The HOUSEWIFE and HER ACTIVITIES

CAUSE

He can but love the morning who has known The rims of hills grown silver with the light That breaks across the dark skies of the night. Or love hot afternoons who once has seen The whole world blazing in a field of green. He can but love the evening who can say: I once saw herons spread their wings and fly Into a blue and dusk-filled summer sky. He can but love the day who's lived a day. Edward J. Fitzgerald.

FOR EYELASHES

To improve growth of eyebrows and lashes, try a mixture of one part castor oil to two parts of greases. Apply with an eyelash brush at night, and in the daytime after you have put on your make-up. There are various excellent preparations on the market for making the eyelashes grow.

A window which faces the wall of another building and gets no sunlight, may be given the effect of sunshine if properly curtained. Try hanging a glass or casement curtain of copper silk rayon gauze.

STAR GAZING A FINE PUZZLE GAME

Life may well exist on Mars, says Dr. Helen Sawyer Hogg, Toronto, one of Canada's three women astronomers.

There is oxygen there, though it is only 1,000th of the content of our air. In their summer, which is twice as long as ours, the popular ice caps melt. Dr. Hogg stated.

The only other planet in our solar system on which physical conditions for life existed was Venus, which has so much cloud around it that it was impossible to pierce it with a telescope. She thought it possible there might be other solar systems like our own.

To Dr. Helen Hogg, who has just come from the Empire's second largest observatory at Victoria, B. C., to the largest Empire telescope, the Dunlap memorial, at Richmond Hill, Ont., her work is a "puzzle-game" and finding the answers is the big kick she gets out of life, according to an interviewer in The Toronto Daily Star.

THE COOK'S CORNER

BROILED STEAK

You have no idea how delicious a steak done this way can be. Broil a rump steak—it must be thick—until it is pink right through and crisp outside. To get this result you must turn the steak frequently. As soon as it is done, season with salt and butter. Arrange some small round lettuce leaves on a platter, add a cup, and in this lettuce cup place the following mixture:—Two tablespoonfuls of whipped cream and three tablespoonfuls of prepared horseradish mixed with three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. This dish should be served with split bananas sautéed in hot butter.

A NEW SWEET

It's just that "something different" about this sweet which makes it popular.—2 eggs, 1/4 teaspoonful salt, 2 ounces sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 gill cream, 1 gill very strong coffee, 1 ounce powdered gelatine. First beat the yolks, then add salt, sugar, and coffee. Put the mixture in a double saucepan and cook until it thickens. Now add the gelatine which has been slaked in the cream. Stir the mixture till all the gelatine is dissolved. Take the mixture off the gas and stir till cool and it begins to thicken, and then add the freshly beaten whites of egg and vanilla essence. Pour in a wet mould, and leave to set. Serve either plain or with whipped cream.

MARASCHINO SOUFFLE

2 eggs, 1 1/2 gills cream, 1/2 gill maraschino, 1/2 oz. powdered gelatine, 1/2 gill water, sugar and lemon juice. Decoration:—1/2 gill whipped cream, rose leaves or violets. Place soufflé tin on ice. Prepare the mixture as usual. Whisk the yolks over hot water; place cream in bowl and whip; mix ingredients together; add maraschino; pour mixture into white of egg gradually; sweeten and flavour to taste; thicken with a little gelatine. Pour into tin and pack round with ice and salt for two hours. Remove from ice. Turn out and decorate to taste.

ORANGE CHARLOTTE RUSSE

Dissolve one ounce of powdered gelatine in half a pint of water, add the strained juice of one lemon and one orange; add as much sugar as required—as the fruits vary one cannot state the amount. Wet a border mould and pour in the mixture and leave to set on ice. Whip half a pint of cream and milk mixed, add two ounces castor sugar, and a few drops of lemon juice. Whip till stiff.

Turn the jelly out on to a glass dish. Arrange sponge fingers around the inside of the mould, and fill up the space with the whipped cream and serve.

Dr. Hogg has come here with her husband astronomer, a Toronto graduate whom she met at the Harvard observatory. She is discovering "inconstant" stars in certain beautiful circular masses called "globular clusters" which contain as many as 50,000 stars, all in a group brighter than the sun although invisible to the naked eye.

Her work confines her to about 100 of these multicolored clusters, all of which are above and below the Milky Way. "When I discover which of these stars vary in light, it is possible to work out their distance from the earth," explained Dr. Hogg.

Only one or two out of the 50,000 or more stars in the cluster may be variable, so her work is very painstaking. First she takes a photographic record, then some time later makes other photographs of the same cluster. One negative is placed over the other to see which stars have varied in size. She takes as many as 20 plates of each cluster.

Dr. Helen Hogg has already taken 400 plates on eight clusters at Victoria; this has taken eight years—there are complicated mathematics to work out too. She has six to eight more clusters to work on here and each will take about two years.

GERMAN HOUSE FRAU NOT USED TO SEEING 'PAINTED' WOMEN

Five days in New York were spent by German tourists recently. One of the women in the party, a Bremen housewife, who knew some English and had visited every European nation, was asked for her impressions of New York. "We find it very funny," she said, "you have little buildings and then 50-storey buildings next. In Germany the churches are outstanding and here they are between shops and, O-o-h! And the cementing—oh, so much of it here. They look very unholly. "New York women, they look very nice. But we are not used to seeing painted women. With me, I use powder—and some people boycott me because I use a little powder and lipstick but some like it. But the ladies look here as if they were without any." Here she used a German word and her interpreter after solicitously asking her to repeat it, cleared his throat and said: "Well, er well—say that she thinks they look too artificial."

"The people here," she went on, "have no idea of decorating the windows of their stores. In Germany they are very ugly. We are all so beautiful. Our small shops—how do you call it?—on the outside of town are better than Fifth Avenue. But the chauffeurs—they are the artists here. They go by right side and by left side of autos when they find the space. "I go to find some very thin stockings," she concluded. "These we have not."

USE LONG LACE CURTAINS James William Subcliffe, of Arbour street, Southport, contractor, lumber merchant and joiner, left $50,708 net personally $60,593. Southport to his brother Thomas. He left the use of a house in and his wife, together with $416 a year, "on condition he or she shall use long lace curtains in the front windows. Should they use curtains or many other description the annuity is to be reduced to $212."

A Busy Place

A busy place just now is the new extension of School Street. A number of new buildings are in the course of erection, and the sound of the hammer and saw is in the air, and buildings almost completed demonstrate the fact that the home industry is not dead, and that there are people long headed enough to see that instead of paying rent they can be paying towards a home. A few very desirable lots still left.

What is Worst Mother Can Do To Child? Dorothy Dix Find Life is Hardest For Spoiled Brat

Give Your Child Everything it Wants; Wait on it Hand and Foot and Let it Grow up and Marry on That Platform—and You Will Have Added One More to the Long List of Matrimonial Failures

What is the worst thing that a mother can do to her child? Spoiling it. Pampering it. Making it feel that it must have its own way and whatever it wants, regardless of the rights and comforts of others. Indulging its every whim and caprice.

The mother who spoils her children does them the deadliest wrong that one human being can do another, for she absolutely unfit them for life. Most of the failures in the world are the men and women who were spoiled children. Mother always removed the crumpled rose leaf from under their forty matrimonial failures and they expected existence to be soft-padded for them the way she did it.

She gave them everything they wanted on a silver salver and it never occurred to them that they would have to work and struggle to get their desires. She fed them on cake. So when they found out that they would have to toil and sweat to get even bread and that nobody cared a hoot for their comfort or pleasure, they simply couldn't stand the grief. They had no strength in them. The discipline. They couldn't endure hardships. Mother's spoiling had turned them into shirkers and quitters.

Nine-tenths of the divorces are the direct result of Mother's spoiling. Mother brings up Johnny to think that he is the kingpin of the universe and that all a woman is good for is to minister to his comfort and pleasure. She does all the hard chores around the house so he will be free to play with the boys. She draws his bath. She picks the seeds out of his jam. She blacks his shoes. She waits on him hand and foot. She takes all of his impudence without ever answering back.

In time Johnny grows up and gets married and when he tries his spoiled-child tactics on his wife and treats her as he did his mother she hauls him into the divorce court. The same thing happens when Mother spoils Mamie. While Mamie is still in the cradle Mother begins crawling on her stomach before her. She gives her everything she cries for, or she be brave, or unselfish, or obedient because when they are grown miracles will occur that will turn little hellions into adult angels. Of course, it never happens.

The grouchy man who can never get along with anybody in business and who makes his wife's life a hell on earth was the little boy who was permitted to be surly and rude around home. The wild girl who mocks at Mother's efforts to restrain her was the little girl Mother never taught to behave.

The peevish, fretful, discontented cowards who sit down and wall over their fates are the men and women whom Mother never taught to get up and laugh when they stubbed their toes and bumped their noses as babies. The disrespectful sons and daughters who show their parents no consideration are the children Mother allowed to talk back to her. Another great wrong that mothers do children is in being too possessive. They want to monopolize their children. Often they don't want the children's fathers to have any part in the youngsters. They want their children to look to them for everything and to be rubber-stamps of themselves.

A mother will try to make her child just what she is and will deny it any life of its own whatever. She will not leave it free to follow its own taste and desires in choosing a career and dooms it to failure because she forces it away from its natural bent. Many mothers are so possessive that they are not willing to have their children marry, and when they do, they often try to break up their homes. And the sad part about these terrible things that mothers often do to their children is that they are done in love, and because the mother is so obsessed by her passion for her child that she cannot see what she is doing to it.

Penthouse Love By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

CHAPTER 21 Billie saw Doug and Yanner at the same time and put her hand on Charity's arm to squeeze it warmly. When Batch saw Doug his face reddened. It was a most embarrassing situation. Billie thought faster than she'd ever thought before in her life. Doug looked up. Before he had a chance to show surprise, Billie pounced upon their table.

"Are we late? Howdy, Yanner! We bring your wife as per instructions, Doug. Ain't she scrumptious? Pull up the table, boys."

Two waiters leaped to move the two tables together—and Doug, who was sitting at the table, was startled. He looked at the waiter who had just moved the table and said: "What's the matter with you? You're supposed to be a waiter, not a waiter's assistant."

Dr. Phillips was enlightened as to the sudden change of table arrangement. "Miss Vandergriff, Doctor Phillips—and Mr. Temple, Doctor Phillips."

Billie felt like laughing out loud when she saw the look on Yanner's face as her eyes lit on the transfiguration of Charity. At first she looked incredulous. Then her eyes lit on the second with fury. She caught herself in time to say casually, "How have you been, Charity?"

Charity found herself saying equally casually, "Oh—I've been just lovely. And you?"

"Getting around," Yanner smiled weakly. Batch felt himself in a mighty tight place, although Doug had made it quite plain he didn't care what Charity did. That was before Charity cut her hair and showed what clothes could do to a girl. He looked at Yanner with her blond curls and her weak little rosebud mouth, and wondered how Doug could go with her when he had a wife like Charity. The man must be blind.

Yanner had never known such agony of mind. She mentally compared herself with the tall, raven-haired Charity in her stunning white gown, and for the first time in her life felt inferior in looks to another girl. She saw, with a shock, that all eyes were upon Charity and Billie, and it made her furious.

She looked at Doug out of the corner of her eye and saw with a pang, which made her feel ill, that he was looking at Charity as though he had never seen her before.

Every one in the party breathed a sigh of relief when the lights at the tables dimmed and the dance floor lit up for the floor show. It saved the painful job of trying to make conversation. Charity picked up a program and smiled inwardly when she saw that Chickie Belle was one of the stars. Maybe that would take a little of the wind out of Yanner's

Billie and Dr. Phillips were the only two who enjoyed the rest of the evening. Charity's cool exterior hid the inner turmoil of her emotions. It wasn't so easy sitting at the same table with her rival, wondering what she really was to Doug; how soon he'd be asking for a divorce so he could marry the little blond darling of society.

Looking at Charity smiling wistfully around her, Batch knew with a sudden pounding of the blood in his temples that he loved her. He wanted, more than he had ever wanted anything in his life, to take her in his arms and tell her so. Just before it was time to go home Billie leaned over to say to Charity under her breath, "Oh, darling, isn't he wonderful! I think I'm in love."

Charity, thanks to the advice of the worldly wise Billie, made it a point to make certain Doug only caught glimpses of her. It was a warm day early in October, clear and beautiful, but the penthouse and decided to take a run down to Templehaven. He felt like being alone. Like stretching on the beach and watching the blue water of the Sound lap the white sand at his feet.

He threw his bathing things into a bag and waited impatiently while Rafferty went to the garage for his roadster. He dismissed the chauffeur almost curly at the door, and jumped into his car. It gave him a feeling of being let out of school. Many times lately Doug had the feeling he wanted to get off by himself, but it was seldom he gave in to it. There were too many disturbing thoughts waiting to chase themselves through his troubled mind.

Farewell Gift For Lady Bessborough

Women of Canada will be given an opportunity to take part in presenting a farewell gift to the Countess of Bessborough. At a meeting held in Ottawa recently over which Lady Perley, wife of Sir George Perley, presided, it was announced that Lady Bessborough had consented to accept a memento of the happy years she has spent in Canada. A movement to present such a gift was launched at the meeting.

The national committee includes wives of Lieutenant Governors of the Provinces, wives of federal cabinet ministers, wives of other privy councillors and presidents of women's nationally organized societies.

The following telegram has been received by Mrs. DeBlois from Lady Perley: "A preliminary women's national committee with Lady Perley as chairman was formed in Ottawa June 12th to arrange a farewell gift for Her Excellency Lady Bessborough."

And as Doug evaded, Yanner became more and more furious. It wasn't easy to answer questions at home as to just how soon the Vandergriff woman was able to get their fingers into the Temple pie. There were many nights when Yanner cried herself to sleep because Doug seemed so cold and indifferent and no longer a slave to her blond charms. It infuriated her when she thought of Charity and how she had changed. She was sure Charity was using every vile possible to lure Doug away from her.

She wouldn't have believed the strange Mrs. Temple capable of using the old method of indifference as a weapon against her. That

RACEHORSE RECOVERS FROM BROKEN NECK

Henri's Choice, the racehorse who broke his neck when he fell while running in the Liverpool Hurdle Race at Aintree on March 30, has made a complete recovery.

The fracture, which was about six inches below the ears was generally regarded as fatal. Henri's Choice was unconscious for two days after the fall.

Ben Warner, the owner, said that the veterinary surgeons were satisfied the horse had thoroughly recovered.

A Morning Smile

NO DIFFERENCE The new maid was full of her own importance. She had worked on the Continent and felt superior to the other servants.

One day she was telling "below stairs" some of her experiences. "How do the foreign dishes compare with English ones?" asked one of her audience. "Oh," replied the maid airily, "they break just the same."

VISITOR'S ENTRANCE In a certain English town there is a row of houses which has a road at the back as well as at the front. One dark night a man went to call on a friend who lodged in one of the houses in this row. Being unfamiliar with the place, the caller went to the back door, which was opened by a maid.

"Is Mr. So-and-so in?" asked the visitor, to which the girl replied, reprovingly, "This is the back door, sir. You must go round to the front."

Round to the front—and it was some distance round—went the would-be caller, and rang the bell. The door was opened by the same maid, who waited for him to ask the customary question, "Is Mr. So-and-so in this evening?"

To which the girl replied, "No, sir, he's out."
