MUSLIN AND LACE GOWNS.

Pale Green Muslin is Very Smart Elaborate Styles.

Muslin and lace gowns really deserve a page to themselves. A pale green muslin has bunches of orange pomegranates on it and is a complete mass of tuckings, shirtings, etc. A very charming addition is a pelerine of hand worked lawn bordered by green silk fringe. The waist of this frock is enriched by a band of orange panne, which, although it does not sound like

WHITE MULL GOWN.

A very summery fabric, runs taffeta a close second in the matter of trimmings.

A very smart gown seen at the races recently was of Limerick lace over an accordion plaited white chiffon underdress, the lace held across with ropes of chenille and tiny jet and paste buckles. The hat intended to go with this was of pale green straw. For trimming it had a single mauve ostrich feather.

Some very smart girls are appearing in fine white silk muslin or mousseline de sole made with a big fichu and a much befouled skirt. After all there are not many ways of making up muslin. To look well it must be made rather fussily. Severe lines are distinctly out of place.

Soft, semitransparent fabrics are ideal for summer and evening gowns, and a most charming effect is obtained by using two or three harmonious colors in tulle or chiffon over a foundation of pale satin. A soft pink satin, first veiled with a pinkish gray chiffon and again with a silvery gray, gives a misty pastel effect which is both dainty and uncommon.

A dainty gown of sheer white mull trimmed with lace is shown in the illustration. JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Smart and Simple Gowns—Dainty Hand Painted Muslins.

A very smart yet simple French frock is in a periwinkle blue cloth edged with a cream lace application outlined with black and white chenille braid. This is made in the form of a tunic fastening with early Victorian buttons and finished with a black panne belt, with straps of embroidery decorating the full, rather round skirt, which barely touches the ground all around.

In direct contrast to a costume of this sort there are some glorious hand painted muslins on a silky ground. Pompadour designs are of course the favorites, and their beauty is much enhanced by the addition of little coats, either in very fine old fashioned lawn or some real lace. The skirts in such cases are accordion plaited or finely gauged, and most of them are made with a founce starting below the knees to give the necessary fullness.

The muslins this year are works of art, consisting of masses of tuckings, shirtings, laces and even fine embroidery.

The hat of white, coarse straw trimmed with a single feather is rich, simple and economical, for it may be worn with many gowns.

The hat in the picture is of pale pink chiffon trimmed with roses of a darker shade. JUDIC CHOLLET.
