TALMAGE'S SERMON

One's Reputation Must Not be Based on Idea of

The Prodigal Sons Big Brother Discussed—Lack of Sympathy for Fallen.

In this discourse Dr. Talmage pleads for a hearty reception to all those who have done wrong and want to get back, while the unsympathetic and self-righteous and excommunicated; text, Luke xv, 8, "And he was angry and would not go in." Many times have I been asked to preach a sermon about the elder brother of the parable. I received a letter from Canada saying, "Is the elder son of the parable so unsympathetic and so cold that he is not worthy of recognition?" The fact is that we ministers pursue the younger son. You can hear the flapping of his rags in many a sermon breeze and the cringing of the pious for which he was unsuccessful contestant. I confess that it has been difficult for me to train the camera obscure upon the elder son of the parable. I could not get a negative for a photograph. There was not enough light in the gallery, or the chemicals were too poor, or the sitter moved in the picture. But now I think I have him, not a side face or a three-quarters or the mere bust but a full length portrait as he appears to me. The father in the parable of the prodigal had nothing to brag of in his two sons. The one a rake and the other a curl. I find no being admirable in the dissoluteness of the one, and I find nothing attractive in the acid sobriety of the other. The one goes down over the larboard side, and the other goes down over the starboard side; but they both go down.

From all the windows of the old homestead bursts the minstrelsy. The floor quakes with the feet of the rustics, whose dance is always vigorous and resounding. The neighbors have heard of the return of the younger son from his wanderings, and they have gathered together. The house is full of congratulations. I suppose the tables are loaded with luxuries, not only the one kind of meat mentioned, but its concomitants. "Clap!" go the cymbals, "Thrum!" go the harps, "Click!" go the chalices, up and down go the feet inside, while outside is a most sorry spectacle.

The senior son stands at the corner of the house, a frigid phlegmatic. He has just come in from the fields in very substantial apparel. Seeing some wild exhilarations around the old mansion, he asks of a servant passing by with a goat-skin of wine on his shoulder what all the fuss is about. One would have thought that, on hearing that his younger brother had got back, he would have gone into the house and rejoiced, and if he were not conscientiously opposed to dancing, that he would have joined the oriental schottish. No, there he stands. His brow lowers; his face darkens; his lips curl with contempt. He stamps the ground with indignation; he sees nothing at all to attract. The odors of the feast, coming out on the air, do not sharpen his appetite. The lively music does not put any spring into his step. He is in a terrible pout. He criticises the expense, the injustice and the morals of the entertainment. The father rushes out bareheaded and coaxes him to come in. He will not go in. He solds the father. He goes into a pasquinade against the younger brother, and he makes the most uncomely scene. He says: "Father, you put a premium on vagabondism. I staid at home and worked on the farm. You never made a party for me; you didn't so much as kill a kid. That wouldn't have cost half as much as the calf; but this scapegrace went off in fine clothes, and he came back not fit to be seen, and what a time you make over him! He breaks your heart, and you pay him for it. That calf to which we have been giving extra food all these weeks, wouldn't be so fat and sleek if I had known to what use you were going to put it. That vagabond deserves to be cow-hided instead of banqueted. Veal is too good for him." That evening while the younger son sat telling his father about his adventures and asking about what had occurred on the place since his departure, the senior brother goes to bed
