TAKE THE STORAGE OF DAHLIAS
often lost as a result of diseases developing in storage. Experiments conducted by the Division of Botany of the Dominion Experimental Farms Branch show that these losses can be reduced materially by proper attention to the fitting and sorting of the roots. As soon as the dahlia plants have completed its full growth, it begins storing material in the root for further use. This will vary with the season, locality and the variety. When the plant is mature it should be cut down and the roots dug very carefully with a spading fork. The loosened clump should never be pulled up by the stalk and the use of an ordinary spade is to be avoided because these practices may cause wounds which render the roots very susceptible to attack by rot-producing diseases. The removed clumps should be turned upside-down to let moisture drain out of the sockets and the roots dry for 2 or 3 hours particularly if the soil is wet. Removing the soil adhering to the roots is not necessary, particularly if the clump has been thoroughly dried. The roots should be stored in a frost-free place but not where it is too warm to prevent shrivelling. Good results were obtained when the roots were stored at 35 to 45 deg. F. Spangnum moss was found to be most satisfactory for packing the roots. This moss, when thoroughly air-dried, took care of excessive drying. Well matured roots stood a high storage temperature than immature ones. Mature roots stood a higher storage temperature from 65 to 70 deg. but suffered considerably from drying. The vigour of plants grown from roots stored at low temperatures, 35 to 45 deg., was greater than those stored at 60 to 70 deg. There was less rot and die rot in the well matured roots whether stored at high or low temperatures. Regardless of what the storage conditions are, the roots should be examined from time to time through winter. If conditions are too dry some matter should be added to the moss. If there is evidence of rot the root should be moved to a drier place. Fancy varieties are, as a general rule, more susceptible to rot under artificial storage conditions for which reason they require more careful attention.

No Parallel With Serajevo Says Simon
(C. F. Cable)
(By Guardian's Special Wire)
NORTHAMPTON, England, Oct. 20.—The situation of Alexander of Yugoslavia provided no parallel with the murder of Serajevo which, declared Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, in a speech here this evening.
Sir John declared the influence of every statesman in Europe would be used to discount any remote possibility of such a quarrel as followed Serajevo. For this country, British policy while against incurring any new commitments on the continent, had been directed and would continue to be directed to counselling peace in the interests of Europe as a whole. "It is in the interests of Europe as a whole," said Sir John, "to facilitate the difficult task of the Yugoslav government."

Sea Creature Is Captured
(A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
ELIZABETH CITY, N. C., Oct. 20.—A huge creature 10 feet long and weighing from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds was held captive in a hastily-constructed pool near here today, while the inhabitants of the region awaited the arrival of a representative of the museum commission to identify it.
A party of fishermen caught the creature in a seine, and hauled it ashore with ropes attached to automobiles.
It is three feet across the back, 18 inches thick, and has a fan-shaped tail. The skin is dark brown and apparently very thin, with some traces of hair on it. The face is long, resembling that of a horse. It has no teeth.

Year Produced Record Search For Rook Gold
(By R. K. Carnegie)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
OTTAWA, Oct. 21.—A season that brought what is believed to have been the greatest hunt for gold in Canada's history is available to show the exact number of prospectors and assistants who struggled through often inhospitable country, but a careful approximation indicates a total of about 18,000 prospectors and assistants in the yellow metal spurred prospectors' activity. An added factor was extensive use of the aeroplane which provided access to new districts and revealed existence of still more. Aerial photography, it is said, has revolutionized the metal-mining industry.
Pictures taken from speeding aeroplanes tell experts much. The topographical survey of the Department of the Interior produced 60,000 aerial photographs during the summer. From these, most of them taken in Northern Manitoba, Athabasca, Great Bear and Great Slave regions and in the Nahanni district near the Yukon boundary, new areas have been developed.
Planes of the Royal Canadian Air Force carrying aerial surveyors made flights over the famous Long Lac district in Northwestern Ontario. Some flights were made in other provinces during the summer. Photography this year was designed to help seekers of gold.
Luck, prospectors and geologists say, is still the most important factor in the hunt for gold and less valuable metals. One line was followed down the Yukon valley, where the surrounding soil and bare rock developed to be one of the richest veins ever discovered in Canada. Last summer a prospector stopped on the shore of a lake because a high wind endangered his canoe. While he waited for the storm to abate he discovered what is regarded as one of the most important finds of the year. Such incidents are said to make prospectors superstitious.
Aerial photography has removed some of the chance from prospecting. It tells the field man what rocks contain no gold and the territory where the soil, or what miners call "the rock," is too deep for them to find workable veins even if they did exist. They help him concentrate his effort where it is most likely to succeed.
Pictures show granite formations in which metals are seldom found and on the other hand indicate geological "faults" and great fractures where profitable mineralization is more probable.
Storekeepers placed over the pictures show the valleys and hills in the area. After discovery of a vein a study of the pictures helps in development as it shows the contour of the country and indicates the best route for a road and most advantageous location for a mill.
In the files of the topographical survey 600,000 negatives are kept and a sufficient number of prints are available to prevent any possible shortage.

King George Keen On Air Derby

King George Keen On Air Derby
(A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
MIDDLESBROUGH, England, Oct. 20.—The King was asked today if he would like to be going with the fliers on the great England to Australia air race which gets underway at dawn.
Mrs. Mary Mollison put the query to the King in the course of a cordial chat in which Queen Mary joined. His Majesty was asked how he would like to go and enjoy the warm weather they expected to encounter soon after leaving England.
The King smiled, then shook his head. "I am afraid I am getting a little beyond a flight of that kind," he answered.
Queen Mary evidently had no doubt that the Mollisons would reach their destination, whether they won or not. She asked Mrs. Mollison to take a message for her to the Duke of Gloucester, third son of the King, now in Melbourne for the centenary celebrations there.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE
(By Frederick Gardner)
(Associated Press Financial Writer)
NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The stock market drifted through another session of extremely narrow fluctuations Saturday, closing the week at about the same level from which it started on Monday.
Week end lassitude pervaded most markets. A further spurt of nearly three cents in the pound sterling and a decline in grains attracted most interest in the absence of worthwhile movements in security prices.
United States government bonds firmed. Otherwise markets gave no perceptible response to President Roosevelt's Executive Order, although his references maintained an air of government credit generally made a favorable impression in financial quarters. Wall Street had focused its attention on his scheduled address before bankers at Washington next Wednesday.
Locked in a rut for more than a week, the share market held little for traders. Volume shrank to 238,740 shares compared with 412,200 last Saturday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 30 selected stocks was only one-tenth of a point higher at 71.8. A week ago it stood at 72.2, having moved in the meanwhile within a range of about one point.
Liquidation in the grain market served to increase caution among traders. Wheat fell 1-4 to 1-1 1/2 cents. A bushel. The May position in Chicago was down to around 91-1/2 cents. Other cereals joined the retreat. The average for 20 selected stocks was unchanged to 20 cents a bale lower.
Strength in the pound coincided with the termination of the gold bloc conference at Brussels, but Wall Street observers were uncertain whether there was any connection. The gold currencies stiffened against the dollar after drifting lower earlier in the week.
Stocks went through routine motions which left most of the important issues virtually unchanged at the finish. U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward and other important shares fluctuated within a range of half a point or less. On the whole, the trade news was not convincing enough to move potential buyers of shares into action.

Purpose Of Little Entente
(A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Here's the why and wherefore of the Little Entente:
Peace treaties after the Great War cut great hunks of territory out of Germany, the Hapsburg Empire of Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Russia. Serbia became Yugoslavia and swelled in size, Rumania increased area and population and Czechoslovakia came into being.
The haunting fear that they might lose their new acquisitions came quickly, so the Yugoslavs, the Rumanians and the Czechoslovaks got together to keep the peace treaties intact, to fight any Hapsburg restoration in Austria or Hungary and to stick up for what they believed their rights.

MONTREAL EXCHANGE
(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
MONTREAL, Oct. 21.—With equipment issues in the vanguard, listings on the Montreal Stock Exchange moved into higher territory during Saturday's short session. While the market advanced in irregular fashion, sales volume was of moderate proportions with approximately 6,200 shares changing hands in the two hours of trading.
Jamaica public service preferred on the first board lot sale since last January jumped ten points to a new high for the year at 110. Banks were strong with Nova Scotia rising two points at 268 and Montreal 1-1/2 points at 203.
National Steel Corp. was the leader of the equipment stocks with a gain of a full point at 16 1/4. Howard Smith preferred established a new high for the year with a gain of 3-4 at 74 3/4 and St. Lawrence Paper preferred rose 7-8 to 12 7-8. International Nickel lost 3-8 at 23 3-4 with Canadian Pacific Railway easing at 12 1-8.

Cutter Fails To Locate Body Of Seaman
(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
DIOBY, N.S., Oct. 20.—Royal Canadian Mounted Police cutter Bay-Hound spent a fruitless day today searching for the body of Austin Garron, 45-year-old Westport seaman, drowned last night in the turbulent waters of "The Rip" near the entrance of Grand Passage which separates Lond and Erie Islands.
Washed overboard last night while attempting to free the wheel rope which had become entangled in the propeller of his craft, Garron was soon lost in a heavy sea. His companion, Edward Thomas, aged 72, was unable to assist because the boat was drifting helplessly because of the propeller trouble.
A friend of theirs, Stephen Morehouse, heard Garron's cries on shore and immediately rushed on some men and went to the rescue, but arrived on the scene too late.

Preferred List Took Profits Probe Bares
(A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—How a "preferred list" glinting with "big names" took $2,200,000 in profits from one of Samuel Insull's companies which later failed was described in the Insull mail fraud trial today.
Participants in a syndicate organized in September 1929 made that much, assistant United States Attorney General Leslie E. Stalter said, by selling stock to the Corporation Securities Company of Chicago in January 1930 at a profit of between 25 and 35 percent on their subscriptions.
Stalter branded the operation "dumping." This development in the case followed evidence yesterday that the Corporation Securities Company shouldered about $40,000,000 of what it called "Insull" securities which Cyrus Eaton, Cleveland capitalist and native of Pugwash, N. S., had acquired in a fight to seize control from the Chicagoan.

Four Wounded In Accidents Near Halifax
(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
HALIFAX, Oct. 20.—Rifles carelessly handled have wounded four people in the vicinity of Halifax this week. Latest victim is Albert Carnell of Rockingham who was badly injured in the foot today when a gun in his hand prematurely discharged while he was hunting seven miles from his home. His three companions carried him out of the woods.
Others injured by rifles this week include Aubrey Pulsifer and Edward Needham, now convalescing in hospital, and John Lancaster, discharged from hospital today.

Capetown Likes All-In Matwork
CAPE TOWN, Oct. 20.—(C.P.)—This South African city is beginning to take its wrestling seriously. It has "gone all-out" for all-in wrestling, as The Argus says. The paper in its general news pages thus describes "this grim sport":
"Two modern men, stripped of the veneer of civilization, sweating and struggling like cave men beneath fierce arc-lights in a roped ring. At the ringside, women screaming hysterically at the referee. Police who leap over the ropes to protect the referee from the attack of the best wrestler. And, for an hour, the scene dominated by an unknown wrestler, a sinister figure in black tights and black hood like a medieval executioner."

Cutter Fails To Locate Body Of Seaman
(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
DIOBY, N.S., Oct. 20.—Royal Canadian Mounted Police cutter Bay-Hound spent a fruitless day today searching for the body of Austin Garron, 45-year-old Westport seaman, drowned last night in the turbulent waters of "The Rip" near the entrance of Grand Passage which separates Lond and Erie Islands.
Washed overboard last night while attempting to free the wheel rope which had become entangled in the propeller of his craft, Garron was soon lost in a heavy sea. His companion, Edward Thomas, aged 72, was unable to assist because the boat was drifting helplessly because of the propeller trouble.
A friend of theirs, Stephen Morehouse, heard Garron's cries on shore and immediately rushed on some men and went to the rescue, but arrived on the scene too late.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
USE THE FINDER
At what is the girl pointing? Why? What of it? A good picture, but uninteresting because it tells no story and fails to explain itself. There is no question, however, about the snapshot of the hunter. It tells a complete story. Its composition is successful.
LISTEN in on any snapshotting beginner as he goes over a fresh batch of prints:
"Boy, look at that! Got that string of trout swell. But say—this head is out of the picture! Now how did I manage to do a crazy thing like that?"
The answer is very simple. The lad taking the picture failed to use the view-finder when he made the shot. He probably saw that the string of fish was in view, but he quite overlooked the fact that the proudly grinning Bill was neatly decapitated.
Most modern cameras have two kinds of view-finders. First, of course, is the familiar reflecting finder—the kind into which you peer from above. Properly shaded, it will give you an accurate idea of what each shot includes. Then there is the "direct" view-finder, mounted on the top or side of the camera. In using it you hold the camera at eye level and sight through two rectangular openings. What you see, the camera will get.
With either or both of these finders there is really little reason for failing to get what you want in a picture. Of course, there are limits, defined by the size and shape of the film and the capacity of the lens. You have to select the most interesting bits of a scene and concentrate on them.
When an artist does this, he "composes" his picture. Many volumes have been written on the subject of composition, but the whole idea may be boiled down to this: A good composition is simply a pleasing arrangement of the elements of a picture, an arrangement that puts the emphasis on the most interesting feature.
A little care in using your view-finder will, almost invariably, give you a well-composed picture. For that is confusing or displeasing, it will warn you that somebody's head is going to be lopped off. It will tell you whether or not the finished picture will tell a story—the story you had in mind when you unlatched the camera.
For "telling a story" is the essence of a good picture. The Chinese have a proverb. "One picture is worth ten thousand words." But the proverb applies only to good pictures.
Many a professional photographer spends hours studying the "view-finder" of his camera before he makes a single shot. His success in business depends on his presenting vivid story-telling pictures. In our snapshotting we have no such weighty considerations. We have only ourselves and a few friends to please. But we can increase that pleasure vastly by pausing, just before we click the shutter, to check up our picture in the view-finder. If it's what we want—fire away! And when the finished pictures come back, we shall certainly not begrudge those few seconds of concentration on the view-finder.
