ASPIRIN

MOST people rely on Aspirin to make short work of their headaches, but did you know it is just as effective in the worse pains from neuralgia or neuritis? Rheumatic pains, too. Don't suffer when Aspirin can bring such complete comfort without delay, and without harm; it does not affect the heart. In every package of Aspirin you will find proven directions with which everyone should be familiar, for they can spare much needless suffering.

Have a time and place for everything and do everything in its time accomplish more, but have more leisure than those who are always hurrying, as if vainly attempting to overtake time that has been lost—Tryon Edwards.

THE GOLDEN GIRL

"Connie has swell ideas, doesn't she?" Jerry said, strapping the watch to his wrist and admiring it. "But it's funny my sending her a watch too, isn't it?"

She had sent Fred a completely equipped first-aid kit with a note that said, "Just in case" on it. Presently disposed of, they sat down to breakfast, lingering over their coffee and discussing plans for the coming flight. After breakfast they left

Saskatchewan Man Now Feels 100% Better

Mr. L. Slaud speaks highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills

Kidney trouble caused him weakness of the body and eyes.

FORGET, Sask., May 6—(Special)—"In former years I have been affected with kidney trouble causing weakness of the body and eyes," writes Mr. L. Slaud, a well-known resident of this place. "Since I adopted the custom of taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel 100 per cent better. Let this letter convince all sufferers from kidney trouble that Two Dodd's Kidney Pills, three times a day is better than a person in the hospital.

The road to good health lies through the kidneys. If they are kept well and strong, all the impurities are strained out of the blood. If they are weak and out of order the impurities stay in the blood and disease is the sure result.

Dodd's Kidney Pills keep the kidneys in good condition to do their work of cleaning and purifying the blood.

Weak, nervous, run-down men and women should give them a trial at once.

TOO MUCH MUSH!

And What It Means

With our daily three meals composed almost entirely of soft, "mushy" foods which require little or no chewing, which are swallowed almost with one gulp—is it any wonder that poor teeth and poor digestion are found in such an astonishingly large number of homes to-day?

We recognize the importance of exercising our bodies. We know that the finest physique—the strongest muscles—will deteriorate without use. Why should we think our teeth are exempt from this law?

From early childhood on through adult life, our teeth need exercise. When the three-year-old child chews vigorously he is influencing the welfare of both his temporary and his permanent teeth. He is developing the bones and muscles of his face and jaws, thus providing space for a fine, even set of permanent teeth instead of crowded, crooked ones. He is increasing the symmetry of his face and head. According to some authorities, he is favourably influencing the condition of the nasal passages and helping to prevent enlarged adenoids.

But without the exercise of chewing—without the pull of the strong jaw muscles which affects practically the entire face and head—all these parts lack the stimulation and circulation they must have in order to develop properly. That is why children should chew!

Adults should chew because stimulation and circulation are absolutely necessary to keep the gums and surrounding tissues of the teeth in healthy condition. No matter how well your teeth may have been built—no matter how strong and sound the enamel—disaster can come to them if exercise is lacking. Gums grow soft and tender. They lose their tone and bleed easily. Serious gingival disease may follow—infection—"pyorrhea"—and loss of teeth!

That is why you hear warnings sounded on all sides. Heed them! Set your teeth to work! Eat foods which require chewing. For no artificial stimulation of the gums dental authorities say, can be as completely efficacious as the natural stimulation that comes from proper mastication of food.

Crisp Deliciousness!

R is ready to serve—crisp, delicious, healthful. Try it tomorrow with milk or cream. Four teaspoonfuls is a serving—less than one cent's worth! Grocers everywhere sell it—wax-wrapped.

to do some final tinkering before taking the Golden Girl up in the afternoon.

"I'll be back for you at one," Fred told So-so when they left. "Be sure you're ready and all dolled up in what the well-dressed aviatrix will wear."

So-so promised. The house seemed very quiet after they had gone and So-so sat musing, regretting that her father could not have shared this happy Christmas with her. At moon she went up to put on the new flying costume. "I really am pretty in this," she thought with a last look in the mirror before she went down to show Chlo.

"Land of goodness," that worthy exclaimed, "you look just like the pictures in the paper." Miss Solange, I bet Miss Constance got to get one like that, pants and everything, minute she gets back."

Fred could not keep the admiration from his eyes when he came for her. "Wait until the boys at the field see you, So-so. They're all around to see us take the Golden Girl up. You'll knock 'em cold, every one."

So-so had to stand for a good deal of chaffing that afternoon. "I don't know whether you look more like a parrot or a peacock, So-so," Clark told her.

"Never you mind, So-so," declared

Franchise, who had recently become Mrs. Clark, "he's just jealous. I'm going to have one like it, only blue. I think it's slick."

"She looks more like a bird of paradise to me," Mack said, inspecting So-so gravely.

"That's what Fred think she is," Jerry said, and there was a general laugh, for every one on the field knew of Fred's long seige for So-so's affections.

The gravity died away when the Golden Girl was wheeled out of her hangar. Even with her first coat of paint she was a glistening and beautiful object against the Christmas snow.

"Bad day for a test flight," Clark said critically, "strong head winds from over the sound and you've got a big load there."

"She'll make it," Fred declared. "In with you, So-so, we'll show these doubting Thomases what a pair of golden heels looks like."

The engine was tuned, Jerry shouted "Contract," the Golden Girl started down the field, straining at her load. After three trails when the giant ship failed to take the air Jerry choked off the engine. "Too much load," he decided.

"I'll get out," So-so offered. "You didn't plan on having the weight of an extra person aboard. Try it with me out of the cockpit."

Fred scoffed, "You? Why, you don't weigh more than a feather."

"I weigh a 115," So-so told him. "And that's probably a 115 pound more than you plan to carry."

"We'll try it once more," Jerry said. "So-so may be right, though I hope we could allow that much leeway over our gas when we start on the big flight."

Once more they taxied down the field. This time the big ship took to air without a murmur. "She just needed warming up. I knew she'd do it," Jerry shouted back, wheeling the Golden Girl in a wide circle over the field.

They flew about for half an hour Jerry twice sending her straight in the wind and bucking the gale gallantly. Down to a landing and the comments of an admiring crowd.

"She'll do," he announced. "Noting sweeter than that engine." The was real affection in his voice. "So girl!" and he laid his hand on the good hood.

They went then to telegraph Co. Constance, "First test successful. Hur back to have your share of the fuel he wired.

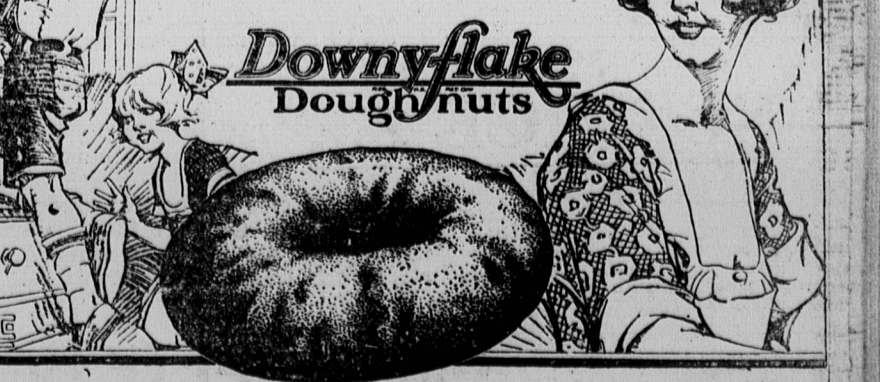

Late that night he had an answering wire. "Congratulations. Come back Friday. Love to all around, Constance."

No need to "Swipe" them Now!

You remember way back when you were a kid and you stubbed your toe or pricked your finger—remember the doughnut Mother used to give you to heal that "wound." You remember, they were so delicious you simply had to "swipe" another when she wasn't looking.

Our doughnuts are exactly like hers, so light and crispy they seem to "melt-away-into-nothingness" in your mouth. No one ought to "swipe" them now, they should be served to everybody.

On sale at all high grade food shops.
