What the Gray House Hid

The Mystery of a Haunted Mansion

"The Parkers. They've been wanting to come here, but I told them we weren't asking any one till we had got used to the place. It would spoil it to have any outsiders yet. I shall be finding new wonders every minute for a month. Besides, we have no saddle horses yet, and Julia is mad about riding. That reminds me that I must order a habit and a side saddle."

Hanby was still thinking of the mysterious warnings.

"It's funny," he remarked presently, "that any one should take the trouble to feed Smucker for nothing. There must be something behind it."

"Junior and I will find out," said Bill. "It's beneath the dignity of the lord of the manor to sleuth."

"The first letter I opened," continued Hanby, pursuing his train of thought, "was from an undertaker noted for the simplicity and dignity of his funerals. He includes flowers. That's thoughtful! The next was from Seymour. Perhaps I shall now be called to the telephone to talk with another unknown conversationalist."

"My motto is eternal vigilance," said Pelham. "Carry on your business as usual—your faithful hawkshaw slumbers not nor sleeps. I'll tell you what I will do. Hill," he suggested briskly. "I'll beat you three sets out of four whenever you are ready. I've been reading a book on tennis tacts, and after committing it to memory I've burned it, so you can't read it. You haven't a chance!"

Hanby's mood was more cheerful. "I wrote that book," he declared. "Want to bet?"

"Go and get into flannels," Pelham told him. "Hill's worried," he added, to Dina, when Hanby had left the room.

"If He's a Salesman," Hanby Reflected, "I'm Gone."

"I never saw him so before. Try and make him laugh at it, Bill."

Hanby's mood of depression passed very quickly. New daily interests so crowded one upon the other that there was no room for gloom or introspection.

The Parkers did not come. Parker's stomach, after many unheeded warnings, had finally rebelled against its owner's habit of taking three meat meals a day. Julia Parker wrote that her husband was about to be operated upon.

One day, walking down the drive, Hanby met a small, florid, neatly dressed man approaching the house—the sort of man to oinspire confidence even among the most suspicious.

"If he's a salesman," Hanby reflected, "I'm gone. A man like that could sell me anything!"

The stranger bowed politely.

"Mr. Hanby, I believe?"

"Yes," replied Hanby, wondering what it was he was about to buy.

"My name is Appleton—Frederick Appleton. You are probably unaware of my existence."

"On the contrary, you are expected when the bass season opens. You were kind enough to give my friend Mr. Pelham some information about this house."

"As I was in the neighborhood, I took the liberty of coming to see your improvements. I have always been much interested in the Gray house."

"I shall be glad to show you over it and ask your advice. I find every day that there are a lot of things about country estates that they don't teach boys on farms—these improvements, for instance."

Mr. Appleton's manner was almost eager.

"May I ask what they are?"

"A big swimming pool between the tennis courts and the house, a new garage for six cars, a Japanese tea house, and a dozen smaller jobs."

Nothing pleases the new owner more than the opportunity to exhibit his property. Mr. Appleton was bored by nothing. He begged to be shown everything. He had no criticisms. He congratulated Hilton Hanby warmly.

"You will make this," he declared, "one of the stately homes of America. You have a genius for this sort of thing."

Only in one matter was his view opposed to that of the owner. He thought that the ground given over to the bird sanctuary would do admirably for ornamental glass houses.

"My wife and I wouldn't think of such a thing," Hanby asserted firmly. "We are for the conservation of bird life. You may not know it, but our rarer species of songsters are in serious danger of extermination. That bird sanctuary is a hobby of ours, and it will not be disturbed while we live."

Mr. Appleton wrung his host's hand. Hanby was surprised at the emotion written on his cherry, unlined face.

"It does you credit, sir," he exclaimed. "In my ignorance I have given no thought to such matters. It was criminal negligence. I did not know."

"As a matter of fact," Hanby confessed, "I was just as heedless as you until a month ago. Mr. Bayliss, whom I met at theMetropolitan club, told me all about it. I rather think he is president of the Ornithological society."

"The name seems familiar," said Appleton. "One of our national authorities, if I mistake not. I think I have read a notice of one of his books on the subject."

Appleton was sightseeing until luncheon. Hanby would not let him refuse to stay to the meal, despite the fact that he had a neat package of sandwiches and fruit.

The interior of the house charmed him greatly. He was filled with admiration at the rules of the Sanctuary club. The critical family circle approved of him.

After luncheon Hanby admitted that the workmen were not accomplishing what the contractor had promised.

STIFF COMPETITION COMING IN OLYMPIC WINTER GAMES, 1932

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., August 6 (By The Canadian Press)—Twenty nations in addition to the United States and Canada have signified their intention of sending teams and individual competitors to the Third Olympic Winter Games here, from Feb. 4 to 13 next year. Bjorn Blix, international secretary of the local committee, has sent word to this effect from Europe, where he is completing a nine-months tour of the leading winter sports centres.

This list of nations entered is expected to be increased materially as the time of the Games approaches. All of Lacd Placid's Olympic sports facilities will be in use with the first snowfall. Many competitors are expected to arrive in this Adirondack resort well in advance of the Games in order to try out the Mt. Van Hoevenberg bobsled run, the Intervale ski jump, the 25 miles of cross-country ski trails and the skating track and hockey boxes at the Olympic stadium.

Austria, according to reports of Mr. Blix, will send two speed-skaters, four figure-skaters, three ski-jumpers, a hockey team and a fourman bobsled team to the Lake Placid Games.

Belgium will enter the figure skating and [illegible] bobsled races. Czechoslovakia [illegible] represented by [illegible] ski-jumpers, and a [illegible]

[illegible] ski-jumpers, a hockey team and two bobsled teams. [illegible] will enter the figure skating.

Finland will send a team of 14 speed skaters, figure skaters, cross-country ski-runners, two jumpers and two in the combined event.

From France will come one speed skater, figure skaters, ski-jumpers, 50-kilometer ski runners, a hockey team and two bobsled teams.

Germany's Olympic skiers, 30 in number, will compete in the combined jumping and cross country event while it is expected that later entries from this country will include a bobsled team and possibly figure skaters.

Holland will take part in speed-skating and bobsledding. Hungary will compete in figure-skating and the combined ski-running and jumping.

Italy will send a winter-sports team that will enter the following events: figure skating, ski-jumping, hockey, and four-man and two-man bobsled races. Japan is sending a hockey team and 10 skiers.

Latvia will be represented in figure-skating as will Lithuania.

Norway will send speed-skaters, figure-skaters and a ski team of 15. Poland will send a hockey team and 10 ski-jumpers. Roumania will be represented by teams in both the two-man and the four-man bobsled races.

Sweden will enter an Olympic team of 41, taking part in speed-skating, figure-skating, cross-country ski-running and jumping, and hockey.

Two teams of bobsledders, ski-runners and jumpers and at least one speed-skater will come from Switzerland. Jugo-Slavia will enter four men in the ski-jumps.
