SATISFACTORY RECOVERY—Tennyson Ramsay, seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs W Ramsey, Hamilton, who has been unable to walk for four years, due to Infantile Paralysis, left with Mr. Nelson Owen some time ago for Boston, Mass, to be treated in the Children's Hospital there. After three months' treatment he arrived home able to walk and all are glad to hear the glad news.

BOAT STEALING—Three boats were stolen out of Queen's wharf dock on Saturday evening—a motor boat a row boat and a punt. A dory and oars were also taken from alongside a schooner at the Railway wharf. This boat was later found moored outside the harbor. The motor boat and punt were found next day in a damaged condition at the railway wharf. It is certainly time something was done to put an end to this sort of work around the wharves.

UNUSUAL BIRD VISITORS—Two huge birds supposed to be eagles, alighted on the spire of St. Dunstan's Cathedral on Wednesday evening between 7 and 8 o'clock. They came from a southward direction over Water Street, flying low their wings moving very rapidly. They encircled the spire several times apparently trying to get a footing and finally rested on the cross. Their wings outspread would probably measure ten or twelve feet from tip to tip. They remained about half an hour before flying and then parted one going east and the other west.

WARTIME WOOLIES.

Warning is being sounded on every side against wool shortage and against the use of an unnecessary amount of any kind of cloth in making garments for ladies. So far no one has sounded any warning against the use of superfluous yards in the manufacture of men's clothing because modern men have always succeeded in keeping within an entirely reasonable limit in that respect. We are becoming accustomed to good rationing and whether we like it or not we must come down at once to something of the same kind of clothes. Those who follow the edicts of the Paris dressmakers are already planning frocks from 2 1/2 yards of 40-inch goods. They may not know that wool shortage and several other kinds of shortage are back of this new fashion and for that reason they may fall to use to the best advantage the last season's garments which are still in usable condition. This same short-ago accounts for the combination of two or more fabrics or colours or patterns in one costume. Ignorance of that economic fact may result in a woeful waste of excellent material.

Skillful cleaning and dyeing must become one of the popular accomplishments during the remainder of the war and for some time after just because the surplus of wool, cotton, leather and almost every kind of fabric except silk and velvet has been exhausted and there is neither available labour, manufacturing plants nor raw material to replenish that deficiency. Dwellers in the New World are too accustomed to an unstinted supply of everything to take kindly to any hint of the need of conservation of anything. But by this time we perhaps have acquired that wisdom which reads the signs of the times and should, literally, cut our garment according to the cloth—there is not enough cloth to go round!

Already, as has been hinted, the fashion designers have taken lessons in wisdom and women will henceforward go about with the straight silhouette—which being literally translated means a shortage in goods. Hollanders are wearing slippers with cloth tops and wooden soles and we on this side may display with pride home-made slippers whose tops were secured from what was left of grandfathers' great coat after several garments had been made for the grandchildren. The slippers in Holland retail for the equivalent of $1 a pair in our money and—for those who like them—are very satisfactory. The Dutch daily are wearing sabots because of the shoe shortage. They are thus setting an example to the poorer people who, later on, will be obliged to return to sabots. A prominent physician and alderman wears sabots regularly, although no other part of his costume, even to the high top, is changed. His sabots are black and are an impressive lesson on the folly of false pride.

It is exceedingly difficult for many people to visualize anything. When told that the Allies have made about 375,000 miles of khaki a yard wide, there is no picture of anything definite. It is difficult to imagine just what ten yards of cloth looks like when stretched out straight. But, curiously enough, when told that the khaki made by the Allies would rap this earth of ours something like sixteen times, the enormity begins to take on something like an understandable form, although when put to it we would be at a loss to know exactly what this earth looks like as a ball in space. When one begins to think of the flocks of sheep that have yielded their wool for this khaki one is not quite so much with wonder that there is a shortage of wool at present, but rather that there was ever a time when there was wool enough. No figure suffices to picture the sheep to an imaginative person. But taking everything together, the lesson may be driven home that there is an infinitely smaller supply of wool than there has been for generations and the supply will be still smaller before it begins to increase. Therefore, throw no woollen material away as long as the threads hold together. From this time on the new "woolens" will be of poorer quality than formerly, and will cost immensely more. Goods that sold for $2 last fall will bring $10 this fall—and not the same goods either.

Because there is a shortage of dress material no one is warranted in concluding that women will "look like frights." It is doubtful whether women have ever looked as well as since adopting the uniforms that seemed necessary for the various masculine pursuits taken over by women. The secret of simplicity in line and the elimination of the superfluous has been discovered by designers and to-day women's clothes are the embodiment of smartness and trimness.

The Junior League of New York City have taken a most commendable step in suggesting styles for wear during war time. Simplicity, quiet taste and conservation of wool are kept in mind. Six costumes have been selected and each costume bears the label of the League. Prices are exceedingly moderate and certainly no young woman need be anything but glad to possess one or all of the models. There is a simple tailor-made street suit in serge or tricotine ranging from $30 to $40. A frock of satin and Georgette in a choice of colours comes at $30. The same in tricotine and Georgette comes at $40.

This frock would be perfectly appropriate for any war-time function at luncheon time or later. Another satin-finished toulard comes at $30 and in dull finish at $40. A frock for afternoon calling is of satin and serge at $30, and another of serge alone, comes at the same price. A serviceable and stylish sleeveless serge cape at $25 solves the question of an all-round wrap. This same careful planning of the wardrobe and the banding together in order to secure that mystical element which spells success—the approval of one's fellows—is one phase of real war work which must be taken up at once at home.

Economy Begins at Home

Now-a-days Governments, Chancellors, bankers and business men talk economy. However, it is one thing to talk economy and another to put it into practice.

The Canadian Housewife

holds the key to the situation. Real economy may be practised by the housewife in food purchasing for the home. At very small cost she may obtain the finest cocoa that money can buy—a cocoa unexcelled as a food drink and unrivalled as a flavoring, that adds extra delight to hundreds of dainty desserts.
