SHOWER AT VICTORIA

On Wednesday evening Nov. 6th friends of Miss Isabel Inman gathered at the hall Victoria to tender her a shower in honor of her approaching marriage. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion with evergreens and pink roses. While the bride-to-be was being escorted to the platform by Miss Lorraine Lowther, young friends of the bride sang an appropriate selection. Miss Jean Boswell in a very tactful manner put Miss Inman through a "matrimonial Quiz" to see how much she really knew about darning hubby's socks, making tea biscuits and Sheldon's favorite cake to which Isabel made a fitting reply. A heavily laden and very prettily decorated carriage was then wheeled in by winsome little Sylvia Boulter attired in a white dress with pink trimmings.

The gifts were opened by Miss Adele MacEachern and Miss Christine MacLeod while Miss Jean Boswell arranged them on a table tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers and wedding bells hung from a canopy of softly shaded lights.

The accompanying verses were read by Miss Lorraine Lowther.

The gifts included linens, china, pyrex silver, glassware and substantial sums of money. The bride-to-be thanked one and all for their beautiful gifts and invited them to come and visit her in her new place of residence.

After singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow" and showering her with confetti a delicious lunch was served by the ladies present. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and social chat after which all wended their way homeward under moonlit skies feeling they had spent a very pleasant evening. (Patriot Please Copy).

RECEIVES LETTER OF THANKS FROM R. A. F.

The following letter was received recently by Mrs. Louis Pineau of Rustico and is self explanatory.

Oct. 17, 1946.

Dear Madam:—I must apologize for not writing before to thank you for the lovely gloves I was so fortunate in obtaining through your kindness and generosity.

It was only this morning, that on wearing the gloves for the first time, I found your little note in them. I had the good fortune to receive them from the Canadian Red Cross in October of last year, 1945. I was at that time on my way home from Japan, after having served nearly four years there as a prisoner of war.

I was serving with the R. A. F. at Singapore when I was taken prisoner. I am glad to say that I have nearly forgotten those horrible years which followed until my release last year from Japan.

I would like to mention here that the kindness and generosity shown by the people of Canada will forever live in the memory of us, who passed through your country on our way home.

We arrived at Vancouver aboard the aircraft carrier "Implacable" then travelled by train through Canada to Halifax and I must say everyone of us had a grand trip. Before I close may I take this opportunity of wishing you the best of health and happiness in the future. I shall be very pleased to hear from you if you can find time to drop me a line.

Yours sincerely,

ELLEN'S DIARY

of the crop safe in buildings and cellars." He leaned back and his arm circled Jamie who must get, as he told me when I set his plate "closer n' that" to his grandfather's place at the table.

Rob had finished gathering his crop this afternoon too. Not alone but with some assistance from Karolyn and then Mr. B. his neighbor—and there is no one in all the length or breadth of this Island blessed with a better helping hand— had been over giving him "spurts" as he said. Jamie too had helped to "hoe off the turnip tops" for he told me about it and Karolyn explained in an aside that he had "fairly played himself out" at the work but then he and Mutt were on hand to catch rides in the truck, on the trips between field and cellar. So Rob came then to help ours. In the later afternoon when Jeanie had come to relieve me of putting my shoulder to the wheel and also had taken over the chore of storing the turnips away in the cellar-head not too far away from the old beams then. She, of course, would not be able to picture the white-washed dairy that once was in a near corner there. But neither could I picture the bowls of milk that once sat there awaiting the cream's rising. James can. He mentioned it to Jamie last evening. "Don't you remember, Ellen?" he asked me and then recalled "but no that was before you came to Alderlea".

There had been bread to bake "between times" this morning and I am inclined to think sometimes that the "divinity, that shapes" our ways is kind at such a time to busy housewives, granting them a deft touch as they shape and bake their loaves. It was really remarkable, considering the scanty attention I was able to bestow on it, how well the bread was able to take care of itself. "Let's cut the small loaf" Jamie begged me, as together we spread the supper table "An' jes' let me taste it. Me believes it'll be good without either butter or molasses!" Hunger, was Jamie's "sauce" so we sliced, what was a sort of a "cook's cake" fashioned from a bit of leftover dough, and Jamie sampled it as it was. And then we made toast of the "old" that remained from the previous baking. When a chill wind whips around house corners, it inclines me to serve toast to my "family". Besides as he said, Jamie had never before "worked" our toaster. Electric? Oh, my no. Not yet but perhaps that much hoped for current will be borne to us on the turning wheels of time, when every rural by-road as well as our highroads will carry the energy of it to every last farmstead and home on The Island. All Jamie and I had to do, however was to remove a stove cover, insert our toaster and there we were! And what else did we have for our meal? A bowl of cranberry sauce, crimson and juicy which Jamie, by simply dipping a long finger into it "jes' to taste it" had already pronounced good. And then by way of celebrating the end of our harvesting for the year we opened a bottle —of port?—of cherry preserve, quite popular with all of us.

There were rolls to tickle Rob's palate and a substantial country plate of ham and eggs for all comers. Tea was our drink and Jamie requested that his, which contains merely "the name" of it be "good n' hot for this cold night". And so we came to the very end of our harvest home this evening. With Rob and Karolyn and Jamie gathered around our board and bins and granary holding the increase that came from our Spring-time planting. And the wind continues to be cold and dark scudding clouds that shed snow at intervals, try to cover the light of the moon and hide the stars from sight. "I suppose" I look up to remark to Jamie now that the others have gone home "you'll have nothing to do tomorrow?" "Nothing to do!" he repeats with a derisive snort "Ellen" he says making a smart step towards the stairway "is that all the interest you take in the farm work?—and us with hardly a sod turned as yet."

Until tomorrow. . . Diary . . . Good-night. . . .
