FORMER HUSBAND CONTESTS WEALTH FORTUNE LEFT TO ISLANDER

Rev. Angus M. McDonald of Caledonia Will Not Get Wealth Without a Struggle—A Sequel to a Former Story in Which a Rich Lady Remembered the Talented Young Prince Edward Island Minister in Whom She had Taken a Great Interest.

RECEIVED

Several months ago The Guardian published an interesting story of the fortune of $300,000 left by Mrs. Doyle of Jacksonville, Fla., to Rev. Angus McDonald, a struggling young divine who lived at one time in Caledonia, P. E. Island, with his parents, but the remainder of the fortune, in 1900, the following from the Boston American is an interesting sequel to the tale:

Andrew J. Sweetser, of Lynn, first husband of Mrs. Abbie R. Dodge, who died recently after leaving her fortune of $800,000 to Rev. Angus M. McDonald, has begun proceedings to have the will broken.

His principal grounds for asking that the money go to the dead woman's family instead of the young minister, is that the foundation of the fortune—something over $35,000—was taken from him without his consent by his wife when she deserted him, a quarter of a century ago.

In Jacksonville, Fla., Mrs. Dodge owned one of the biggest winter hotels, the Windsor. She was known as the greatest hotel woman in the country. Starting with the moderate capital which her first husband says was his she saw it grow to an immense fortune, nearly $1,000,000. Then she died and left it to the young minister whom she had befriended.

Mr. Sweetser said his son, Charles H. Sweetser, of Seattle, Wash., has secured Judge John Wood of Huron, S. D., a prominent jurist in the Northwest, to prosecute his suit. The amount involved makes a bitter contest probable.

WONDERFUL CURE OF SORE HANDS

By Cuticura After the Most Awful Suffering Ever Experienced.

EIGHT DOCTORS And Many Remedies Failed to do a Cent's Worth of Good.

"About five years ago I was troubled with sore hands, so sore that when I would put them in water the pain would very nearly set me crazy, the skin would peel off and the flesh would get hard and break. There would be blood flowing from at least fifty places on each hand. Words could never tell the suffering I endured for three years. I tried everything that I was told to use for fully three years, but could get no relief. I tried at least eight different doctors, but none of them seemed to do me any good, as my hands were as bad when I got through doctoring as when I first began. I also tried many remedies, but none of them ever did me one cent's worth of good. I was discouraged and heart-sore. I would feel so bad mornings when I got up, to think I had to go to work and stand the pain for ten hours, and I often felt like giving up my position. Before I started to work mornings I would have to wrap every finger up separately, so as to try and keep them soft and then wear gloves over the rags to keep the grease from getting on my work. At night I would have to wear gloves in bed. In fact, I had to wear gloves all the time. But thanks to Cuticura, the greatest of all great skin cures. After doctoring for three years, and spending much money, a small box of Cuticura Ointment ended all my sufferings. It's been two years since I used any and I don't know what sore hands are now, and never lost a day's work while using Cuticura Ointment."

FLOWER OF A ROCK FARM.

Abbie Lowell was born in the old farmhouse that still stands on the hillside overlooking the harbor. That was almost seventy years ago, and the house is all of twenty years older than that. It looks like, with its huge chimney, its windows high and small, the worn thresholds over which several generations of Lowell have come and gone. Great corner posts jut out into every room, roughened by ading in the days when houses were built by hand, and there is a wide mouthed fire place of proportions rare even in most distant Maine.

Abbie was the flower of the family. She was a type which seemed out of place on the rocky farm. With maturing years she plumed herself for a long flight into the world which lay beyond the horizon of the granite hills. Many a swain, considered "likely," "made up to her," but she scorned them all.

A young man, a cattle buyer from Bangor, named Andrew J. Sweetser, was a frequent caller at the homestead. He was a shade more of the outside world than the neighbors' boys. He proposed. She accepted and they were married. That was in 1860. Young Sweetser was of an adventurous disposition. He had been to California around the Horn in '48; he had travelled all over the settled part of the country; he had bought and sold cattle.

The Civil War broke out. With his brother Amos young Sweetser followed the Northern army as a sutler. His means increased rapidly. When the conflict came to an end in '65, both he and Amos were well-to-do. He and his wife went West and entered the hotel business.

Success crowned Sweetser's efforts as a landholder—that is, success as it was measured forty years ago, when $10,000 was bigger than a million is to-day. He had a successful hotel in Washington and two in Yankton, S. D. In 1870 he and his wife made their home in Yankton.

The Northern Railroad was being built in the seventies, and he started following its course, establishing hotels and adding to his competence.

Enters here the thread of the second romance, that of Mrs. Sweetser and Horace O. Dodge. Dodge was a boarder at the Merchants' Hotel in Yankton, conducted by Sweetser. He was young, good looking, Mrs. Sweetser was much alone. That Dodge had a wife and two children living did not interfere with their plans. They eloped.

At the home of his two nieces, at 174 Broadway, in Lynn, Mr. Sweetser told the story yesterday.

"Abbie is dead," he said, "and I don't want to say much against her. I was trying to learn where the Great Northwestern was going to make its terminus when she went away with Dodge. When I got back to Yankton I found she had gone with two carloads of furniture and over $35,000. I was so hurt and I had so much pride that I didn't try to find her, or even get her to restore my money."

"One day I heard that she had gone to Jacksonville with Dodge and had bought a hotel with my $35,000, or part of it. I wrote her just once. She didn't send me any answer. After while I got a divorce. Then I heard that she married Dodge. I don't know whether he ever got a divorce from his wife or not."

"In 1883 I was married again, to Miss Pauline Waldron, in Eaton Rapids, Mich. My wife is on a visit to California just now."

DODGE ROBBED HIS WIFE.

"Abbie had one share of punishment for running off with Dodge," said Mr. Sweetser. "He and she were in Boston about ten years ago. She was rich then, and had with her a satchel containing $50,000 in cash and bonds and some valuable diamonds. They were walking along Washington street, and he was carrying the bag. In the crowd she turned to speak to him and found she was alone. She fainted and was taken into the Adams House to recover. When she was all right she told her story, but Dodge was gone. She never saw him nor the $50,000 nor the diamonds again. We heard that he returned to his former wife, and died about five years ago."

ENTER YOUNG PREACHER.

Not far from her great hostelry stood a small church—the Union Congregational—the parish ministered to by a stalwart, fresh faced, lively young man just out of Divinity school, the Rev. Angus M. McDonald.

Young McDonald moved to Bath, Me., from Prince Edward Island, where he was born, in 1879, when he was eleven years old. He went through the Bath High School, Bowdoin College and Andover Seminary. The Jacksonville church was his first pastorate.

Miss Annie McLeod of Boston, daughter of a good family, was the girl whose letters of love had encouraged him during his most trying struggles in his Southern parish. Mrs. Dodge lived somewhat in memory. She recollected her own romance. In her the young clergyman found a ready helper. His salary was so increased that he could afford to support a wife with propriety. The parsonage was properly fitted for a bridal home. He came North in 1877, married Miss McLeod and took her to Jacksonville to share his lot.

In the big Jacksonville fire the church was burned. Mrs. Dodge came to the rescue, and contributed largely to the erection of a new one. Until two years ago things continued in an even tenor. Then Mr. McDonald was offered the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Bar Harbor, Me. He liked his associations in Florida, but the envying climate of the South is never homelike to him whose childhood was spent amid the rigors of Maine, and he elected to accept.

CRUMBS FOR OWN KIND RED. In March, Abbie Lowell Sweetser Dodge went down to the portal of death. She sent for the Rev. Mr. McDonald. He hurried to Jacksonville, prepared her mind for death, prayed for her soul as her breath flickered out and officiated at her funeral. Then he returned to Bar Harbor and resumed his parish duties.

The will of Mrs. Dodge was probated after the usual decent lapse. The young minister gasped when apprised of its contents. She left $5,000 for a monument over her remains. Her sister who was Mrs. Laid, afterwards Mrs. Haley, was given $3,000. Her other sister received $30 a week during her life. Her brother Asaph got nothing—Bucksport Centre people say probably because he didn't need it, for Asaph, too had been "e handed."

There was $3,000 for her nephew, Simon Laid, of Brewer, Me., to be used in trust for his children's education. And three or four other nephews and nieces received jewels or money, making the total of all her bequests except to the Rev. Mr. McDonald, about $25,000. All the rest of the estate, all the money, all the bonds, all the land and the big hotel were left to Mr. McDonald, and by the terms of the testament he became sole executor. It is now in Florida getting familiar with his new estate—his if Mr. Sweetser should be unsuccessful in getting the will set aside.

"Will you set this eye on that which is not? For riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away, as an eagle toward heaven."

OTHER WORLDS.

Our sole knowledge of the people on other worlds and how far the people there differ from our inhabitants, can only be guessed by comparison with our own people on this small sphere of ours. More important to us is a knowledge of ourselves. "KNOW THYSELF" was an old Greek thought. How to take care of one's own body is not so simple as some think; the human mechanism is a wonderful thing and requires watching.

One man who has done more to teach the American people how to care for their bodies than almost any other, is Dr. E. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., the author of the "Common Sense Medical Advice." He says: "It is not the quantity of the food eaten which produces strength and health (for some people can keep strong on a very meagre diet), but it is how much food is absorbed and assimilated by the blood and carried to nourish every organ of the body. It is, therefore, vitally necessary for the body that the stomach be in a healthy state. If disease of the stomach, or what is called 'stomach trouble,' prevents proper nutrition then the heart, liver, lungs, and kidneys do not get proper food—they are not fed on rich red blood, and in consequence, begin to show signs of distress. Outwardly these signs may be pimples and eruptions on skin, pale face, sleepless nights, tired, languid feelings, or, by reason of the nerves not being fed on pure blood, they become starved, and we receive a warning in the pain we call neuralgia. Rheumatism, too, is a blood disease. After years of practice and study Dr. Pierce found that an Allevative Extract, which he named 'Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery,' made from the extracts of several plants, invariably produced a tonic effect upon the system. It helped the process of absorption of the healthy elements in the food and increased the red corpuscles of the blood, as well as eliminated the poisons from the system."

Business is business. No time for hand-aches. Constipation causes them. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure them by easing the passage. Laxative and mild.
