Conspiracy Case Opens At Summerside

The case of Frank Gallant and Barry Gallant, charged with conspiracy, opened in the Supreme Court at Summerside yesterday...

The objective of these conversations would be to facilitate international exchange, expansion of production and consumption...

The exchange of notes today would be only a beginning. "It remains to translate its aims into definite policies. This once achieved we shall again have afforded a constructive example of the way in which the nations can be worked out to serve mutual interests and to meet the practical needs of mankind."

He said the United Nations are earning to preserve our common heritage; we must help each other as we can, wherever the need is apparent, as soon as and as much as we can.

Today's task, the Prime Minister said, was largely one of self preservation but it was a part of tomorrow's task which was the liberation of enslaved countries.

"Let no success of the hour minimize the magnitude of that task," he warned. "It is the supreme effort on every front, each man's sacrifice and sacrifice greater than anything that has gone before."

He predicted "I believe it will be seen by the peoples of Germany, Italy, and Japan that, to the might of their military might, they will owe a freedom that otherwise would have been denied them for centuries."

Canada's war effort would mean the destruction of the free spirit of the human spirit, the majesty of the human spirit, the majesty of the human spirit, the majesty of the human spirit.

Reviews War Effort—Mr. King gave a statistical review of Canada's war effort and announced that 100,000 Dominion troops were being called upon to serve in the English Channel or on the front lines.

On Isle of my youth, my heart years for you, my heart As I roam through this world or cross the dark sea; Thy shadow casts o'er me a cloak, Gainst the wiles of this world and the haters of truth.

At night as alone in my cabin I lie, Thy form, as a crescent, is clear to my eye, With thy waters rippling through Thy venture so sweet to each of our local boys serving in the British Isles, and Sweet steamings with fine grasses waving between.

And then float back bright visions of thee, When often, alone, I stood on thy shores by the sea, And watched the white sails of great ships go by, Till thy shapes were shadows in the distant sky.

Oh who that has seen thee, as they looked and admired Thy beauty and grace, has not been With a feeling of love for thee, oh my Isle.

While the crown on each brow, was replaced by a smile.
