CHRISTINA E. STEWART.

There passed peacefully away to her eternal home on May 5, 1916, Christina Elizabeth, daughter of Donald McD., and Elizabeth Stewart of New Argyle. She was an exceptionally bright and intelligent child, and although she was called away when only a little more than eleven years old, her attainments in the school and Sabbath School were of an unusually high order. Her gentle and loving disposition gave promise of a noble and influential life, but the Good Shepherd called her home from a world of sorrow and tears. The funeral service was exceedingly impressive and was conducted by Rev. Ewen MacDougall in the absence of her minister. A large number assembled and followed her remains to their last resting place in the Argyle Cemetery. "Suffer the little children to come unto me for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

QUICK THINKING WON RUSS. GIRL A MEDAL

Violent Young Officer and Whole Detachment Took Sleeping-Potion in Wine and Then Were Bound

Among a party of Letts who succeeded in escaping from a village in Courland, occupied by the Germans, is a girl of seventeen who has been rewarded for a great deed of heroism. She is the daughter of a small German detachment marched on to the farm owned by this girl's father. Sentries were left outside to keep watch on a hill quite close, while the rest entered the house and prepared to have a good time. The young German lieutenant turned to the girl, with the order to get wine at any cost, as their supply had run short. She was bold and unflinching, and she went to the house, where she found the sentries sleeping. She slipped a silver lining to one of the most glorious but saddest records of the British army.

There were two barrels of heavy old liquor, made of spruce and berries, in the cellar, and a bright idea struck the girl. Before giving them the cordial she dropped into it some powder, made of bluebells, which brings on heavy drowsiness. The first barrel was soon emptied, and the demand came for more. The second barrel contained a double portion of the powder, and the Germans soon began to roll on to the floor, one after another. Seeing her enemies helpless round the barrel, she filled a bowl of liquor, took it out to the sentries, who stood freezing in the cold, and gave it to them to drink, incidentally mentioning that she was fulfilling the officer's orders. The bowl was soon emptied. She then returned to the house and carefully disarmed the soldiers, who, sunk in heavy slumber, lay about in different attitudes, and hid their weapons deep in the cellar. Meantime her father was fastening with ropes the limbs of the insensible Germans. Having accomplished her task with the prisoners, the girl proceeded to find her way out to the Russian positions. Following forest paths and making her way through swamps, she finally reached a Siberian outpost.

Twenty-one Bagged
"I have disarmed and tied up twenty German soldiers, and one officer; hasten, and take them prisoners," were the excited words which the girl addressed to the head officer of the Siberian Rifles. The soldiers were amazed at the audacity of the young Lett, and could hardly believe her story. However, she persuaded them to follow her, and when they reached the farm they found the Germans still fast locked in their drunken sleep. Several pails of ice-cold water flung in the faces of the sleepers soon roused them to the grim realities of their situations. The brave girl was brought to the presence of the Russian commanding general, who shook her hand, and thanked her for her heroic deed, and promised to make a report on it to the higher military authorities. This was done, and as a reward for her services she received the much-coveted decoration which signifies valor in the Russian army.

BULGARS SET EXAMPLE

Unlike Germans, Respected Red Cross on Lady Paget's Hospital

There was a large party at King's Cross to welcome Lady Paget and fifty-four other members of the Serbian Relief Fund Hospital staff at Uskub on their return to London. A well-known member of Lady Paget's party, who had travelled back to England via Roumania, Russia, Sweden and Norway. On October 22 the Bulgarians entered Uskub. Their advance was so rapid that there was no possibility of getting the patients safely out of the hospital. Lady Paget pluckily decided to stay behind to look after them. The line of battle went right through the hospital buildings, but the Bulgarians respected the Red Cross flag.

"There were 800 patients, about half of them being Serbs, and the other half Bulgarians. The Bulgarians, I believe, did what they could to help. They told us they were anxious to stand well in English eyes. The refugee population, kept alive from the relief and stores, numbered many thousands. Lady Paget organized daily relief for about 4,000 people. "King Ferdinand, and both the young princes came to Uskub before we were permitted to leave. None of them, however, came to the hospital. After leaving Uskub we were detained in Sofia for a month. Lady Paget was the guest of the British Embassy. I was allowed to visit the British prisoners—of whom there were about thirty—and they all spoke well of their general treatment. Two prisoners were able to bring away, Private Morris and Private Woodbine, the latter being blind."

OATS OF BARBED STEEL

German's Grim Trick to Kill the British Horses

Barbed oats are the instruments of offence invented by Germans. The War Office has had to issue to responsible officers in charge of cavalry and other mounted forces an order that every bushel of oats now must be examined carefully before it is used. It has been discovered that some of the sacks of oats purchased in the United States contained little pieces of steel, shaped like oats, and painted yellow. These are barbed, and a horse that swallowed one would have little chance of life. The placing of the barbed oats in the food is considered to be the work of Germans who have obtained employment in American granaries in order to kill the horses at 3,000 miles range.

GUELPH GOES BACK TO STANDARD TIME

GUELPH, Ont., June 27.—In deciding that the city should revert from daylight saving to standard time today, the council's committee on the matter attached a rider to their report advising that the Dominion government be asked to consider the matter as they believed that the system was good, but not possible of success under local application.

KING'S OWN SERVANTS CHARGED INTO DEATH

Few Survivors of Company of Sandringham's Heroes—An Epic of Gallipoli is Described

Of all the tales of gallantry told, and yet to be told, of the desperate fighting in Gallipoli, none perhaps will surpass the heroism of the Norfolk Territorials, with whom the King's Sandringham servants went to fight. Of them Sir Ian Hamilton wrote in his now historic despatch: "Among these ardent souls was part of a fine company enlisted from the King's Sandringham estates. Nothing more was seen or heard of any of them. They charged into the forest and were lost to sight or sound." Writing of that magnificent charge into the "misty unknown," a correspondent from King's Lynn says: "It is a story of the men who never came back; of Colonel Beauchamp and sixteen officers who led 250 men across ploughed open fields, thinking of nothing but the order, 'Anafarta must be taken by dusk.' To-day only a dozen, it would seem, are alive as wounded prisoners in Turkish hands, some day to tell a tale, perhaps, that will add a silver lining to one of the most glorious but saddest records of the British army.

"It is a breathless story. Think of every eligible man from the King's Sandringham estates enlisting in a body and forming a nucleus of C company; men whose wildest thrills had been that of a recalcitrant bull on the Royal estate. Others from office stool and counter. Twelve months of skilled training, in which Colonel Beauchamp was a past master. A pleasant cruise across the open blue sea aboard the Aquitania, and a midnight landing on an enemy's unknown and unmapped coast. 'Anafarta must be taken by dusk.' That was the responsibility entrusted to them. For more than two and a half miles, across open country which would not shelter a field mouse, these Norfolk neophytes to gunfire charged. Maybe it was the very gallantry of these super-heroes that was their undoing. The Turks could not face that thin line of glittering Norfolk steel. They broke and fled.

"Bold and confident, Colonel Beauchamp, waving a simple Nilgherri cane, outpaced his men. 'On the Norfolk, on! Come on, the Holy Boys!' and 'Forward, the Hungry Ninths!' came the resounding echo from these ardent souls close upon their leader's heels. The fighting grew hotter; the Norfolk came into a terrible enflaming fire on both sides. Shrapnel and machine guns swept the earth bare of those men whom the Turkish infantry could not face. Exhausted by thirst and decimated by the fire, into the woods they continued. And then—who knows? Only twelve survive, and they are wounded prisoners. "So to-day the little village of West Newton and Deringham and the cottages of the King's estates are all in mourning. Gardeners, keepers and woodmen have paid the great sacrifice. Aching hearts are scarcely less heavy because the King himself has tried again and again to secure a release from suspense. These women, materially, want for nothing. Every family receives from the King the same pay as if its man was at home."

HISTORY REPEATING ITSELF

(By Joseph Hocking)

More than a hundred years ago, when Napoleon threw a black shadow over Europe, the liberties of the whole Continent were threatened. But the fate and dogma of the army and navy, of the men who followed Wellington and Nelson, saved us and saved Europe then. To-day the liberties and well-being of Europe are again threatened. History is, indeed, repeating itself, and the England who fought for the liberty of the world at the beginning of the nineteenth century is again fighting for the liberty of the world at the beginning of the twentieth. Napoleon was crushed, his dreams were shattered, his great army became fugitive, and his bombastic threatenings were of no more weight than the anger of a pulling child. What England was, England is; we have not lost the resolution, the foresight, the faith, which have made us great. We have still the same strong arm, the same keen eye, the same brave heart, the same clear brain, as when our cause was, as it is to-day, the liberty and the well-being of the world.

CALLOUS ENEMY

German Submarine Crew and Agony of Their Victims

The "Echo de Paris" received details from Corfu of the loss of the French torpedo boat destroyer Renaudin in the Adriatic. The vessel was on a cruising mission when she was struck in two. While the survivors were struggling in the water a large submarine of a new type appeared. The officers and sailors remained indifferent to the agony of the swimmers. A French torpedo boat destroyer cruising in the neighborhood hastened to the scene, whereupon the submarine disappeared. The destroyer took the thirty-eight men rescued to Brindisi.

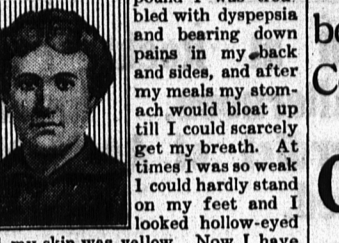

Prince of Wales in Cairo

The Prince of Wales' visit to Egypt resulted in many beggars of Cairo blessing his name, though he is ignorant of the fact. A correspondent saw the Prince making some purchases in the bazaar, and, when the business was concluded, he approached the merchant and asked him if he knew whom he had had the honor of serving. The merchant shook his head, and when informed of the truth he burst into loud lamentations. He had shamelessly overcharged the Prince, and nothing could convince that he would not suffer an ignominious death. The correspondent promised that if the merchant distributed largesse to the poor in the Prince's name he himself would personally intercede with the Prince on the merchant's behalf. The merchant thankfully agreed.

DYSPEPSIA OF WOMEN

Special Treatment Required.

Many women suffer from a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms are similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines usually prescribed do not restore the patient's normal condition. There seems to be a kind of dyspepsia caused by derangement of the female organism. While this appears to be the same as ordinary indigestion it can be relieved only by a medicine which, besides acting as a stomach tonic, is good for female ailments. Read what such a medicine did for Mrs. Williams:— "Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with dyspepsia and bearing down pains in my back and sides, and after my meals my stomach would bloat up till I could scarcely get my breath. At times I was so weak I could hardly stand on my feet and I looked hollow-eyed and my skin was yellow. Now I have a good color, have gained in every way and can do my work without any pains. I think it is the best medicine on earth for stomach troubles of women."—Mrs. NELLIE WILLIAMS, 81 West 8d Street, New Albany, Ind.
