ROBERT TAYLOR A YANK at OXFORD

Robert Taylor At Prince Edward

First of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's British-made productions, "A Yank at Oxford" new screening at the Prince Edward Theatre, establishes an exceedingly high mark at which future British-produced films may shoot. More than fulfilling this company's promise to make films in England which should in every way be equal to the best Hollywood standards, this Robert Taylor starring vehicle presents him in his most thoroughly convincing role to date, and offers an authentic picture of Oxford which should stir the memories of any Oxonian the world over.

In addition to Taylor, stalwart and able in his first athletic role, "A Yank at Oxford" offers memorable performances by Lionel Barrymore and Maureen O'Sullivan, and outstanding characterizations by a group of British players headed by Vivian Leigh, Edmund Gwinn and Griffith Jones. Edmund Gwinn and Griffith Jones, full advantage of the comedy situations of the plot and the thrills of its athletic sequences, notably the climatic Oxford-Cambridge boat race. The tempo never lags and audience interest never wanes.

For the convenience of those living out the Summerside Highway, a special I. M. T. Bus leaves White's Restaurant after the first show—9:15 p. m. Tonight and every Friday.

Orders at dressmaking houses from smart clientele preparing for London's little season, reveal romantic hooped evening gowns are liked by some but slender styles are in greater demand. Designers comment that hooped gowns are too dignified for the active "Lambeth Walk", the type of dancing which persists even at the smartest night dances.

Botanical Notes For November

(Experimental Farms News) When fondled by the few soothing seductive days of Indian summer, some unconventional but dauntless herbs will wistfully resume their courtship, and hurriedly set to work in anticipation of disaster.

Trees, shrubs and herbs appear, like some of us, to endure pain or adversity with steadfast or unbroken spirit. They are apparently dauntless and have fortitude. Indeed, they seem to possess a strength of mind or spirit which enables them to carry on with grim firmness as do the millions of human heroes and heroines of cold, grey, stern, everyday life whose gallant bravery, devotion and self-sacrifice will never be chronicled.

It is a brave act of valour to contend death; but where life is more terrible than death, it is then the truest valour to dare to live. But even after death many herbs stand contemptuously serene.

Towards the end of November, when winter has seriously gripped the earth, the wayfarer will notice these gaunt skeletons, often the grim remains of goldenrods and similar flowering plants, on the snowy bosom of the world. This is the final stage over the greatest part of Canada in the terrestrial existence of all herbaceous plants.

The plant-lover treasures a record of this and all other milestones in the career of his vegetable friends; as he does the life-histories of his near relatives.

The first record of a plant's life is its seed-stage, which corresponds with our restoration. For every seed contains a baby-plant (embryo) together with enough nourishment to support life until germination or birth. Even the very tiniest seed is made this way, and is ready and willing to be born and grow up as soon as influenced by the right conditions of moisture, tempera-
