SHAKING UP THE MICROBES

The London Lancet announces a discovery that may prove of great value, it is said. It is to the effect that bacteria in food and drink are destroyed and the food and drink sterilized by sufficiently energetic vibration.

Hereafter we shall at least know what to do in case of an unfriendly call from the bad microbe, the pathogenic member of the bacterial family. We shall treat him according to the directions which in the olden times were affixed to bottles of medicine.

Clearly we must fall in the aid of strategy to get around this difficulty. Let the food we eat, the liquids we imbibe and the air we breathe be shocked by sufficient vibrations to kill the elusive germs.

All have noticed how a thunderstorm purifies the air. There you are again—the flash and crash of the elemental war killing the bacteria with which the air had become loaded.

We refrain for the present from presenting the moral aspects of the case—how agitation may kill the moral bacteria which prey upon society.

At the Paardeberg dinner our esteemed townsman J. T. Mellish in an eloquent address on The Empire, urged the young men present to enter the blessed estate of matrimony.

Mellish was able to cite from President Elliot of Harvard, the startling statement that 1,000 college graduates did not leave a thousand sons to take their places when they were called away from earth.

THE LAST

CONTRIBUTE TO THE DEAD

Remains of Mrs. Watts Laid to Rest Yesterday

THE MEMORIAL SERVICE

Many Were Moved to Tears in the First Methodist Church Last Night

The funeral of Mrs. W. Harry Watts took place yesterday afternoon from her late residence, Prince Street, to the People's Cemetery. The cortege was a very large and representative one and citizens of all walks of life, were present to pay a last tribute of respect to the departed.

The order of the procession was as follows: Rev. G. M. Young, Rev. Leo Williams, Rev. J. W. McConnell, Funeral Director Dayson.

The funeral service at the house was most solemn. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Young, the scriptures lesson was read by Rev. Mr. McConnell and Rev. Mr. Williams beautifully sang a solo.

The floral tributes from the friends of the deceased were many and very beautiful. Among them were a wreath of hyacinths and primroses from Lodge Prince Edward, S. O. E., a pillow of carnations, narcissus and smilax from the choir of the First Methodist Church.

Not for a long time has such universal sorrow been felt and such genuine sympathy expressed as at the Memorial Service for the late Mrs. Watts in the First Methodist Church last night.

The large organ and the choir gallery were draped in black and the choir, of which the deceased was the leading member, were attired in mourning.

Mr. Young took for his text "Like as a father pitieth his children so the Lord pitieth them who fear Him." For he knoweth our frame he remembereth that we are dust.—Ps. 103: 13, 14.

These lines of Hebrew poetry had been written by one who had sounded the great depths, and from dark and perilous waters had brought to view a pearl of great price.

In referring particularly to the loss that the Church and Choir had sustained in the death of Mrs. Watts he said: "Our hearts are sad as we come to-night to lay the poor tribute of sympathetic words upon the grave that has just closed above one whom we had learned to love. A fair and gentle presence has gone from us. It is with tear-stained faces that we look toward Heaven, and think of our great bereavement, and invoke the aid and comfort of the pitying God.

"Her clear and beautiful voice has often charmed our ears, and better still, touched and ennobled our hearts and lives. No one ever heard an unworthy song from her lips. Some great truth, set to noble music appealed to her cultivated mind and rich devotional spirit, and whether in the public service, in the hospitals or among her personal friends, that truth was given as from heart to heart.

"And now there falls a sudden sadness on our lives, and we can only bow disconsolate heads and weep, and look out from our lonely hearts on the homeless drifting of the winter mist, and hear the requiem of the winter wind.

"We little knew how soon the clear call would come, but there was no moaning of the bar, no sadness of farewell for the light of the morning was absorbed and glorified in the radiance of the larger life into which she was ushered.

"The influence and blessedness of such a gentle life does not cease with the events of the day. It lives in the precious memories left as a legacy to the bereaved family and her numerous friends. It calls us young men and maidens, old men and children, to a more devoted service, a more earnest and practical Christian experience, and a loftier ideal in our daily duties.

"Mr. Young closed by quoting the following lines written by the late Thomas Le page on the death of Miss Hettie Lewis, a member of the choir nearly twenty years ago.

So mute to those who loved to hear, Thy voice so sweet; thy tones so clear, Passing the tones of harp or lute, Already is thy singing done?

And shall we see no more that face, Whose modest look and ardent grace, Drew utterance ere thy song began, In thee we looked for one whose skill Should blend fine words well understood With perfect voice and fitting mood, And away a thousand hearts at will.
