"How do I know? Perhaps that would come in time. I care a great deal for you. I think of you always. I would be a true, devoted wife."
"Yes, I know, Berna; but you don't love me; see, dear. Listen, Berna! Here's where our difference in race comes in. You would rush blindly into this. You would not consider, test and prove yourself. It's the most serious matter in life to me, something to be looked at from every side, to be weighed and balanced."

As I said this, my conscience was whispering fiercely: "Oh fool! Coward! Paltering, despicable coward! This girl throws herself on you, on your honor, chivalry, manhood, and you screen yourself behind a barrier of convention."
However I went on.

"You might come to love me in time, but we must wait a while, little girl. Surely that is reasonable? I care a great deal, but I don't know if I love you. Can't the great way people should love. Can't we wait a little, Berna? I'll look after you, dear; won't that do?"
She disengaged herself from me, sighing woefully.

"Yes, I suppose that'll do. Oh, I'll never forgive myself for saying that to you. I shouldn't, but I was so desperate. You don't know what it meant to me. Please forget it, won't you?"
"No, Berna, I'll never forget it, and I'll always bless you for having said it. Believe me, dear, it will all come right. I'll watch no one harms you, and love will come to both of us in good time, that love that means life and death, hate and adoration, rapture and pain, the greatest thing in the world. Oh, my dear, my dear, trust me. Let us wait a little longer, just a little longer."

"Yes, that's right, a little longer." Her voice was faint and toneless. "Now, good-night; they may have missed me."

Almost before I could realize it she had disappeared amid the tents leaving me there in the gloom with my heart full of doubt, self-reproach and pain.
Oh, despicable, paltering coward!

CHAPTER V

It was spring when we set sail on the sunlit waters of Lake Bennett. Never had I felt so glad. And indeed it was a vastly merry mob that sailed with us, straining their eyes once more to the Eldorado of their dreams. Yet, under all the mirth and gaiety, you could feel, tense ruthless and dominant, the spirit of the trail. Klondike or bust! Once more the slogan rang on bearded lips; once more the gold-lust smoldered in their eyes. The old primal lust resurged.

Of all who had started out with us but a few had got this far. Of these Mervin and Hewson were far in front victors of the trail, qualified to rank with the Men of the High North, the sordoughs of the Yukon valley. Three days start ahead were the Winklestains.

I kept a keen lookout for them and every day I hoped we would overtake their scow, for constantly I thought of Berna. Her face, so sweetly tender, haunted me, and over and over in my mind I kept recalling our last meeting.

At times I blamed myself for letting her go so easily, and then again I was thankful that I had not allowed my heart to run away with my head. For I was beginning to wonder if I had not given her my heart, given it easily, willingly and without reserve. And in truth at the idea I felt a strange thrill of joy. The girl seemed to me all that was fair, lovable and sweet.

We were now skimming over Tagish lake; a dead calm, a blazing sun, a seething mist of mosquitoes. We sweltered in the heat; we strained with blistered hands, at the oars; we cursed and toiled like a thousand others of that grotesque fleet. We entered the Fifty-mile river; we were in a giant valley, tier after tier of benched rose to sentinel mountains of austere grandeur.

The river was our beast of burden now, a tireless, gentle beast. Then one evening as we were sweeping down the placid river, the current suddenly quickened. The banks were sliding past at a strange speed. Swiftly we whirled around a bend, and there we were right on top of the dreadful canyon. Straight ahead was what seemed to be a solid wall of rock. The river looked to have no outlet; but as we drew nearer we saw that there was a narrow chasm in the stony face, and at this the water was rearing and charging with an angry roar.

I was in the bow. All at once I saw directly in front a scow struggling to make the shore. In her there were three people, two women and a man. I saw the man jump out with a rope and try to snub the scow to a tree. Three times he failed, running along the bank and shouting frantically. I saw one of the women jump for the shore. Then at the same instant the rope parted, and the scow, with the remaining woman, went swirling on into the canyon.

All this I saw, and so fascinated was I that I forgot our own peril. I heard a shrill scream of fear; I saw the solitary woman crouch down in the bottom of the scow, burying her face in her hands; I saw the scow rise, hover, and then plunge downward into the angry maw of the canyon.

The river hurried us on helplessly. We were in the canyon now. About midway was a huge basin, like the old crater of a volcano, sloping upward to the pine-fringed skyline. Here was a giant eddy, and here, circling round and round, was the runaway scow. The forsaken woman was still crouching on it. "Keep clear of that scow," I heard some one shout. "Avoid the eddy." It was almost too late. The ill-fated scow spun around and swooped down on us. Jim and the Jam-wagon gave a desperate strain at the oars. I saw the scow swirling past, just two feet from us. I look again—then with a wild panic of horror I saw that the crouching figure was that of Berna.

I remember jumping—it must have been five feet—and I landed half in, half out of the water, I remember clinging a moment, then pulling myself aboard. I heard shouts from the others as the current swept them into the canyon. I remember looking around and cursing because both sweeps had been lost overboard, and lastly I remember bending over Berna and shouting in her ear.

"All right, I'm with you." For a moment, she stared at me unbelievably. Then, with a half-sob, half-cry of joy, she clasped her arms tightly around me. Something in her look, something in the touch of her slender, clinging form made my heart evolt.

Once more we had whirled off into the roaring torrent. The water smashed and battered us, whirled us along relentlessly, lashed us in heavy sprays, yet with closed eyes and thudding hearts we waited. Then suddenly we were sweeping along smoothly, and on either side of us the valley sloped in green plateaus up to the smiling sky.

I unlocked my arms and peered down to where her face lay half hidden on my breast.

Forbidden To Beg From Women

(Canadian Press)
EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 6.—Edmonton courts will not allow beggars to stop women to ask for or beg for food or money, according to the sentence of Magistrate Geo. B. McLeod meted out to an offender. Crown evidence showed that the man in the car had stopped women passing by the postoffice to demand money. On one occasion he had grabbed a woman by the coat and pulled her around to listen to him.

"Thank God I was able to reach you."
"Yes, thank God!" she answered faintly. "Oh, I thought it was all over. I nearly died with fear. It was terrible. Thank God for you!"
But she had scarcely spoken when I realized with a vast shock, 9130-10-3-7-10th, that the danger was far from over. We were hurrying along helplessly in that fierce current, and already I heard the roar of the Squaw rapids.

MY WISH

Let me work in a shop by the side of the road,
Where the race of men go by—
Those who are footsore, and lame, and tired,
But still have the will to try.
Let me work in my shop by the side of the road,
Repairing their well-worn shoes—
The painter's, the plumber's, the millionaire's—
What does it matter whose?

The pioneer seeking a land of hope,
Adventurers seeking wealth,
Those who are searching for loved ones lost,
The sick who are seeking health.

Let me work in a shop by the side of the road,
Plying my chosen trade,
For on many a shoe that is well repaired,
The climb to success is made.

Public Notice As To Applications For Oyster Farming Leases

Applications for leases of Prince Edward Island areas for oyster farming purposes will now be received by the Department of Fisheries, Ottawa.

Leases will be granted in Malpeque Bay and its tributary rivers and in such other areas as are not now public commercial oyster beds and are approved by the Department as suitable for oyster farming. A plan showing the lots available for leasing in the Malpeque Bay area may be consulted, without charge, at the office of the Supervisor of Fisheries, Charlottetown, or at the Biological Station at Eiderslie or the office of any Inspector of Fisheries in the province.

Summary of Major Leasing Conditions

Before a lease is granted, the area applied for is to be examined by the Department's oyster expert.

Each lease will be for a term of 20 years and will be renewable for a further like period.

Rentals on the following basis will be payable under each lease: $1.00 per annum during the first three years for each acre or fraction of an acre leased, $3.00 per annum per acre or fraction of an acre during the next two years, and from that time onward a reasonable royalty per barrel will also be charged on production.

Information as to the most effective methods of oyster farming, obtained by the Department through the investigation which it has been conducting in the Malpeque Bay area, will be made available to applicants for leases, or intending applicants, upon request.
