

Tooth Brushes From Over the Sea

Our better classes of tooth brushes are purchased from the greatest English and French makers. We like to sell these brushes, because they are rightly made and each one is guaranteed. They cleanse the teeth properly and give the best satisfaction. We also like to sell a brush that we can hand out to the customer with the understanding that if the bristles fall out or brush proves defective in any way, a new one will be given for the asking.

S. A. MACDONALD'S POETICAL CONTEST WAS DECIDED FRIDAY MORNING

Congratulations to Andrew Mooney, of Peakes Station, Winner of the First Prize Are in Order.

W. P. DOULL AND HENRY SMITH, OF CH'TOWN, WIN SECOND AND THIRD PLACES.

Prince Edward Island's Great Clothing Store Described in Verse—The Prize Winning Poems—The Judges Had No Easy Task to Decide Who Were Entitled to the Prizes.

It will be remembered that a short time ago Mr. S. A. MacDonald proprietor of P. E. Island's Greatest Clothing Store, offered three prizes, first, second, and third, for the best poems setting forth the excellence, prices and other points in connection with his clothing and tailoring business. The competition was open for nearly two months, and the only condition was that the poem should not exceed about sixty lines, and that it should be judged on its advertising strength and its poetical quality. The competition closed on the evening of Thursday, May 7th. A very large number of poems were received from all parts of Prince Edward Island. Those were handed by Mr. McDonald to the judges on the following day, and the latter had no light task in deciding upon the winners. As a matter of fact, many of the poems were of such uniform excellence that selection was therefore made extremely difficult.

The judges however at length decided upon the three poems published below and awarded the prizes as follows:

1st Prize—Andrew Mooney, Peake's Station.
2nd Prize—W. P. Doull, city.
3rd Prize—Henry Smith, city.

The Judges were Messrs. W. L. Cotton, Editor of the Examiner; J. E. B. MacCreedy, Editor of the Guardian; and F. J. Nash, Editor of the Patriot.

Our Island boys, and men likewise
Are in to buy their suits,
Right up the street with flying feet
They march like bold recruits
Some will fancy blue or black
And more will fancy gray,
But all are sure far to secure
A suit from Samuel A.

(Chorus)

There's nae bad luck about the house,
You prosper everywhere,
There's little trouble round your house
If Samuel's goods you wear.

Some folks will say, call in this way,
And buy your clothing here
But pass them by for reasons why,
Their clothing are too dear,
To save a dime don't lose your time
Searching for shoddy ware,

'Twould always pay to see Sam A
Before you deal elsewhere.

(Chorus)

Sam, my friend, you will attend,
And pass the suits around.
Your Irish frieze it takes the prize
From all the stores in town
Your superfine it takes the shine,
Both near and far awa,
To praise your tweed we have no need
The like we never saw.

(Chorus)

With pants so neat and vest complete,
And coat beyond compare,
Your very words would coax the birds
When dressed in Samuel's wear;
Fre Morson won at Cardigan
Upon the stormy day
Brave Walter dressed in Samuel's best,
To face them in the fray.

(Chorus)
There's nae bad luck about the house
You prosper everywhere
There's little trouble round your house
If Samuel's goods you wear.

BY W. P. DOULL.

Would you know whence this commotion
All this talk of selling clothing,
Fine in finish, low in prices,
Prices which were never heard of,
For the goods, in this fair Island?

I will answer, I will tell you:
There's a merchant in our city
Who has come to notice lately
By sheer force of pluck and genius
Who has learned the trick, and does

He, a shrewd and canny Scotchman,
Is an A I clever workman,
And a fine off-handed fellow,
By the name of Sam MacDonald.

Samuel Angus he was christened,
But he says it does not matter
What you choose to style or call him
Only call on him for clothing.

Clothing made by other people,

Any way you choose to take it,
