Nova Scotia Miners Prepare To Resume Activities in the Pits at Midnight Monday

Springhill Local the Only Union to Show Dissatisfaction at Majority Vote Recorded by District 26, U. M. W., Threatening to Withdraw from the Federation—Substantial Advances Granted Sydney Steel Workers.

(Special to The Guardian.)
SYDNEY, N. S., Sept. 3.—The Nova Scotia general coal strike ends officially at midnight Monday. Meanwhile, such men as are required to put the pits in shape for coal cutting on Tuesday have been authorized to return to work immediately on the call of the local mine manager.

The following official telegram was despatched, today, from United Mine Workers' headquarters to the various locals throughout the province: "Unofficial count of votes on proposed wage rates shows substantial majority in favor. In these circumstances you are hereby notified that the strike shall end at midnight, Monday next. Meantime your mine committee should see mine manager and arrange for return at once of such men as may be required to put the mine in shape for the coal cutters on Tuesday morning."
(Sgd.) DAN LIVINGSTONE, President.
J. B. MACLACHLAN, Secretary.

All the colliers will be in condition to resume work on Tuesday. It is said, but it is thought that only about half the normal output will be obtained at most of them for a day or two. At Number 4, 5, 6 and 24, conditions are normal and full output is expected. At New Aberdeen, Number 2, pumps are still idle waiting for the drying out of Number 9 where the water was lowered about 23 feet in the last 24 hours.

The same fall was noted in Number 1 at Dominion. In Number 10 Reserve, the water fell 25 feet during the day. All New Waterford mines are drying rapidly. At Birch Grove the water is falling rapidly and gangs of men are clearing away falls of coal.

Attention Tensely Concentrated On Omar Roberts' Trial

The People in the Village of Kemptville Mourn Flora Grey and Profoundly Sympathize With Family.—Father Grief Stricken.—Reported That Girl Before Dying Named "Omar," When Asked Whom She Meant by "He."

(Special to The Guardian.)
KEMPTVILLE, Sept. 3.—Never in its history has the county, and in particular the neighborhood of this lovely spot, been so passionately interested in any matter relating to its life as it now is in the preliminary examination on Wednesday next into the circumstances which resulted in the death of pretty little Flora Grey, whose funeral was one of the most poignantly sorrowful spectacles of which this countryside has ever been the setting.

The case derives a dramatic significance through a variety of circumstances—the happy relations which had marked the simple, thrifty life of all the people who are chiefly affected by the tragedy; the youth, beauty and innocence of the girl, and her simple trustfulness in her old employer, possibly through the very fact that he was old, and might be supposed to look upon her with a fatherly or even grandfatherly interest and liking; the unblemished reputation which the veteran lawyer, living in intimate and close touch with the out of doors which proverbially fosters the genial, generous virtues—all this serve to make the case unique.

The community was very fond of little Flora, as a community gets to be fonder than it realizes, until mishap befalls, of its young and light-hearted, to whom every day is a fresh beginning of enjoyment and to whom the world is fairly radiant and altogether delightful. It mourns her, and it profoundly sympathizes with her father, in the anguish which he must be enduring in his knowledge of the fact, and his memory of his girl as she was returned to him, her fairness and youth cruelly marred by the fire, flood, and someone's hard usage.

Attention is now tensely concentrated on the courtroom and what is to be staged there on Wednesday next—the next act in a human drama of intense interest. Following the news already given out is the statement of the father of Flora that in her last moments of life in answer to the question by him "Whom do you mean by He?" she replied "Omar."

Further particulars with regard to the conduct of Omar Roberts on the night of the death of Flora Grey are gradually becoming known. According to the authorities, when he was being conveyed in the motor-car from Kemptville to Yarmouth, following his arrest by Constable McMillan, the police man informed him that Flora Grey was dead.

"Did she regain consciousness?" Roberts is said to have asked.

"Yes," replied Constable McMillan, "and she told the whole story."

Roberts made no reply. About ten minutes afterwards, the accused asked to see Mr. Landry.

Yesterday morning several attempts were made to photograph the guide as he was entering the court at Yarmouth.

"If I had my boots on," he exclaimed, "I'd kick that camera to pieces."

The old man's feet were swathed in bandages, for it is recalled that he was himself severely burned in the holocaust.

They were chair car passengers. Heavy rains are said to have weakened the trestle which was 129 feet long. Frank A. Fenwick, prosecuting attorney of Perry County stated he was informed that sections hands had reported the trestle as in an unsafe condition several months ago and that he would make a thorough investigation, but San Francisco officials vigorously denied that the trestle was unsafe.
