CHRISTIE MacDONALD SINGS NEW VICTOR HERBERT NUMBERS.

Presents the Principal Selections From the New Operetta
"Sweethearts."

The new Victor Herbert production, "Sweethearts," has been acclaimed one of the biggest of successes and Christie Macdonald has received an ovation at every performance, and now along come the Victor Records of the best numbers from "Sweethearts," and give everybody the opportunity of not only enjoying the brilliant and fascinating music but actually hearing the "star" of the production sing several of the selections. Five of the principal numbers are presented in the new list of Victor Records for July.
These are given by Christie Macdonald. She sings most beautifully the dainty solo "Sweethearts," and assisted by Reinald Werrenrath renders the charming "Crickets on the Heath" duet with its lovely melody and cheerful cricket chirps; and the Victor Chorus joins these two singers in giving the splendid "Angelus" scene with its pealing bells, beautiful and effective chorus. The two other Sweetheart numbers are "Jeannette and Her Wooden Shoes" charmingly sung by Marguerite Dunlap, and "Every Lover Must Meet His Fate" in which Reed Miller is heard to advantage.

Some old-time favorites which are still highly regarded also appear in the July offering, and the splendid manner in which they are rendered is sure to add to their popularity. Elsie Baker sings the "Lullaby" from Erminie, and the tuneful and intender "Long, Long ago," and with Frederick Wheeler gives an effective sung duet of the melodious "Oh Happy Day" Olive Kline contributes "The Message of the Violet" from the Prince of Pilsen, and the Victor Light Opera Company revives another Lauder's operetta, "King Do-do," giving an attractive medley of eight popular numbers from this delightful work. The two famous old Irish songs are sung by two favorite basses—the familiar "Wearing of the Green" by William F. Hooley, and "Off to Philadelphia" by Wilfred Glenn. The latter singer also contributes the celebrated old semi-humorous song, "Thursday," and that satire actor and elocutionist, Harry E. Humphrey, gives a splendid recitation of Mark Twain's famous story of "Buck Fanshawe's Funeral."

There are also new popular selections in abundance—sentimental ballads and ragtime songs, topical ditties and "geographical" numbers, sung as solos, duets, and quartets by a talented group of singers.

Dancing will be more popular than ever this summer with such splendid new records as those by the Victor Military Band to furnish the music.

Six fine new selections are the splendid entertainment by paying a month's contribution to the series of records for dancing, and they are of great volume and played in perfect rhythm. A noble grand march, "Marche Fantastique," is played with splendid precision by Kryl's Bohemian Band, and the conductor of this organization, Bohumir Kryl, gives a remarkable cornet solo of Venice." Beautiful Bourdon contributes two beautifully popular "Silver Threads Among the Gold," and an attractive selection entitled "The Broken Melody." Two zither solos by D. Wormser are most delightful—it is a distinct pleasure to listen to his renditions of "Sounds from Tyrol" and "Forsaken." Maud Powell, Mischa Elman and Fritz Kreisler each play a violin solo —the former using a dainty little Schuzko which has been a favorite in her concerts, Elman gives a new beauty to Raff's effective "Cavatina," and the latter artist renders a fascinating little French piece in a particularly delightful manner.

Though the opera stars are in distance lands, they are much in evidence in this new July list. Caruso's fifth English record is an attractive ballad, "Your Eyes Have Told Me," beautifully sung by the great tenor and it can be noted that his English enunciation is constantly improving.
Gadski and Amato render a superb Aida Duet, and the eminent baritone also sings with splendid effect a great aria from Franchetti's opera, Gormania. Schumann-Heink's contribution is an impressive setting of the prayer with a wonderful depth of feeling. Braga's ever popular "Angel's Serenade" is delightfully presented by Alma Gluck with a violin obligato by Ehem Zimbalist, and Miss Gluck also sings with grace and delicacy the dainty Tannyaon-Dolores butts "Brook, Geraldine Farrar sings the simple and charming "I've Been Roaming," and with Louise Homer sings an attractive old folk-song, "How can I Leave Thee." John Mi-Cormack gives a ballad from a popular English Opera, and Lover's "Low Back'd Car" one of the quaint-est of Irish songs; Titta Rufo in his rendition of a Neapolitan canzone gives an admirable example of ballad singing; and Francis Alda presents the inspiring "Vision Song," from the "The Butterfly." Two other numbers from this most beloved of Fuccini operas are rendered by Edith Helena, and the Metropolitan Opera Chorus sings two celebrated choral numbers from the Magic Flute and the Hugonots—splendidly given by this famous body, the finest singing organization of its kind in the world.
A wonderful array of music by a wonderful array of talent—a musical program that is so wide in its scope as to satisfy the desire for every kind of music. It means new delight for every Victrola owner, and everyone can at least have a taste of this visit to any His Master's Voice dealer's, for any dealer anywhere will gladly play any selections upon request. 662-8-2ME14

Miss Eva Taylor, the celebrated, distinguished comedienne and star will give the first presentation of Lawrence Grattan's newest farce, called, "After the Wedding." The comedy is said to contain as many laughs as a Christmas pudding does good things. There is not a pause during the entire sketch, and one clever situation and bright line follows the other until the fall of the curtain.

Other prominent features will be Maud Muller and Ed. Stanley, the American eccentric comedienne, with the grand opera voice, and the Englishman from Chicago; the Florence Family, presenting most remarkable feats of somersaultism, executed with ease, grace and agility; George Hermann and Marion, in a surprising novelty, called, "The Mysterious Masquerader"; Fred and Adele Astaire, offering a sprightly act, inter-persed with novel songs and cleverly rendered dances; Jack Mooney, a baritone soloist, giving a splendid repertoire of popular songs, and Len-ett and Wilson, in a wonderful comedy bar exhibition.
