See Loop-Hole In Security Of Secret Ballot

OTTAWA, Nov. 16 - (CP) - A report tabled in the Commons today suggests that there has been a theoretical loop-hole for more than 40 years in regulations designed to secure secrecy of the ballot.
The report was written by Chief Justice J. T. Brown of Saskatchewan King's Bench Court who investigated alleged irregularities in the voting in Regina City constituency during the Federal election last June.
Chief irregularity was the appearance of small carbon numbers on 40 of the ballots.
The report, along with recommendations by the chief electoral officer, Nelson Castonguay, was tabled by Speaker Ross Macdonald.
Mr. Castonguay urged an amendment to election regulations to plug the gap. He said poll numbers should no longer be written on the back of ballot counterfoils during voting.
It was these written numbers which were reproduced on other ballots and made it theoretically possible to tell how voters cast their ballots.
Chief Justice Brown said the black surface of counterfoils can act as carbon paper, reproducing the poll numbers on other ballots if a ballot-book was used as a writing pad.
A check of these carbon numbers against the poll book in which a record is kept of the order in which people vote in any poll-could be used to find out how a person voted.
The present ballot design was adopted more than 40 years ago when the first was put on the coun-terfoil to make sure voters marked the ballot in the right place. The printing is the same on all ballots.
The numbers were not noticed, however, in any other constituency.
They were found for the first time in a recount of the Regina election by Judge B. D. Hogarty.
The Chief Justice said he found no evidence of an actual violation of secrecy in Regina City.
