ST. PETERSBURG VERY ANXIOUS

About Port Arthur and Gen. Kuropatkin

Steady Japanese Advance Causes Grave Concern Lest the Russian Commander be Pocketed.

NO FRESH WAR NEWS

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 10. (Special)—There is no fresh war news either from Port Arthur or the northern armies today.

ST. PETERSBURG IS ANXIOUS

The anxiety and nervousness over the situation here is increasing because of the Japanese occupation of Wolf Hill at Port Arthur and their steady advance against Kuropatkin.

HE MAY BE POCKETED

It is now feared that he may be pocketed and suffer a severe disaster as the Japanese are said to be working toward his rear and threatening his communications with Mukden.

[Kuropatkin has evidently decided to await battle at Liao Yang, rather than abandon or undertake to remove the great bulk of stores there accumulated. He is said to have 200,000 men and his position is very strongly entrenched. The three armies of Kurki, Nodzu and Oku are somewhat superior in aggregate numbers, but only one man behind entrenched positions ought to be equal to two attacking from outside. The war now begins to assume the character of two great sieges, one at Port Arthur, the other at Liao Yang. St. Petersburg has good reason for nervous anxiety.]
