TEACHERS ASSOCIATION.

To the Teachers of the Seventh (Mr. Crockett's) Inspectorate.

The majority of the teachers of this Inspectorate feeling that knowledge and better methods of teaching can be more readily acquired by combination of effort than singly have formed an organization known as the Southern Teachers Association.

Those of the teaching profession should bear in mind that although licensed to be educators of the youth of this province, they have much yet to learn, and this can be done through the operation which is now being conducted by the Association.

President S. T. A. Mermald, Jan. 13th.

NEWSPAPER.

Published Daily in French Trenches. "THE ECHO OF ARGONNE."

A correspondent sends the Guardian the following letter, with excerpts from a daily newspaper published in the French trenches.

Number 1. Monday, October 26, 1914

THE ECHO OF ARGONNE.

"The Best Informed Newspaper of the Region."

The newspaper consists of one quarter sheet typed in two columns. The following are a few typical paragraphs:

NEWS OF THE WAR.

The struggle continues along the whole line, which has been prolonged into the North Sea by the British fleet. Nowhere can the "Boches" break through.

The Russians have just inflicted a second defeat on the Germans. This was only to be expected, seeing that the Kaiser had gone himself to take command in Poland.

AT SEA.

The valiant German fleet continues to remain in its harbors. It doubtless awaits the end of the war to reveal its existence.

Four German destroyers a short time ago risked out for a breath of fresh air. They chanced to meet a British cruiser, which sank them all in three-quarters of an hour.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

The Kaiser is not at all pleased with his cousin the Tzar of Russia, who has just demolished another army for him.

Although the Boches are at present inhabiting a part of the Argonne, no consideration are they allowed to subscribe to this newspaper.

We have received the most flattering approval to publish this newspaper from the highest military authorities in the district. Thanks to an American millionaire, one of our friends, we are in a position to supply daily to every company, battery, and squadron in the region a free copy of our newspaper.

LATEST ACTUALITIES.

Our comrades in the wood on our right paid a short visit the other night to the Boches. From all accounts they had a rattling good time. Their "picnic" was quite successful, and they made up their minds to have another soon.

The section commanded by Herr von Goldenhau, of the Boches, has had no luck. It came to spy out the trench commanded by our chum Sergeant-Major Lallier. It was allowed to come quite close up, but retired quicker than it advanced. Our lot were in particularly good form, for the Herr Leutenant and 28 inch failed to get back to their cover. Not one of our fellows was scratched. For this fine piece of work, Sergeant-Major Lallier was immediately awarded the Military Medal.

I am informed that this is not the only "daily" that appears in the French trenches. Truly this is a remarkable war.

AWFUL RESULTS OF THE EARTHQUAKE

AVAZZANO via Rome, Jan. 15.—From all parts of the Continent there are arriving in Avazzano today visitors seeking persons living in the town when it was razed by the earthquake Wednesday morning. They believed the descriptions of the destruction wrought were exaggerated, when confronted with the mounds of massed human beings upon the ruins.

NAPLES, Jan. 15.—Rescuing gangs brought out numerous victims of the earthquake which buried in ruins the church of Santa Restituta, where hundreds of persons rushed to pray at the first shock. The roof fell in at the second shock. Among the victims brought out, were twenty nuns and a priest who had been celebrating Mass. Passants found looting the building were arrested.

GENEVA, Jan. 15.—The International St. Gotthard Railway Line was cut by a huge avalanche and traffic between Germany and Italy through Switzerland is interrupted. The line was covered with snow twenty-four feet deep for a distance of 2701 feet. An Alpine village had been buried under the avalanche, whose inhabitants had been warned of the danger, and are believed to have escaped, but so far no word was received from the district. The number of avalanches in the Alps is attributed to the earthquake in Italy. No statement has been issued as yet as to whether there were any earthquake shocks in the Swiss mountains.

HINTS FOR WOMEN.

If every woman knew a few simple things about the care and repairing of gas pipes, she would be saved a good deal of trouble. If, for instance, a gas burner gives a very weak light try unscrewing the burner and cleaning it out. If this does not help it means that the trouble is higher up in the pipes; so remove the burner again and rap sharply on the long curved pipe that leads to the ceiling. If the lack of light is caused by rust in the pipes this will improve the flow of gas, as it dislodges many of the rust particles. If after this the burner continues to give no better light, the trouble is out of your province and needs the attention of a gas man.

Should the pipes sprig a leak you can make at home a good durable cement that will permanently stop the leak. Mix white lead and boiled linseed oil to the consistency of a cement and apply to the crack. When this has hardened, test it by holding a lighted match near the leak to be sure that no gas is still escaping. A temporary filling may be made for a leak by covering the spot with a paste of ordinary laundry soap or with any kind of gum.

The annoying singing noise that is so often heard from a gas jet can usually be stopped by turning the cock backward and slightly cutting off the flow of gas. Electricity has been so exclusively considered a man's province that usually a woman will refer even the simplest question concerning the lighting of the house to a man—any man, from the grocer boy to her husband—rather than apply her own intelligence to the matter. If, for instance, one of your bulbs will not light there are two remedies to be tried before buying a new one or calling in the electrician.

First try screwing it into the socket more tightly. If this does not help, probably one of the wires is broken. If the bulb is on a wall fixture unscrew it and attach it to a drop light.

Hold it between you and a strong light so that you can see the wires, turn on the electricity and gently shake the bulb back and forth so that the ends of the broken wires will touch. If only one or two wires are broken the current will weld them together again.

Should you, for any reason, wish to remove an electric fixture, you may easily do it yourself. First turn off the switch—not the button for the individual light, nor the room switch—but the switch (usually on the top story, near the meter), which controls the current through the entire house. When this is thrown off, you may work at the light without danger. Unscrew the fixture and you will find two wires heavily bound with tape and rubber. Unwind these and separate the two wires. Then re-bind the wires separately, thoroughly covering every part with the bicycle tape, taking care that the naked wires do not come in contact at any point.

When the wires are thoroughly covered you may turn on the current again. If the fixture is not to be replaced push the covered wires back in the wall and repaper over the hole. If the fixture is to be mended or a new one put up the wires may be left as they are.

When the wires are thoroughly covered frozen pipes that will save many a bill! Before the cold weather starts wipe the exposed pipes dry. Make a mixture of equal parts of paraffin wax and vaseline and apply to the pipes with a brush. Keep the mixture warm while working by setting the dish in another dish half filled with warm water.

DRINKING WATER IN WINTER.

During most winter weather the supply of poultry drinking water freezes very quickly if set out at the same temperature as drawn from the well. To permit the fowls to have water whenever they want it, and as much as they want, it is necessary to warm the water to about 80 degrees. It will require some time for the temperature of this to fall to the freezing point. Of course, it will not stay warm all day in very cold weather in the ordinary poultry house, but by supplying newly warmed water two or three times a day one can get along very well indeed. This is not too much work, and it should be looked after. Another important aid is stoneware drinking fountains, which retain the warmth of the water much longer than pans or the ordinary galvanized iron fountains.

The importance of a constant supply of pure drinking water becomes immediately obvious when we stop to consider that the greater part of the eggs she produces as well as the hen's flesh is composed of water and that all the food she eats must be greatly diluted before it can be assimilated. Lack of water always results in a check to the digestive operations. Cold, chilling water also acts as a temporary check, and affects egg-producing as well. Remember, finally, that the more water the fowls drink the better it is for them, and the more pounds of flesh and more dozens of eggs they are likely to produce.

WOULDN'T LET JOFFE ENTER.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—A British soldier writes to a friend in London: "I made something of a name by refusing to allow Gen. Joffre to enter the house used as headquarters, owing to the fact that he had no permit from our General, whose orders to me were to allow nobody whatever to enter without a permit. "General Joffre was not upset, however, and went off to a general with his aid-de-camp (who was upset though that made no difference to me) and obtained the necessary permit."

CALOMEL SALIVATES

Calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work. Calomel is a nasty, dangerous chemical. To live your sluggish liver and bowels when constipated, headachy, bilious, just get a 10-cent box of harmless Cascarets. They work while you sleep, don't gripe, sicken or salivate.

GERMAN SAILORS MARCHED THROUGH LONDON.

LONDON, January 14.—Upwards of 200 German officers and seamen rescued after the naval engagement between the German and British squadrons off the Falkland Islands, in the Southern Atlantic, on December 8, arrived today in England and were taken to detention camps. As the German sailors marched through the streets they appeared to be quite contented, cheering their comrades as the squads separated.
