LIBERAL PRO-GERMANISM

Our esteemed contemporary is evidently so ashamed of the Liberal naval record that it refrains from using its editorial columns to discuss the question. In its news columns, however, it ventures to remark that at a later date it "will place before its readers . . . the truth about the Liberal attitude in regard to the Empire's defence, naval and otherwise."

While our contemporary is cogitating we might give it a little assistance in collecting its scattered thoughts on the question of defence. Just let us see what Sir Wilfrid Laurier's attitude was on the question of Imperial warfare.

On April 10, 1910, when he was Premier and had the destinies of Canada in his hands, he was questioned by Sir Robert Borden, then Leader of the Opposition, as to the attitude Canada would adopt in the event of the Mother Country being at war. Sir Robert asked whether or not a Canadian warship meeting an enemy of Great Britain on the sea, would fight, and Sir Wilfrid replied:

"I do not know that she would fight, I do not know that she should fight either. She would not fight until the Government by which she is commissioned have decided whether she should go into the war."

On December 12, 1912, he said:

"When England is at war we are at war, but it does not follow that because we are at war we are actually in the conflict."

That was the remarkable doctrine preached by Laurier only a couple of years ago. He has found out by experience that it is not a doctrine that commends itself to the people of Canada. He has seen that with the outbreak of war Canada is not only at war, but in the conflict, in it with all her resources of men and money, in it to the last dollar and the last man. He has seen that this was done without question and without hesitation, but as the expression of the unanimous will of the people. To-day, in the face of all this, he dares not confront an audience in Canada with his separatist doctrine.

Sir Wilfrid was not only blind to the war-like policy being pursued by Germany, he assumed the character of a German apologist. So late as January 19, last year Sir Wilfrid said in the House of Commons:

"The German peril has disappeared, if, indeed, there was ever such thing. . . . The climate is moderate and the sky is clear."

The Patriot promises to "tell the truth" about the Liberal attitude in regard to the Empire's defence, and we ask: What could we have looked for in the present crisis from a party whose leader on February 27 last year made this statement on the floor of the House of Commons?—

"There is one fact in the situation which I think shows that there is no intention on the part of Germany to attack England; and that fact is the German Emperor. The German Emperor is undoubtedly one of the great men of the present age. By intellect, by character, by moral fibre, he has shown himself wonderfully endowed. In the first years of his reign some of his utterances sent a shiver through those who had the peace of the world at heart. Many believed that he was, perhaps, hankering for the glamour of military glory. But, as he advanced in years, and as crisis after crisis came his patient influence was always directed towards peace. And the day may come when, like his illustrious uncle, our late King, he may be called the peacemaker."

Why, Lord Haldane has lost the Woolsack and been driven into private life, for having five years ago expressed pro-German sentiments not half as strong.

RECRUITING

Recruiting in our sister provinces has not been any more brisk than in Prince Edward Island. A St. John exchange of the 5th complains that "only two recruits presented themselves for enlistment yesterday and the interest in the campaign seems to have fallen off." So far the 55th Battalion has about 700 men at Sussex, but 250 of these have been drafted for immediate overseas duty and will likely go forward at any time. This means that about 600 more men must be secured in order to bring the battalion up to strength. The officers in charge of the recruiting in St. John expected to secure at least 170 men in that city, but the number has been considerably short of that.

Conditions at Sussex are reported particularly favorable to the training of men and the officers of the regiment have pointed out that the men must be secured immediately if they are to be properly trained for work at the front.

We understand there is promise of a considerable addition to the Prince Edward Island-recruits in the near future but no time should be lost as every day's delay means only the addition of greater difficulties. Those whose purpose enlisting should do so at once.

COSTLY LIBERAL DELEGATIONS

In the carrying on of a Government, just as in the carrying on of a progressive business, travelling and deputations are essential. Every Government must incur these expenditures, and the difference between a successful and unsuccessful Government is in the extent of the value received for the outlay.

The Liberals were very prolific in deputations to Ottawa and elsewhere, spending in 12 years no less than $16,402.12—or an average of $1,366.84 per annum—for this purpose.

The Conservative Government for the three complete years of its term has spent $2,1839.69—or an average of $946.53—on deputation expenses. Here we have a net average reduction per annum of $420.31 on deputations. It must be borne in mind that the Liberals had to borrow the money to provide for their deputations.

Now what were the results of these deputations, and what benefit accrued to the Province therefrom?

LIBERAL RECORD.

For the total expenditure of $16,402.12 the Liberals can point to the Hillsboro Bridge—for which the Province has been saddled with an annual rental of $9,750. That is all—nothing more.

CONSERVATIVE RECORD.

For a total expenditure of $2,839.60 the Conservative Government can show:

- Car Ferry System, valued at $10,000,000.
- Annual Subsidies, $126,000.
- Control of Oyster Areas and the revenue therefrom.
- Reduction of Night Telegrams from 30c. for 10 words to 30c. for 50 words.
- A new Cable between the Island and the Mainland.
- And many other benefits that need not now be enumerated.

These facts speak for themselves and the moral does not require to be laboured.

The present Government is a practical and efficient institution, which spends money only to get beneficial results. The Liberals were unbusiness-like and inefficient and spent money only to land an annual incubus of some $10,000 on the revenues of the Province.

HOW ENGLAND FELT

Papers received recently from England contain reports showing what intense indignation was aroused in the old land by the sinking of the Lusitania.

The Liverpool Meat Importers' Association forwarded to the Lord Mayor the following petition:—"We, being all ratepayers of the city of Liverpool, regarding as we do with horror and abhorrence the recent barbaric acts of the German nation in the prosecution of their warfare waged not only against the fighting forces, but against non-combatants, women and children, hereby petition your lordship to summon immediately a town's meeting of this city for the purpose of demanding of the Government the immediate internment of all alien enemies and of all naturalized Germans, Austrians, and Turks."

At a German restaurant in the neighborhood of Lime Street, London it was remarked as usual that the day after the disaster the menus were all in German. Some of the waiters pretended that they could speak nothing but German though customers had often heard them speaking very good English. Drinks were served on little felt mats bearing German inscriptions, and German was spoken on all sides. All the British customers present were deploring the Lusitania horror. On the other hand, the "naturalized" Germans were in the highest spirits. At a certain table a British customer rose and suggested that it would be fitting to speak English. A "naturalized" German answered that perhaps the conversation over which they were so much amused might be distressful to any Englishmen who had relatives addicted to Transatlantic travel. A roar of laughter followed from the "naturalized," customers and one of them deliberately spat in the face of an Englishman, saying, "Excuse me, but the joke of the whole business makes me laugh beyond control, and I could not help that accident." There were at the time about twenty British customers, and sixty to eighty "naturalized" persons. The trouble lasted about ten minutes. At the end of that time there was not a German picture or advertisement left on the walls, and there was not a "naturalized" man in the place. No great damage was done to the restaurant though in their haste to keep important business appointments some of the naturalized customers may have turned over a few tables and broken a plate or two.

A remarkable incident took place at the Broadway Theatre, Hammersmith, while a Lusitania film was being shown. At part of the film showing the bodies being carried through the streets two Germans in the centre of a crowded audience began to laugh, and audibly remarked, "It serves them right." The entire house rose, and the manager had the greatest difficulty in preventing the men being badly hurt. As it was they were severely punished.

At the Manningham Mills, Bradford, there was an organized demonstration against a small number of work people of German birth employed in the mills. It was resolved that unless they were dismissed there would be a general strike, and the directors decided to accede to the demand.

NOTES

Boys of 16 and 17 are being mobilized in the Austrian Tyrol, according to news that comes by way of Switzerland. The fact is not surprising, as every big war has seen a similar state of affairs. In the United States Civil War, for example, there were towards the end thousands of boys in their teens in the ranks of the fighters, and drummer boys of 10 or 12 years of age were not unknown. The Dual Monarchy may not quite have reached such a stage as yet, but the time is surely coming unless the war collapses. The power whose quarrel caused the world upheaval is paying a terrible price in the blood of its manhood.

300,000 MEN

London Times of May 20 inserts the following letter from Lord Kitchener:—

War Office, Whitehall, S.W.

I have said that I would let the country know when more men were wanted for the war. The time has come and I now call for 300,000 recruits to form new armies.

Those who are engaged on the production of war material of any kind should not leave their work. It is to men who are not performing this duty that I appeal.

KITCHENER.

TREE-TOP MORNINGS.

How I like tree-top mornings in the early early spring!
There's a steady sound roaring,
Like a score of rivers pouring,
Or a hundred giants snoring,
Or a thousand birds up-roaring,
There's a rattle as of battle and a sort of splendid swing
Of the branches and the curtains and almost of everything.
Oh, I love the tree-top mornings in the early, early spring!

Oh, what fun on tree-top mornings in the early early spring,
When the wind is loud as thunder,
And it snags the boughs asunder,
And it lifts you up from under,
Just to run zigzag and wonder

At the hurry and the scurry that such windy mornings bring!
At the flapping and the slapping of the clothes-line on the wing!
Oh, I love the tree-top mornings in the early, early spring!
