(Canadian Press.) EDMONTON, July 29.—Bringing with him five fox whelps, two blacks, two crosses and one red, R. J. Robinson arrived in the city last evening and was met at the station by F. W. Bernstead, a representative of a fox farm near Trenton, N. J., who purchased the foxes for $2,875. The tiny reynards were immediately enclosed in a packing box and sent to their new homes across the border. Mr. Bernstead has been in the city for the last three weeks and during that time has purchased twenty-eight foxes which have all been shipped to Trenton. His purchases totaling over $100,000. The foxes purchased this evening were taken over thirty miles north east of Athabasca Landing, in walling across a field one day the water came across a den and dug out the whelps. Having heard of the price paid in Edmonton he immediately decided to bring them to the city for sale with the result that his bank account has been considerably enlarged.

SUMMER SCHOOL FOR TEACHERS

At the Summer School for Teachers in this province now in session at the Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown, Mr. Charles M. Williams, B. S. A., took the class of "Insects in relation to plant life," and gave a highly important lesson. He first dealt with the economic importance of the subject, and also spoke of it as an excellent field for intellectual growth emphasizing the fact that more could be learned by studying the habits of insects than by studying the works of the great philosophers. As a recreation or occupation for one's thoughts when walking, this study was unequalled. In insect life examples might be found of architecture, engineering, unremitting care of young, tragedies and even war and slavery. All phases of human activities were found there, with the one difference, that they were brought to a state of higher perfection. The abundance of insects made it easy to study them and a little knowledge of their habits would undoubtedly have a very beneficial influence upon the young students studying them. Few then defined an insect as a creature whose body was divided into three distinct regions; the head, thorax and abdomen, having one pair of antennae, three pairs of legs and usually one or two pairs of wings in the adult state. The life histories of insects were extremely interesting and of considerable importance in attempting their control. Ordinarily there were four stages in the life history: these being the eggs, larva, pupa and adult. The egg was the first stage in the existence of any insect and was one of the ways in which insects passed through the winter; from the

DEPUTY MINISTER IN HEROIC ACT

OTTAWA, July 30.—Geo. J. Desbarats, Deputy Minister of the Naval Service, who accompanied Hon. J. D. Hazen on the trip to the coast, distinguished himself in a heroic rescue from drowning at Banff a few days ago. In a private letter received at the Marine Department, the writer states that the attention of Mr. Desbarats was attracted by a 15-year-old boy crying for assistance in the swimming pool. The boy had got into eight feet of water and being unable to swim was drowning. The Deputy Minister, without waiting to be called, jumped into the pool and proceeded to rescue the boy. This was accomplished with great difficulty owing to the boy being frightened and clasping his rescuer about the neck. Finally he brought him out safely. Probably Mr. Desbarats will be recommended for the Royal Humane Society medal.

MR HOUSTON ON ALCOHOL

The Guardian has been asked to publish in full the important paper on alcohol read by Dr. Houston at the meeting of the P. E. Island Medical Association at Summerside, Dr. Houston said:— I wish to present to this society today the modern views in regard to the action and use of alcohol as a medicine and in order to do so I want to bring before you, first, some extracts from my notes taken from Dr. Blackader, Professor of Pharmacology and Therapeutics of McGill, during the sessions of 1895-96 and 1896-97.

THE OLD VIEW.

This will give you a fair idea of the views held at that time and thus give you a basis of comparison. My notes are as follows:— Internally, alcohol produces a hot burning sensation with condensation of epithelium and some anaesthesia. On reaching the stomach it produces a sense of warmth which is followed by a general glow over the body. In moderate quantity it stimulates the superficial circulation increasing blood supply and thereby increasing the functional activity of peptic glands. If taken in large amount this stimulation passes on to irritation, and secretion is lessened or destroyed. If taken in weak solution it does not interfere with the action of peptic glands but if strong it precipitates it. A single dose introduced into stomach produces important reflex actions. It stimulates the heart and respiration, and produces dilatation of cutaneous vessels. At same time blood pressure rises. This renders it of much service for securing prompt cardiac stimulation. It is very diffusable and enters blood rapidly. Probably all taken into the stomach enters the circulation without entering small intestine, though the portal system and the liver are the first to

FARMERS PICNIC

Another farmers' picnic to the Experimental Farm took place yesterday. The farmers comprising the party came from Central Lot 16, Belmont and Summerside, and numbered about 120 altogether. They were the most enthusiastic party that has up to the present made these trips to the Farm. They were under the charge of the Hon. A. E. Arsenault. Traveling by special train, they reached Charlottetown about half-past ten o'clock in the morning and proceeded at once to the Farm. On arrival there they discussed luncheon as the first item of the day's program, the latter being partaken of in the delightful surroundings of the picnic grove. After luncheon, they were shown through the buildings of the Farm, including the poultry barn, where was explained to them the experimental work being done at the Farm in regard to stock and the raising of chickens. Then they were taken by the Superintendent, Professor Clark, through the flower garden and the small fruits orchards, and afterwards assembled at the Lily Pond, where they were photographed and then listened to several interesting addresses that were made to them by prominent public men. The first speaker was the Premier, the Hon. J. A. Mathieson, whose remarks were quite brief. He spoke of the work that the Government were doing along agricultural lines, and in this connection referred to the short courses that had been given last winter in the country. Mr. Mathieson also dealt with the importance and usefulness of picnics such as that to the Experimental Farm, and said he considered them one of the best means that had been provided for the assistance of the farmers and agriculturists. He also touched upon the Summer School for Teachers at present in session in Charlottetown at the Prince of Wales College and referred to the fact that the teachers were there receiving a good deal of instruction in agricultural matters, and he appealed to his audience to do all they could in their part to assist the teachers in their work, the importance of which to the future of the country he emphasized.

BAD SMASHUP IN MONTREAL

(Canadian Press.) MONTREAL, July 30.—A spectacular smashup occurred this afternoon when the harbor engine, hauling eighteen cars of coal, switched on the wrong track while getting up speed to climb the grade smashed into a row of nine cars on the wharf. Some of the cars were empty but three boys who were unloading sugar were badly injured when the collision occurred. The impact of the engine drove the last car fifteen feet up a pile of sand which alone saved it from busting into the river. The injuries to the boys are broken arms and bruises.

Then gathering again in the picnic grove they were addressed by Mr. T. A. Benson, the Dominion poultry expert, who spoke for about a quarter of an hour, chiefly along the line of the marketing of eggs and the organization of egg circles. Mr. G. J. Rely, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., also addressed the farmers, speaking on the development of social life in the country and on the farms. After this the party were shown over the experimental plots of grain, grass and clovers and then were allowed to go over the grounds just as they pleased. During this period the automobiles which again were out on their educative mission, plied briskly to and from the city, taking parties of the picnicers each time for a pleasant drive, with which the people were greatly delighted. The party left the city at six o'clock in the evening after having spent a very enjoyable time—indeed they could not be restrained from expressing their pleasure, and gave vent to their spirits in many a loud cheer.

I.C.R. DIFFICULTY NOT PRESENTED

(Special to The Guardian.) OTTAWA, July 30.—The I. C. R. wage question with which General Manager Gutelius has been dealing at Montreal has not as yet come before Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, for settlement. Hon. Mr. Cochrane stated to your correspondent to-night that so far as he is concerned the matter had not presented itself in such form as would enable him to deal with it. The return of Premier Borden on Friday has not been necessitated by the situation on the Intercolonial. One or two Nova Scotia members are here on departmental business and it is probable that their views will be placed before the minister in order that local conditions along the government railways system may have due consideration. General Manager F. P. Gutelius, of the government railway, said in reference to the controversy with the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees:— "We failed to agree with the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees on the matter of their jurisdiction over clerks in the general offices and in the superintendents' offices who have access to confidential information in these offices. "The management advised the men that it would grant reasonable increases to all of these clerical men as individuals, but declined to incorporate them in the schedule with the organization. There are about 650 clerical men on the railway, and those which we desire to eliminate from the schedule amount to about 250. I am reliably informed that less than 100 of the latter are members of the organization. "We agree with the committee on all the rules and regulations covering promotion, seniority, overtime, holidays, etc. We also agreed on the increase in salary for freight shed foremen, checkers and porters, baggage masters at stations and their assistants, baggage porters, railway stores clerks and storemen, round-house employees, coalshovelers, lantern carriers, steamship men, dining car conductors, chefs, cooks and waiters, sleeping and parlor car conductors. The increase ranging from $2.50 to $15.00 per month, and which provided an increase for all employees covered in their previous schedule with a number of additions. The wages agreed upon conform with the wages granted to employees in the other eight organizations with which we have agreements. "No, I do not think there will be a strike for the reason that the employees are under an agreement with the railways which require six months' notice by either party for its termination, and to eliminate the confidential men from the organization it was necessary for the management to give the men a notice to terminate the agreement."
