"FIGHTING MAD," PALOOKA FILM, DUE The world's heavyweight champion faces possible blindness when he risks his title to save his man from a precarious situation in Monogram's "Fighting Mad," starring Leon Errol and Joe Kirkwood and coming today to the Capitol Theatre. The latest in the film series based on Ham Fisher's famous Joe Palooka comic strip, promises many spine-tingling moments as the champ fights the most crucial battle of his career.

Kirkwood, as Palooka, is forced into ring retirement following a secret eye operation after an injury in a bout. However, marriage to his girl, Elvise Knox, as announced as the reason for his giving up boxing. Palooka goes on a vaudeville tour with singer Patricia Dane, which makes Anne Jealous, though she is being courted by John Hubbard, employed by racketeer Charles Cane. Meanwhile Palooka's manager, Leon Errol, buys an interest in heavyweight Jack Shea, secretly owned by mobster Cane. Knobby discovers he is being used as a front for Lundy's ring set-ups, but the racketeer refuses to let Walsh give up his interest. Though faced with loss of his eyesight if hit about the head, Palooka signs to fight Lundy to extract Knobby from his predicament.
