Motherhood Theme Of "Rockabye"

CONSTANCE BENNETT'S MOST AMBITIOUS DRAMATIC ROLE

In portraying the fascinating temperamental character of Judy Carroll in "Rockabye", Constance Bennett has made a decided dramatic advance. This, coupled with the star's own glamorous personality and "Rockabye" now showing at the Prince Edward gives promise that it will be her most powerful screen vehicle.

"Rockabye" tells of the stirring love career of an actress who is a bewitching combination of gamin and lady. It took the chic somewhat sophisticated and ever-glamorous Miss Bennett to prove what theologians, moralists and psychologists often have failed to prove—that a woman's primary hunger is for motherhood; and that no measure of fame can compensate her for a failure to satisfy her hunger.

Judy, as portrayed by Constance Bennett stands forth a great character, a woman in the romances sparkling with wit, courage and compassion; yet with a slip of a girl, pretty badly beaten and crushed.

No comment on "Rockabye" could be complete that did not pay tribute to the splendid acting of Joel McCrea as the playwright, Jobyna Howell as Judy's mother and Paul Lukas.

Don't miss this vivid human picture today or Wednesday.

"Sailor Be Good"

A ROLLICKING RIB-TICKLING COMEDY

A roaring, rollicking, rib-tickling comedy of gnomes, girls and fighters was unfolded on the screen of the Capitol yesterday in a laugh-packed spicy tale, "Sailor Be Good." A splendid comedy cast headed by Jack Oakie, Vivienne Osborne and George E. Stone; a wealth of hilarious situations; and dialogue.

Oakie has never been seen in more laughable form than as Jonesy, Smart-Alec, wise-cracking sailor with a roving eye for women, and a punchout for fights. Miss Osborne proves her versatility as Red, waterfront girl friend of sailors and Jonesy's particular. She is equally appealing here as in her dramatic and musical comedy roles.

Laughs brighten each foot of the film in the picture. As Jonesy's sailor sweetheart, Red continually keeps him in trim for his forthcoming boxing match with Ratigan, her ex-boy friend. Jonesy hires Red's supervision, and goes on a spree winding up married to Kay Whitney, society debutante who developed a crush for Jonesy when she saw him fight. Red's efforts to bring the gob to his senses; Jonesy's fight manager's attempts to put him in shape, and Jonesy's life among the millionaires with Kay provide more side-splitting laughs and spicy dialogue.

Business Booms For Birmingham

Vehicle Trades
 BIRMINGHAM, England, June 5.—(C.P.)—Birmingham, the centre of the motor and cycling industries, is experiencing a boom. Staffs are being increased and factories extended. In a recent week the output of an automobile factory created a record in the history of the firm, while recent increases in the number of employees have raised the pay-roll to 14,000—also a record.

Other firms also are experiencing an increased demand. An official of another motor car company said: "We are turning out considerably more cars than last year; and only trouble is to meet the demand."

Even greater than the demand for new cars is that for pedal cycles. In this industry again all records have been broken within the past few weeks. An official of a company, which is the largest firm in the world manufacturing bicycles, stated that in one week orders for 27,000 cycles were received, representing a 100 per cent increase up on the previous record week. The staff of this factory has been increased 50 per cent and is working overtime to cope with the demand.

Scientists Master Wheat Disease

WINNIPEG, June 5.—Wheat-stem rust, most dreaded disease of the prairie wheat belt and constant fear of Western Canadian farmers, has been mastered. Wheats highly resistant to disease have been produced and are perfectly satisfactory from the twofold standpoint of quality and agronomic behavior.

With the distribution of these wheats the farmer need no longer entertain the constant fear of the warm, moist July days so favorable to the development of "black" rust. No longer need he stand helplessly by and watch his most promising wheat fields dry and fade under the attack of this voracious fungus.

At least six wheats of the 33 strains which have been made the subject of search co-operative tests are suitable for distribution to farmers and efforts will now be concentrated on increasing the seed of those wheats as rapidly as possible. And a liberal allowance for the total cost of developing this rust-resistant wheat would be well under $1,000,000, a small price to pay for farmer's security.

Losses incurred through wheat-stem rust have been tremendous. The average annual loss to wheat in Manitoba and Saskatchewan during the past eight years alone, as calculated by the Winnipeg Research Laboratory, was $35,438,000, 15.5 of each year's crop, or 37-39,000 bushels. Average annual loss to oats in the two provinces for the years 1930, 1931 and 1932 was $2,224,000, 11.1 per cent. of 13,525,000 bushels.

Wheat growers throughout the world will welcome the news that plant breeders now have developed a satisfactory rust-resistant wheat. Research workers of the Dominion of Canada will likewise rejoice that this outstanding contribution to the main branch of agriculture in Canada has been made by Canadian workers in Canadian institutions.

A report written by the associate committee on field-crop diseases, the group of scientists organized under the National Research Council of Canada, engaged on this problem reads:

"The committee, after considering the progress reports of the plan breeders, the results of the co-operative tests and the report of the milling and baking chemists, feels safe in making the statement that highly-disease-resistant wheats have now been produced that are perfectly satisfactory from the standpoint of quality and agronomic behavior.

"It seems that out of 33 strains in the co-operative tests of 1932, at least six are suitable for distribution to farms, but only small quantities of seed are available at present and it will take two seasons to increase the quantity available to the required point. . . . Every effort will be made from now on to increase the seed of these wheats as rapidly as possible."

Approximately 5,000 test plots will be required to perform the agronomic tests on the strains to be tested this year. The figure for the same test in 1932 was 5,328. Probably 5,000 test loaves of bread will be baked and examined. An attempt is to be made during 1933 tests also to evaluate threshing and shattering characteristics and seed appearance at more points than was the case during 1932.

Milling and baking tests on these prospective rust-resistant wheats were of a most exhaustive character. Co-operation of the milling and baking chemists was secured. As the attack on rusts has gathered momentum, the attack on other field crop diseases has been widened. Root-rot, ergot and loose and covered smuts offer a field rich in possibilities sufficient to occupy the attention of the committee for many years.

HENS SPEEDING UP PRODUCTION

MONCTON, N. B., June 5.—Technology has reached the henroosts in the Maritimes. At Dalhousie, in New Brunswick, a hen has taken to laying two-yolked and four-yolked eggs and she has knocked her barnyard associates all cock-eyed. It is only recently that she branched out into quantity production. The four-yolked egg weighed exactly half a pound, was three and seven-eighths of an inch long and eight inches in circumference. It was sent to the Dominion Experimental Farm Branch experts at Ottawa for examination. Hearing of the feat of the New Brunswick hen, a bantam in Truro thought she would go one better. At noon, on examination, her nest was empty. Three and a half hours later the bantam hen was sitting on two eggs and while the surprised attendant was staring at the two eggs the hen produced a third. All three eggs were full size and normal in every way.

Barges To Race In Championship On River Thames

LONDON, June 5.—(C.P.)—The art of growing old gracefully and of showing a sporting world that the claims of sport are not the monopoly of youth will be demonstrated on June 17 when coaster, bow-sprit and stayall barges take part in the race for the championship of the Thames. The course is from Lower Hope Point to the Mouse Lightship and back to Gravesend, a distance of almost 60 miles. Most of these representatives of an industry whose genealogy goes back to the 14th century are in the prime of barge life, which records show, in one case at least, is 130 years.

Of those who earn their living on the river, the bargemen are remarkable for the small number of casualties they suffer compared with the great risks they run. Whether they are groping their way among the miscellaneous craft in the Pool or tacking to and fro the river amid a procession of steamers in the lower reaches, the masters appear to have nerves of steel to overcome the hazards they take. On to the shore they almost steer before turning their craft about to shoot diagonally across, their massive russet mainsails full, with the waters washing the scuppers on the leeward side. The remark that they can "hug a bight and shun a pint" is not difficult to comprehend by those who see them at work; and the bargemen's jest that they can get anywhere after a heavy fall of dew can be appreciated when they are seen to come to anchor on the shallow shores in the estuary.

For the last fortnight or more before the race the barges go through a severe preparation, and their crews work hard to achieve the degree of quickness required through the contest. There is no flying start as in yacht racing. All the barges are anchored in a line, and at the signal to go the winches screech until the anchors break the surface and are safely stowed. Then the master's task begins; orders are shouted and instantly obeyed; the massive mainsail unfolds from the great spirt like the draping of a theatre curtain as he guides his barge into the wind. Arms stoop up and down before the mainmast as more canvas is heaved above.

A beautiful scene meets the eye as this miniature fleet of river and coasting barges, the latter carrying a greater area of canvas, sweeps to windward, the blackleaded hulls giving relief to the muddy waters which are whipped into a foam of dirty white as the barges cut their way through the broadening lane of the river past the Nore and onwards to the Mouse Lightship. There they wheel around almost in their own length, and the most exciting part of the race begins on the return for home. All the arts of legitimate sailing are brought into use; the tacking and the blanketing as one competitor after another sees and seizes an opportunity for advantage. Round the tortuous bends of the river they glide, until at length the final lap marked by the Owens buoy brings them into Gravesend Reach. A few minutes more and victory is won amid the shrieking sirens of the tugs and ships.

Griffiths conducted an impressive service at the home where a large number had gathered, as a last token of respect to one so sincerely loved by all. The interment took place in the Belfast Church Cemetery, the pastor carrying out the committal service. Members of the Presbyterian Church choir rendered appropriate hymns during the service in the home.

Fund to Rescue Closing Theatre

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)
 CAMBRIDGE, England, June 5.—Danger that the Cambridge Festival Theatre, chief of England's art theatres, would be forced to close in June appears to have been averted by prospect of a guarantee scheme to make possible another three-years run.

Founded by Terence Gray seven years ago, the theatre has achieved fine results, and has marked a place for itself in the life of the university town. In his selection of plays Mr. Gray has admittedly considered his own views in advancement of art rather than public pleasure of the movement. The financial reward has not been liberal. Mr. Gray has now tired of the enterprise, and there was fear the theatre would be closed. However, Joseph Gordon MacLeod, who has been second only to Mr. Gray in supporting the theatre, has come forward with a 4,000 pounds guarantee scheme to secure another three years run. A considerable portion of the sum already has been promised, and a special appeal is being made to the university to supply the balance.

Roller Skates Latest Craze

NEW YORK, Jun 4.—(C.P.)—With the collapse of the jig-saw puzzle industry, early summer has brought a new "craze" to Manhattan. Along the Mall in Central Park, even along upper Fifth Avenue and other stately thoroughfares, may be seen young women and young men on roller skates.

Since the new mode of entertainment was inaugurated a few weeks ago by a group of debutantes who said they were bored, it has become "smart" to skate. "Tea skates" are held in Central Park Casino, where in addition to displaying their skill in making intricate figures on a floor especially laid for skating, young women display the latest thing in skating togs.

Leading Fifth Avenue shops have every variety of smart skating costume, ranging all the way from little white linen shorts, coming half way to the knees, and worn with a dark "fascist" blouse and Alpine hat, to the more conservative sweater, cardigan and skirt combination. There are also the short knee-length and very-flared knitted skirts, intended for the serious skater who has learned a few stunts. A pique headband appears to be the correct headwear.

New types of skates have been introduced, prominent among which is the "stream line" model. This skate has only two wheels, placed at each end of a long ski-like steel blade which extends an inch or two beyond the shoe at each end.

ONCE RICH, DIES POOR

Horatio Bottomley, one of the most amazing figures of modern England—Editor, silver-tongued orator, millionaire, convict, pauper—died in a free ward of Middlesex hospital, London, May 26. Bottomley, "the man who might have been prime minister," died behind a screen which sheltered him from the stares of his fellow charity patients. Bottomley rose from an office boy's position to a millionaire, was sent to penitentiary for embezzlement and finally became a pauper.

DUKE OF YORK PRAISES SON TO FATHER

An anxious father confronted the Duke of York and asked nervously, "Is my son giving you satisfaction, sir?"

The Duke was visiting casting works of a large British firm and his interrogator was an elderly man working at a bench in his shirt sleeves.

"Who is your son?" the Duke asked.

"Your under-butler, sir?" the man replied, and the Duke smiled.

"Are you Jerram's father?" he asked. "Well I can assure you he is quite satisfactory."

Mr. Jerram's face lit up. "Oh thank you, sir," he said.

"Your son is not taking after you in the matter of work is he?" the Duke asked Mr. Jerram.

"He began learning my job," said Mr. Jerram, "but he got a craving to travel, so he went into service."

Such was one of the many humorous touches which marked the end of the Duke's tour in Derbyshire.

DEBORAH'S RUBBER DIET COSTS TOO MUCH MONEY SO SHE GETS EXTRA FARE

DENVER, Colo., June 5.—There were a lot of miles as a cart hauler left in Deborah, a Denver bread company's mare, but her sharp teeth were a menace to motor transportation and she's nipped her way into an easy, clover-field life of retirement.

Deborah developed such an appetite for rubber that she often left a trail of flat tires along her route. At the direction of police she was muzzled, but soon learned how to slip the nasal straight-jacket.

Hence the rubberless pasturage from now on!

Washington Post Sold At Public Auction

(Associated Press)
 WASHINGTON, June 5.—The Washington Post, for 56 years one of the outstanding daily newspapers in the United States capital, was sold today at public auction for $825,000. The successful bidder was George E. Hamilton, Jr., an attorney representing an undisclosed principal whose name will not be made public for several days.

The Post was ordered sold after the International Paper Company, a creditor, had obtained the appointment of a receiver. George E. Fraser, counsel for McLean before he was removed by court order, was present but did not participate in the auction. McLean is now in Montreal.

He was able to make an unusual number of calls and as usual he found many who were prepared with a package of Salada Tea in their possession, when he called.

Mr. Dugan is again on the march today, so he prepared when he called, to show him a package of Salada and receive the reward of one dollar for your opinion.

INCREASED BUSINESS RECALLS TELEGRAPH OPERATORS TO WORK

MONTEREAL, Que., June 5.—Telegraph business handled by Canadian National Telegraphs has increased to such an extent that it has been found necessary to recall seventeen of its employees who were previously out of work on account of the depressed state of the business world. Coupled with this are other signs of the increasing upward trend. These are: an increase in the net revenue from exploitation of lines and equipment; increase in the number of private wires contracted for; more stock market tickers installed. The first fortnight of May showed an all-round increase over the same period of last year and there are definite signs of a further increase according to telegraph officials.
