RACE RIOTS RESULTING FROM THE FIGHT.

There are nine or ten millions of white woman, and in too many cases the mere suspicion of such a crime, exposed the black man to death by hanging, shooting or fire at the hands of the mob.

It is to be observed that some of the older of these colored people were formerly enslaved, while the parents, grandparents or earlier ancestors of the majority of them all had been in a condition of servitude.

With their past condition of servitude and ignorance these people were largely untrained for the voting franchise. They felt and were made to feel their own inferiority.

This recital is merely intended to show the bearing which the recent prize fight and its result have upon the race problem in the United States.

The first feeling among the negro population was one of exultation that a black man had whipped a white man in the presence of thousands of spectators.

In Canada there is no such danger, but on moral grounds, and especially because the picture theatres cater very largely to the young, it seems most undesirable that the fight pictures should be presented.

Not long ago Chief Justice Sifton of Alberta, a brother of Hon. Clifford Sifton, resigned his high position and accepted the Premiership of that Province, with the apparent object of harmonising conflicting elements in the divided Liberal party there.

JUDGES WHO RE-ENTER PUBLIC LIFE.

Not long ago Chief Justice Sifton of Alberta, a brother of Hon. Clifford Sifton, resigned his high position and accepted the Premiership of that Province, with the apparent object of harmonising conflicting elements in the divided Liberal party there.

One can sympathise with the opinion that it might be better that the judiciary and the political administration of the country should be kept separate as far as possible; that the Judges of the land should not look for promotion either in the judiciary or out of it.

It might be better, as we have said, were it otherwise, but the people at large have not asked, nor have the Legislatures in their wisdom restricted the choice of the people in that regard as to whom they shall select for political candidates.

AS TO REFORM OF THE SENATE.

Periodically the question of Senate reform comes up in Canada, is discussed for a time and then laid away. During the term from 1873 to 1878 while the Liberal party were in power for the first time, the Government was hampered by a Senate strongly partisan and Conservative.

Reform of the Senate became a Liberal watchword and battle cry in those days. It was embodied in the famous Liberal platform of 1893 and was kept prominently to the front or frequently occur, and for obvious reasons. Few Judges would care to resign, and some of them would perhaps feel it improper to resign and accept a political nomination, either of their own motion, or when solicited publicly or privately to do so.

In any case the legal right to do so exists, and it has been exercised by Judges, who in some cases favored the Liberal party and in other cases allied themselves with the Conservative party. Sir Oliver Mowat was an early and conspicuous instance, and became a most successful political leader after some years spent on the Bench.

The situation, therefore, is this: if it is wrong, or improper, or against sound public policy for a Judge to give up his position on the Bench, both parties seem to have been guilty of this impropriety, or impropriety, or wrong. The obvious remedy would be to enact a law that would prevent such things being done.

in the political discussions of the time till the victory of 1896 gave the Liberals the appointing power. In the meantime death was busy among the old men of the Red Chamber. Vacancies and new appointments came thick and fast until there were as many Liberals as Conservative in the Senate. Since then the same thing has been going on until the Upper House has become three-fourths Liberal—quite as much Liberal in complexion and membership as it was Conservative fifteen years ago.

the appointment on the ground of party service and other qualifications. And it naturally occurs to the party leaders that it may be well to store up a goodly majority, after the manner of corn in Egypt against the lean years.

Reform of the Senate is not easy, except by making non-partisan or independent appointments and that itself is not easy. The Senate really ought to be an independent, semi-judicial and non-partisan body.

It is interesting to learn from the Manitoba Liberal papers just now that "Robin is on the run," and from the Conservative press that the Rob in Government is about to be triumphantly vindicated at the polls.

The newspaper battle over the Canadian election has begun. The examiner hints that the Administration "hoary and careless" and "far-seeing in office" has brought the public service to a "deplorable condition."

THE SAVING HABIT.

Commercial reports prove that eighty per cent of men engaged in business inside of twenty years have fifteen per cent of their original capital.

It is not what men make, but what they save that creates a cash fund to protect their families in the event of their death, and for themselves in old age.

We are creatures of habit. Get the saving habit early in life. Don't wait until tomorrow, next week, or next month to begin to save, but begin today.

Mr. Wm. Buchanan of Belfast, P. E. I., presented her husband with a beautiful baby boy last week. When it is related that seventeen little babies have come to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan, it is a very wonderful and happy event indeed.
