Beauty May Adopt Gold Standard

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

CHICAGO, Aug. 12—Beauty has been offered a gold standard.

Its general adoption would not only assure every woman's face being her fortune, the annual convention of the American Cosmeticians Association was told today, but that fortune would be 14 karat fine.

The yellow metal is an ingredient of a new face lotion. It was used, beauty experts explained, "because gold brings out the highlights of the skin."

Face powder is on its way out, the convention was also informed. Madame Aurelea of New York reported the old favorite is closing its place to a combination of finishing powder and lotion.

Two lipsticks are better than one, she also told the beauty-backers, "a dark one to tone down the more vivid one, as a painter paints lips on canvas."

MAYBE HE WAS "DETAINED AT THE OFFICE"

Allan Stewart, Mr. Lea's son-in-law, it was said.

Choice for Attorney-General apparently lies between the youthful campaign-leader Thane A. Campbell, K.C., S.S. Hession, K.C., and Mark McGuigan. But it was learned Mr. Hessian would likely be offered the appointment as Speaker of the new House.

Two candidates—J. P. MacIntyre and B. W. LePage—are said to be in the running for the Public Works portfolio. But Mr. MacIntyre, Minister of Public Works in the last Liberal Government, appeared to have the edge in the running.

The Liberal party is without a doctor and political observers were at a loss to point out candidates for the portfolio of health and education. However, E. P. Foley, Summerside druggist was mentioned as a possibility. To get out of the difficulty, the health department may be turned over to Dr. B. C. Keeping, Provincial Health Officer, and the portfolio pared down to that of Education alone.

The picnic yesterday at Mr. Lea's home, Victoria, was attended by Liberals from all parts of the Province. The programme began at 3 p. m. with Dr. I. J. Yeo, President of the Fifth Queen's Liberal Association and chairman of the picnic committee, presiding. The programme opened with "O Canada" followed by recitation of "the Victory Song" by Mr. D. Edgar Shaw, introduction of provincial members by the County Presidents, introduction of the Federal candidates, addresses by the latter, the reading of an address and presentation of a gold-headed cane to Mr. Lea, reply by Mr. Lea and addresses by other speakers, including Messrs. Thane A. Campbell, J. P. McIntyre, B. W. LePage, Senator Sinclair, Senator McArthur.

Mr. Lea in his address warned that little heed must be paid to the "clamor" for offices because some of them would have to be abolished in the interests of economy. He was faced, he complained, with the hardest problem ever faced by a leader in Prince Edward Island.

He criticized at some length alleged extravagance on the part of the Conservative administration, as did the other speakers.

A "Victory Cake" with thirty candles, offered for auction was purchased, after keen bidding by Mr. S. S. Hessian, K.C., for $40.00.

INTERESTING ADDRESS BY MAJ. THOMPSON

Spoke On "History of Military Pensions" At Rotary Luncheon Yesterday.

The "History of Military Pensions" was the subject of an interesting address given at the Rotary luncheon yesterday by Major C. C. Thompson, a former member of the Pensions Tribunal for Canada.

Major Thompson, in the course of his address, said:

"It is a regrettable fact, but nevertheless a true one, that the average man in the street is most indifferent to this much abused question. So often, and especially in these days of depression, do we hear from Mr. Average Citizen, something like this:

"In heaven's name, when are we going to hear the end of those returned men, and their everlasting cry for a pension. The country is almost bankrupt now over our Pension Bill.—Look at John Smith, he appears perfectly healthy, yet I am told he draws a large pension." A bunch of agitators, Bolsheviks, etc., etc. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, it may not be out of place to set before you as briefly as possible in the short space of time at my disposal a brief history of pensions in general insofar as they concern the British Empire and in particular as they relate to Canada.

Wars have taken place since the beginning of time, and left in their wake, tens of thousands of killed and wounded, tens of thousands of widows and orphans.

However, history does not record any mention of pensions, until the time of that fairest of fair women, and possibly one of the most infamous, the well remembered Nell Gwynne, mistress of his late Britannic Majesty, Charles the Second of England.

The Chelsea Home

Nell Gwynne established at Chelsea, what was then, and ever since has been known as the Chelsea Home for Old Soldiers. At least some of you gentlemen present have seen, as I have, the picturesque old Chelsea Pensioners, who once every year, within the shadow of a statue erected to Nell Gwynne's memory, and hard by the home she built, drink to her memory with a brimming tankard of "Ye Old English Beer," bought with a shilling per man from an endowment fund, which Mistress Gwynne founded when still a Court favorite, which she remained until the death of King Charles.

The King's last dying words were, "Don't let poor Nellie starve," but Alas! and said to relate, this deathbed request was not respected, and forthwith "poor Nell" did starve.

After the campaign on the Continent of that famous English General, the Duke of Marlborough, England was overrun with veterans, whose sole means of ekeing out a livelihood was by begging, and a parallel situation followed the Napoleonic Wars.

It was only this past week in reading H. V. Morton's book, "In Scotland Again," that I learned that following this latter war, the Scottish troops who took part in that campaign, instead of being landed at some port in Scotland, were actually disbanded at Dover, and were there turned loose to get back to their Highland homes as best they could, and of course, on foot. For a period of two years did this movement continue, and for an equal period of time, did many kind-hearted Highland farmer, day after day, place on his premises, but beyond the reach of dogs, bowls of oatmeal porridge, as nourishment for the returning soldiers.

A Shilling Per Day

It was not until 1840 or thereabouts, that anything of pensions as such, was heard, although prior to that time, Parliament gave grants to army commanders, but the poor and lowly rank and file were left to fend for themselves as best they could. However, subsequent to Waterloo, a shilling per day was paid to these veterans, but this was not until about 1870.

In passing, it is of interest to note medals for the Napoleonic Wars were not issued until about 1840.

In Canada, grants have been given to soldiers who served at the taking of Quebec, and to Loyalists after the American Revolution. Pensions were also paid to the veterans of the Northwest Rebellion, and you all, no doubt, remember the grant of $100 to those who were called to the colours during the Fenian Raids in 1866.

First Pension Legislation in Canada

Pensions to Canadian disabled veterans of the South African War were paid, not by Canada, but by the Mother Country; and apart from pensions for long service in the Canadian Permanent Force, no pension legislation was on the Statute Books of Canada until after the outbreak of the Great War in 1914.

That well known, and much admired or much abused soldier, Sir Sam Hughes, who was in England in September, 1915, bidding farewell to the Second Canadian Division, just prior to their embarking for France, talked to them somewhat like this:

"Fellow countrymen, you are going over to France. You will have a tough, hard time for several years, but in the end you will win. My heart is with you, but I must now return to Canada to get through pension legislation for you. Now is the time to do it. Just now they say you are all heroes, but (and isn't this typical of Sir Sam) six months after the War is ended, they will say you were all damn fools, for such has been the history of previous wars."

Sir Sam Hughes returned to Canada, and true to his promise, had pension legislation passed, and what was known as a Board of Pension Commissioners was set up, and was actually functioning before the War had ended.

Federal Appeal Board

Dissatisfaction ensued, and the Government of the day authorized the creation about 1923 of what was known as the Federal Appeal Board, which travelled about the country and heard applicants' appeals from unfavourable decisions of the Board of Pension Commissioners.

This Board, however, was seriously handicapped, in that they could hear verbally the evidence already on file, and on which the Board of Pension Commissioners, sitting in Ottawa, had based their decision. In other words, this Board (the Federal Appeal Board) could hear no new evidence, which the soldier seeking a pension or treatment, might be able to present.

1930 Pension Act

This system continued for several years, but the complaints from all over the country became so general, that in 1930, during the last session of the Mackenzie King Government, a parliamentary committee was appointed to study the whole question. The report of this committee resulted in what was known as the 1930 Pension Act.

Briefly, this set up the Pensions Tribunal, and the Appeal Court, and advocates were appointed in various districts to assist applicants in the preparation of their cases. This legislation gave the applicant the right to present his case, in open court, as it were, and if his claim were granted or refused, reasons were given in substantiation of the decision. Tribunal members were appointed, and these travelled about the country hearing cases—the Chairman of the Tribunal sitting in Ottawa, as was also the Appeal Court, the duty of the latter being to hear appeals from applicants, and the Board of Pension Commissioners, against decisions given by the Tribunals.

New Body Created

It was felt at the time, that at last this vexing problem of pensions, and their solution, was solved. Such was not the case, however, and once again, in 1933, changes had to be made. These changes abolished both the Pension Tribunal and the Board of Pension Commissioners, and created a new body known as the Canadian Pension Commission.

This latter body works more or less along the lines that the Tribunal did, but their method of operation is not so cumbersome nor so expensive. As to the actual results, I am unable to say, but I understand the veterans and the Government appear to be fairly well satisfied with it. I do not wish to weary you with statistics, but the following may be of interest.

Enlistments in the C. E. F.

Total enlistments in the C. E. F. were 619,636. 64 per cent of the total enlisted had no previous military service. 51 per cent were born in Canada.

Of the total enlistments, 424,589 men served outside of Canada, 360,341 served in France.

By the census of 1911, there were in Canada, 2,410,649 men between the ages of 18 and 45, or military age. 25.2 per cent of the male population between the ages of 18 and 45 enlisted.

The total number of pensions, or perhaps I should say, beneficiaries, as a result of the Great War, as at March 31st, 1934, are as follows:

Disability	77,855
Dependent	18,236
	96,091

The total number of beneficiaries under the Pensions Act, including all classes of pensioners or persons, on whose behalf pensions were being paid, was 261,995, being a decrease of 2,845 as compared with the number for the previous fiscal year.

Old Soldier Passing

The old soldier is fast passing out of the picture. This fact is borne out by statistics of insurance companies, who consider the returned soldier, in apparent good health, as a more undesirable, or perhaps I should say, a greater insurance risk, than the average civilian. The figures of the Department substantiate the above statement.

During 1934, pensions for disabilities and dependents totalled: $474,331.00

Pensions reinstated 285,720.00

$760,051.00

With pensions discontinued totalled $1,259,924.00.

Annual Pension Bill

The annual pension bill is regularly in the vicinity of $50,000,000. In 1927-28 it was roughly $47,000,000 gradually increasing, until in 1931-32 it totalled about $66,000,000. Since then it has been decreasing, until last year, 1934-35, it totalled 53½ millions approximately.

The net disbursements, on account of pensions, from April 1st, 1916, to March 31st, 1934, totalled $600,681,033.52.

These are staggering figures, Mr. Chairman, and cause one to pause and consider. But please pause and consider THIS before you arrive at your final conclusion—we were on the side of the victors—we won the War. But supposing we had lost it, what then? I venture the prediction that the figures I have given you today, would be extremely small as compared with what would have been exacted from us by Germany and her allies. They would have today, possession of our customs houses and public industries—and the last dollar would have been ground out of us. And they would not soften their hearts by any claim of ours, that we were unable to pay as the Allies are doing today to Germany. And so I say, do not consider the returned man too harshly.

Do Not Want Charity

The most of them do not want charity. What they do want, though, is a fair chance to make good, and if given that I feel the majority will make good. Personally, I believe the average Canadian is grateful and proud of the effort and record of her civilian army made in the Great War; but time erases many things, and we are all to prone to forget. Remember gentlemen, the poem, "In Flanders Fields," where it says: "We shall not sleep, if ye break faith with us"—was a message to the civilian population as well as to the troops.

Some day, and perhaps the youngest here may live to see it, the last "old soldier" who served in the Great War with the Canadian forces, to save his country and make it possible for us to be gathered here today, without interference from foreign soldiers, will be carried to his grave.

Is it not a fair assumption that the newspaper of that day, will make a great hullaballoo over it? Can't you see the blazing headlines, telling of the great deeds the Canadians did, between 1914-1919—their bravery—the hell they went through—their endurance and privations—their patriotism,—all done to make the world safe for democracy. Yes, I can well imagine those newspapers, and their headlines, but Mr. Chairman, will they, in the same issue, tell of the heart-breaking struggle those same self-sacrificing poor devils made during 1914 and 1918, and the struggle they had following those war years, when fathers and mothers, who had lost their sons, and when men, whose blood soaked the fields of Flanders, returned maimed by wounds, or broken by disease, had to fight a battle equally as hard, and certainly more heart-rending, for recognition which their country ordered should be given them, but which was, in many cases, withheld from them?

I repeat, will the newspapers of that day, when the last "old soldier" is buried, tell of that? I doubt it.

Canada's Old Guard

If there should come a day, which God forbid, when once again we will face the horrors of war, I am sure Canada's Old Guard will be found, as it was in 1914-1918, standing present for the Empire and the King.

As Kipling so well said:

"Oh, it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' Tommy go away"
But it's "Thank you, Mister Atkins" When the band begins to play.
For it's "Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' Tommy wait outside:"
But it's "Special train for Atkins," When the trooper's on the tide.
Then it's "Tommy this an' Tommy that, an' Tommy how's your soul"
But it's "Thin red line of 'eroes" when the drums begin to roll.
For it's "Tommy this an' Tommy that, an' "Chuck him out, the brute,"
But it's "Saviour of his country," when the guns begin to shoot.
And it's Tommy this an' Tommy that, an' anything you please,
And Tommy ain't no bloomin' fool, You bet that Tommy sees.

Indirect Blow To Catholic Church Claim

(C. P.-Havas)
(By Guardian's Special Wire)

BERLIN, Aug. 12. — An indirect blow to the Roman Catholic Church was seen tonight in a decree issued by Minister of Justice Franz Guertner, forbidding all marriages of couples not of the same race.

Impartial observers saw in the new edict, the most sweeping of its kind issued since the Nazi Government came into power, an impediment to the Catholic Church's ritual, which permits the marriage of all members of the faith, regardless of race or color.

There was no comment from Catholic quarters.

Minister Guertner, in announcing the new Nazi ruling, made clear that its application should be more far-reaching than that of the recent ban on marriages between Aryans and non-Aryans.

SECOND DAY OF EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS

Yesterday, the second day of the Eucharistic Congress, was a day of Reparation and Intercession. Holy Hour was held at St. Dunstan's Basilica last evening at 7 o'clock. The sermon was preached by Rev. Father Murray on the text, "And Jesus began to grow sorrowful." Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament was given by Father Murray. Archbishop McGuigan of Toronto and Bishop O'Sullivan assisted. There was a large congregation present.

Special Masses were celebrated yesterday morning at 5.30, 6.30, 7.30 and 8.15 for the deceased members of the parish. Each was well attended.

Masses will be celebrated at the same hours this morning. At 7.30 Solemn Mass will be celebrated by Dr. McMahon.

At Vernon River, the Diocesan Assembly meets to-day.

Former Islander Comments On Farming In West

There has been a marked improvement, about 25 percent, in agricultural conditions in Iowa, says Rev. Herbert Martin, Ph.D., of Iowa City, head of the Department of Philosophy in the State College of Iowa.

Dr. Martin who is at present on a visit to his old home in Montague is accompanied by Mrs. Martin.

The Doctor states that the manufacturers of agricultural implements are now working overtime in order to supply the demand. He believes there is an upward trend generally in industry in that part of the United States. Dr. Martin also believes as his native province of Prince Edward Island was the last to feel the depression that the recovery will be behind other parts of the continent, but was glad to note that there was already an upward trend here.

The doctor, before taking his present position was for 16 years on the staff of the Drake University, a denominational institution in Iowa, one of his associates being the late Dr. Frederick T. O. Norton, a native of Brudenell River, and a brother of Mr. E. S. Norton of Brudenell.

This is his second visit to the Island since he left here 21 years ago his first being in 1932. He and his wife motored down to Prince Edward Island and will leave on return early next week, probably Tuesday, visiting relatives in Boston and also Mrs. Norton, widow of Dr. Norton, at Chester, Pennsylvania.

Dr. Norton has found time from his duties as a University professor to write a number of books, including Formative Factors in Character, and Philosophy in Friendship. He is also a frequent contributor to magazines and other periodicals.

Bond Issue Fully Subscribed

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

OTTAWA, Aug. 12.—Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, expressed gratification this afternoon at the reception given by the United States investors to the first public offering of Dominion Government bonds in that market for a number of years.

"Reports from the underwriting syndicate," said Mr. Rhodes, "indicate that the $76,000,000 16-year, 2½ per cent bonds, which were offered in the morning had been fully placed and the subscription books closed early in the afternoon. Wide public interest was shown in the offering and the bonds which were sold to the public at 97¾ were selling during the afternoon at a slight premium above the offering price."

Percy Smith Goes To Notts County

(Canadian Press)

NOTTINGHAM, England, Aug. 12—Notts County's progress in third division English league soccer during the coming season will be watched with more than usual interest as directors of the club have signed Percy Smith, former manager of the famous Tottenham Hotspurs, as secretary-manager.

Relegation of the Spurs to the second division was followed by Smith's departure and the pros and cons of his case caused much controversy among the fans at White Hart Lane.

Notts County lost its place in the second division after a bad season and the Midlanders can be counted upon, under Smith's direction, to make a grim fight to regain their status.

Smith succeeds David Pratt who has joined Heart of Midlothian, the Scottish league club. As a player Smith had a notable career with Preston North End and Blackburn Rovers. He gained his experience of the managerial side of the game with Nelson and Bury before going to Tottenham.
