S' SIDE PASTOR CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY

Many Congratulations Received by Rev. W. H. And Mrs. Harding On Golden Anniversary.

Rev. W. H. Harding and Mrs. Harding of Summerside were waited upon on Monday afternoon by Rev. L. B. Campbell and a special committee of Trinity United Church and also by Rev. J. B. Wilson and a committee from the United Baptist Church on the occasion of their golden anniversary and presented with the following addresses which were accompanied by presentations of gold. A letter of congratulation was also received from the Christian Church.

Mr. Harding made a very suitable reply to these addresses, and he and Mrs. Harding were very much touched by the kindness and love shown them by these congregations. He also referred to the fact, that as we grow older, we need and appreciate such acts of love and kindness, as we have not the power of resistance as when we are younger. Too often older people are pushed to one side, and not even considered at all, and many an aged man and woman are sore in their hearts with no one to think about them. He thanked the two congregations for their thoughtfulness and Christian love, in this memorable anniversary time.

Mrs. Harding was hostess for afternoon tea to a large number of visitors, who called to extend their felicitations.

"Miss Sept Morn" And Girl Who Posed

PARIS, April 19.—"Miss September Morn," the lass who posed for the world famous painting of that name, has grown up, settled down, and become the mother of five strapping children, it was learned today.

The oft repeated query as to what happened to the lady whose replica made its appearance in saloons, and later in speakies during the last quarter of a century was answered by Paul Chabas, the artist who immortalized her on canvas.

Chabas refused to reveal the model's name, no one he said, ever will know who she was. He referred to her simply as "Marthe."

"Marthe," he said, "is the wife of a rich industrialist. She has a house in the country and one in Paris, and is the mother of five children."

"Well, it was a long time ago—21 years to be exact—when I painted September Morn. If it were not that the painting indirectly made me famous and brought me a life of comfort, I would say it was the bane of my existence."

"Marthe was only 16, a beautiful child and intelligent. She was very poor, and she had to support her mother. My wife and I were very fond of her. She was almost like our daughter."

Chabas said he had no idea where the original of the famous painting is at present.

"It was first sold," he said, "to a Russian oil magnate. After the revolution he fled to Paris."

"Hardly a week passes but that I hear where the original of the picture is supposed to be hanging. Some people say it is in an American museum. A Monsieur Russell, Ohio, wanting to sell me the original."

"But I do not believe he has it. I do not know where it is."

Tells Right Way Of Boiling Fish

(Written for the Canadian Press By Mrs. Eveleen Spencer)

OTTAWA, April 19.—"I am very particular about the way I boil fish," said a prim looking woman with a determined chin, at one of my demonstrations. "I pride myself that I can do it with the best cooks in the country," she added firmly.

"Tell me your way," I asked in propitiatory voice, for I instinctively knew that this was one of those women who expect humoring.

"Well," she began in mollified tones, as several other women gathered round, "I get a piece of three or four pounds of fish, and I wrap it in cheesecloth and put it in a big kettle of water, which has been salted and a little vinegar added to it. I give it a good boiling, usually from three-quarters to an hour, to cook it right in the bone, then unwrap it, put it on a hot platter and serve it in a good sauce." She paused, canted her head and looked around as if to say: "Can you beat this way of boiling fish?"

"Have you ever noticed," I began, "how perfect each service of fish looks coming from the hands of a professional cook? There is nothing ragged or broken looking in the portions. This is only accomplished by cutting the fish into service pieces, three to the pound, before cooking—nice, compact pieces, usually an inch thick. If serving boiled fish, chefs usually cook it by poaching it for about 10 minutes in a shallow pan with a strong Court Bouillon, which is practically a fish broth, seasoned with herbs and vegetables. Cooked in such short time, the fish does not lose its own flavoring, as it must when boiled for a long period in a large kettle of water. Then, too, it is easy to remove from a shallow pan with the aid of a perforated turner."

"Fish may also be poached simply in its own juices by placing cut portions in a glass oven dish or casserole, sprinkling with salt, dots of butter and a squeeze of lemon juice, but adding no water. Put it in a moderate oven for 10 to 15 minutes, according to the thickness of the portions. The fish does not bake but steams and its juices run out as it poaches or cooks in them. It may be served with thin fish gravy, or the juice may be poured off and milk added to make a sauce, which is thickened with butter and flour mixed together and seasoned with a little more lemon juice or a dash of Worcestershire or tomato catsup. This is a quick mode of boiling or poaching, and the fish is more flavorful than when cooked in a kettle of water, to say nothing of the fact that it comes out unbroken and attractive in appearance."

As I paused, the women were nodding their heads in understanding. All but the prim one. She could not learn new ways.
