The DOOM TRAIL

AUTHOR OF PORTO BELLO GOLD ETC

"I will have naught to do with it," responded the priest with decision. "Not even to admit her into the Church would I tolerate the fastening upon herself, her husband and myself of a mortal sin. As for the Chevalier de Veulle, I will say nothing at present. But I am not satisfied with everything here at La Verge du Bois. I shall have more to do on that score later."

He went out and up the stairs, and Murray, after a moment's hesitation, followed him.

But our reprieve was brief. The next morning an augmented force of jailers appeared; our legs were unshackled, and we were marched up into the wintry sunshine again, our eyes blinking at the unwanted light. The village was deserted, and we perceived the reason when we reached the council place and saw the long row of stakes which stretched before the background of the green fires of the Evil Wood. Jeers and cries of derision greeted us.

The False Faces thrust their ill-omened circle around us, and the feather-tufted Keepers and their women and children pressed close to view the gruesome spectacle. We were bound to the stakes, Ta-wan-ne-ars and I in the middle of the line; and almost at once the torturing began upon the unfortunates at the two extremities. Their songs and shouts of defiance soon gave way to a sinister silence, as they fought with all their will power to curb the agony which bade them cry for mercy.

The horror of it first stunned me, then felled me into a red-hot tempest of anger. And in the midst of the orgy of brutality Murray and De Veulle penetrated the circle of False Faces, with Marjory, white-faced, tight-lipped, between them. They walked up to the stake to which I was bound.

Murray addressed me. "We are making a bargain with the lady, Master Ormerod. She is to renounce her objections to De Veulle, own herself mistaken in her feeling of affection for you—and you are to be permitted to escape when she has sealed her engagements."
"Do not think of it, Marjory," I called to her. "I mind this not at all. And fear not. Help will come to you."

A tinge of color showed in her cheeks, and she stepped to my side. "I cannot let you die, Harry," she said with a sob. "Indeed, I will not be able to stand the thinking of it. Better anything—better marriage to this beast—than—that!"
"You are wrong," I urged her. "You must not. I should go mad if you did. I should hate myself! I—"

"Bid her not, brother," I appealed to Ta-wan-ne-ars. "Tell her I do not fear to pay the price! And why should I escape if you—"
His granite features softened as his eyes met hers. But before he could speak the scene shifted with startling rapidity. There was a bulge in the ring of False Faces, and Ga-ha-no burst into the group.

Dressed in her uniform as Ga-ga-sa Ho-nun-as-tase-ta, the kilt and moccasins, she fronted De Veulle with eyes blazing, breast heaving. "Do you seek now to buy the white maiden with this man's life?" she stormed. "You shall not! You have had your pleasure with me. Now you would like to have a woman of your own color. You shall not! I have been bad. I have forgotten the ways of my fathers. I have betrayed a good man."

She threw a glance at Ta-wan-ne-ars, straining at his bonds. "For that I am sorry, but it is too late!" she exclaimed. "White maiden," she cried to Marjory, "do not listen to this man. He is more wicked than I—and I am now a creature of Ha-ne-go-at-geh!"

De Veulle waved his arm toward the attentive circle of False Faces. "Remove the Mistress," he ordered. "She is hindering the torture."
The False Faces moved forward reluctantly, but Ga-ha-no acted without hesitation. A knife leaped from a fold of her kilt, and she sprang upon De Veulle like a wildcat. He retreated, and ripped out his own knife.

But she closed with him, and the two knives sank home at the same instant. Hers pierced De Veulle to the heart. His drove to the hill into her right breast, and she staggered back, coughing blood, against the rigid form of Ta-wan-na-ars bound fast to the stake.

"Ga-ha-no—was not—worthy of—Ta-wan-ne-ars," she gasped as her head slipped down his chest. "It is—better—so."

No torture could have distorted his face into the image of frenzied despair which it displayed as he strove uselessly to bend down to her. "My Lost Soul!" he muttered. "Oh, Ha-wen-ne-yu, my Lost Soul! Oh, Great Spirit, my Lost Soul!"
Marjory crept nearer to me, the horror in her face turning to pity, the tears streaming from her eyes. Murray, taking snuff absently, mumbled, "The poor lass!" she cried softly. "The poor, brave lass!"

CHAPTER XVI

The Might of the Log House
The silence of the consternation gripped the hordes of the Keepers of the Trail. The sea of painted, scowling faces exhibited one frozen expression of awe at the suddenness of the tragedy. Only Murray gave no indication of feeling as he knelt by De Veulle's side.
He stood up, wiping a spot of blood off one of his hands with a laced handkerchief.
"He is gone," he remarked partially.
"Give a look to the Indian girl," I urged.
He shrugged his shoulders as if to say it was not worth while; but Marjory stooped over Ga-ha-no, composed the disordered black tresses and closed the wildly staring eyes.

"Tis useless, Harry," she said. "She is dead."
"Ga-ha-no—is dead!" repeated Ta-wan-ne-ars blankly.
His heaving muscles relaxed, and he hung limp in his bonds against the stake.
"At the least, the woman gave you an avenue of escape from an intricate problem," commented Murray. "You do not seem glad, my dear."
"I am not glad," retorted Marjory scornfully. "And I am right content that you should be unable to understand why I will be mourning for her."
"Ah, well, we have never understood each other, have we?" rejoined Murray, taking snuff absently. "Come we will give orders for the removal of the unfortunate pair, and—"
The horror dawned once more in Marjory's face.

Pastor's Radio Gave Big Time News To World

REV. J. G. JOYCE ONCE OWNED ONLY SET IN NEWFOUNDLAND

(Montreal Star April 15)
Rev. J. G. Joyce, of Merrickville, Ontario, who last evening received his degree of Th.D., at the United Theological College here, was formerly pastor of the Wesley United Church at St. John's, Newfoundland, where he established in 1924 what was then the only radio station in Newfoundland.

This 500 watt station, with the call letters 8 WMC, operating on a wave length of 420 metres, was supported by public subscription, and it gave to the world the first news of the great tidal wave that did so much damage on the island at Burin Bay in the fall of 1929. The residents in that district thought an earthquake had destroyed the City of St. John's, and that the tidal wave was the result of the upheaval. It was not until they heard a Bible Society meeting coming over the air from Station 8 WMC that they realized that all was well in St. John's and that their district alone had suffered.

It was this station again a few weeks ago that gave to the world the news of the disaster to the sealing ship Viking, and kept on broadcast information as to the rescue attempts and their ultimate success. Dr. Joyce operated and managed the station himself for many years—in fact, until he was appointed last June by the Ottawa and Montreal Conference to Merrickville.
Dr. Joyce, who was born at Corbolear, Newfoundland, and had his elementary education on the island, graduated at Mount Allison University and Boston University, where he obtained his B. A. and S.T.B. Then and entertainments—the station being a valuable link with the Dominion of Canada and North American continent.

Dr. Joyce, when appointed to Merrickville, took an extra-mural course with the United Theological College, and wrote his thesis on "Environmental and Social Factors in Newfoundland." Last evening Dr. Gifford, in introducing him to convocation, made the comment that the work was of sufficient merit to deserve publication.

SUED FOR 'RECKLESS WALKING'

PARIS, April 25 (British United Press)—Probably for the first time in French legal history a pedestrian is endeavouring to obtain damages from a fellow pedestrian for "reckless walking."

The plaintiff in this odd case is a woman who occupies an important position in a dressmaking establishment. The defendant, from whom she is claiming no less than $2,000 damages, is a banker. They "collided" in the middle of the Rue de Rivoli, and, appropriately enough (since this is an affair strictly between pedestrians), at a spot where rows of studs in the roadway indicate the walkers may cross without being knocked down by motorists.

Both banker and dressmaker were in a hurry. The court will have to decide who was in the wrong. But it was the woman who in falling suffered injury, for her wrist was sprained, and she claims that this has seriously interfered with her work.

Selwood of Sleepy Cat

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

IN THIS STORY of rapid action, Mr. Spearman has gone back to his early love—of writing tales of the West in stage coach and Indian days, when the railroad had just started to cross the frontier, when men lived enthusiastically, loved truly and were quick on the trigger. If you have read "Whispering Smith," "Nan of Music Mountain" or any of his other fascinating novels, we shall not be surprised if you find this one the best of all.
