bed with a gesture of innate savagery disguished as petulance and flung open the door.

Captain Ventriss was standing there, stern-faced.

"Well," barked the millionaire, "what's the matter?"

The Captain did not reply immediately. He entered the cabin and closed the door behind him.

"I have to report, sir, that we're aground and that, so far as I can discover, there's precious little chance of getting her off without assistance."

The blood drained from Sir Timothy Pointer's normally ruddy face leaving it white as The Papwing's newly-scrubbed decks.

Bristol & Vicinity

Mr. John T. O'Brien has been confined to his home with an infected lip.

The government dredge which has been in Morell river all winter for repairs is still there.

Cyril Sinnott, who won a number of prizes at S. D. U. this term is home for his summer vacation.

Mr. Reggie Phalen, has arrived home from S. D. U. where a student he graduated from that University this year.

The new saw mills at Morell, are reported overworked as lumber continues to pour in faster then the mills can handle it.

Mr. Emery McEwen, manager of the west St. Peter's mills is supplying much needed slab wood to his many customers.

Mr. Robert Sanderson, Morell East, informs the writer that he set an all time record in those parts last week for sowing grain. He claims he put in twenty acres of oats for Mr. B. Tobin in one day last week, using horses in a drill seeder.

Farmers here who raise geese claim this year their luck is very poor. Some who expected to have sixty geese wont have a dozen. It is thought here that thunder may have killed the young geese in the shell along with unusual cold wet weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Perry and young son of Moncton are visiting at Mr. Perry's old home here, guests of his mother for a few days. They will also visit Mr. Perry's brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. J. Perry, before returning to the mainland.

A car reported as coming from the Eastern part of the Island was damaged here early Saturday morning when it is believed the lady behind the wheel dozed for a moment or two. The passengers received quite a shaking-up as the new car ploughed into the ditch and up on the bank. Considerable damage was done to the front while the steering wheel was smashed. The car was taken out late Saturday evening after R. C. M. P. had visited the spot.

A large transfer truck from the city ploughed into the swamp on one of the by-roads here late Saturday night when the driver mistook the green swamp grass for solid ground in making a short turn. It was to late to stop when he saw the mistake. A heavy truck from the Morell Co-operative store failed to pull her out so the machine was left there until Sunday afternoon when a crew of men under direction of Wm. MacDonald, backed out the car without damage and the happy driver left for his home in the city.

May Devotions which were conducted at the church of the Little Flower during the month of May were brought to a close on Sunday evening with a procession around the church. Four small girls were flower girls. A special sermon for the occasion was preached by Rev. Edwin Baldwin, C. S. R. rector of Holy Redeemer Church Charlottetown. Fr. Baldwin, a noted mission preacher was stationed in Newfoundland for a number of years before coming to the Island and this was his first visit to Little Flower Church.

Found too late for the owner to claim it is a sum of money lost here some years ago. Mr. Patrick Curran, reported he had lost the sum of forty dollars some where around home or away, so the years went by and so did Mr. Curran who died this spring. His property was sold to Mr. Reginald McDonald. And last week while Mr. McDonald was hauling out some of the manure that had gathered around the place where the old barn stood, he dug up the long lost roll of bills. They were worn and faded with time and weather. He took them to the bank to have them counted and replaced with fresh new notes and in turn returned them to Mrs Curran who never knew her deceased husband had ever lost the roll. —B.

Minutes of last meeting were read and approved, after which the treasurer gave her report. Collection was then taken which amounted to $1.30. Correspondence was read and discussed. It was moved and carried that we donate $10.00 to the "Cancer Drive", also that a map of P. E. Island be purchased for Eglington school. The women of the Eglington district decided to clean the school at the request of their teacher. It was decided that roll call be responded to by a "Joke", for June meeting.

Mrs. Alex Fisher and Mrs. Howard Wood, and Mrs. Raymond MacDonald were appointed on lunch committee for June meeting.

Contests were put on by Mrs. Reid Underhay and Mrs. Charles Lutz. Prizes were won by Mrs. Ernest Underhay and Mrs. Brent Stead. Mrs. Weslie Keefe and Mrs. Alex Fisher were appointed on program committee for June meeting.

Mrs. Aubrey Aitken kindly invited the members for the June meeting.

Meeting adjourned by singing the National Anthem, after which a dainty lunch was served.

MARSHFIELD AND DUNSTAFFNAGE Y. P. U.

The Y. P. U. of Central United Church closed for the summer months with a social evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy S. Dennis, on May 16th.

The meeting opened with God's Message read by Miss Ann MacEachern. Hymn 164 was then sung. Scripture reading was read by Irene Dennis; the story by Florence, Anderson. The Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. Hymn 401 closed the devotional period.

Miss Opal Clow was the devotional convener. The remainder of the evening was spent with games and contests prepared by the appointed committee. The ladies served a very delicious luncheon. The president on behalf of the society thanked Mr. and Mrs. Dennis for the use of their home. A sing-song was held with Mrs. Irving Thompson capably acting as pianist.

"Operation Peace" On Domestic Front

JOHANNESBURG, June 3 —(CP)—Deep in the Burma jungles during the war, a British officer, Maj. C. J. Bridgman, decided that when he got back to civilization he wanted "a job that was different." He spoke to a colleague—Maj. A. D. Bertram—about it and they have started it in Johannesburg now—much to the satisfaction of the city's absent-minded husbands.

Bridgman and Bertram claim to be the Golden City's first "universal hosts."

Part of their scheme is a reminder service, which enables hubby to arrive home on the all-important wedding anniversary with the appropriate gift for his wife. Domestic squabbles over family forgetfullness are now a thing of the past for some people who let the two men do their remembering. A telephone call reminder now ensures that they call for wives at the right time, or remember mother-in-law's birthday.

They will meet business men from various parts of the world and show them around, provide a secretarial service "mother the magnates" and take Mrs. Brown's favorite poodle for its morning airing.

PREFAB BARGES AID NORTHERN TRANSPORT

THE PAS, Man., June 3 — (CP) — Shallow-draft, 70-foot plywood barges, first developed for use in the invasion of the Pacific islands and Europe have found a place in the development of the north.

Construction of a boat on isolated northern lakes always has been a costly proposition. The barges, however, are prefabricated and sections can be freighted across ice in winter with the craft, capable of carrying 35 tons of freight, assembled where they are to be used. A forward ramp permits easy loading and unloading.

One barge has been assembled near here for use by the Manitoba Water Resources Branch and another has arrived for the Saskatchewan government employees at Cumberland house, 45 miles northwest of here. A third is already transporting equipment and supplies into the new Snow Lake townsite.
