Insidious Eye Strain

We use this adjective advisedly.

Sufferers from Eye Strain may have perfect vision and therefore do not suspect the presence of any evil defect.

The motive power of the entire human organism is Nerve Energy.

Normal eyes, it is computed utilize about 20% of this Nerve Energy, but when Eye Strain is present, a much larger proportion is required. Hence defective eyes through their consumption of an excessive amount of Nerve Energy may seriously affect the functioning of other organs of the body and produce ill health.

MRS. CATHRINE MULLIGAN

The death of Mrs. Cathrine Mulligan which occurred in this city May 1st, at the age of 85 years, removes one of our oldest and most respected citizens, and another link connecting the past and the present has been severed. She was a daughter of the late Hon. Robert Mooney, and the youngest and last surviving member of that family. The greater part of her life was spent in St. Teresas but, since the death of her husband she has been a resident of this city. For the past four years she was an invalid.

Pownal News

On Friday, May 17, the clouds which had dispelled the sunshine for almost one week broke away and the sunlight burst forth not only in the heavens, but also in the hearts of Pownal's young people, this being the beautiful day of the lovely moon lit night, when they presented their funny two-act play, "The Egyptian Mummy" to a capacity house which intimated its appreciation by perfect attention.

The place, Pownal Hall. The hour, 8:45. The chairman, Mr. Will MacEachern, who introduced the evening's entertainment in a bright and witty manner, started the ball rolling with the humorous side-up of the play. Selection by orchestra, composed of Misses Edyth Lawton and Adelle Smith, Messrs F. H. Littlejohns and Parker Ings. This was followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. Will Mutch with Miss Francis Wood as accompanist. Vocal solo, with Miss Wood, accompanist, Mrs. Mutch, Violin solo, Rev. Mr. Littlejohns, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Beatrice Judson. Here the audience showed their admiration for instrumental music by continuous applause. The players kindly responded with a beautiful encore. At this point a great wave of joy and expectation passed over the audience. The curtain was drawn back, the play had begun, and now we behold Mr. Ernest Smith in the role of the professor, in a moodish mood, because he at present has not discovered the "Elixir" of life. Rosie, the maid, was cleverly taken by Miss Winnie Robertson, and when the professor's son, acted by Howel Smith, arrived home from Boston, great joy was manifested by father and son, also the maid who was quite taken with the son, and judging from the way son made eyes at pretty little Rosie, he must have had some practice. The Tramp, better known as Mr. Arden Richards, made a miserable argidy, detestable pathetic looking figure, all that could be desired in the role of a tramp—and not fond of work, but as the professor had just discovered the Elixir of life and is eagerly searching for a body to try his experiment on, the tramp is willing to act as an Egyptian mummy for one half dollar. Through the persuasion of id, and during that time she was tenderly cared for by her niece, Mrs. Bernard Corrigan.

Mrs. Mulligan was a woman of more than ordinary intelligence, well versed in ancient and modern history, and being a good conversationalist she was an agreeable companion. Her strong spirit of faith and piety greatly edified all with whom she was associated, and with beautiful resignation she answered the call, fortified by every comfort of Holy Church. She leaves to mourn three adopted daughters—Mrs. Austin Donahoe, Roseneath, Miss Clare Mooney and Miss Loretta Hughes, Detroit. Her funeral took place May 3rd to St. Teresas church, where a Requiem mass was sung by her former pastor, Father Ignatius, after which the remains were laid to rest beside those of her husband, who predeceased her thirty years ago. May her Soul Rest in Peace.

The following Mass Cards were received:—

Mr. and Mrs. S. Mooney, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Mooney, Mr. and Mrs. E. Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. M. Reagan, Mr. and Mrs. W. Carey, Mr. and Mrs. H. MacDonald, Mr. and Mrs. H. the latter is at this time absent. In act two we see the mummy carefully wrapped in white lying in waiting. The professor arrives home greatly discouraged until his son shows him the mummy. What happens after this is funnier seen than heard, judging from the gales of laughter that filled the hall as the mummy became very much alive behind the professor's back. After three doses of the imaginary liquid the mummy spoke, "You old rascal, you have poisoned me," at the same time chasing the old professor behind the scenes.

Intermission.

MILAN, May 23.—Signor Enrico— one of the biggest jewelers in Milan, was unused to wealthy customers. But even he was impressed when, one fine afternoon, a huge Bugatti car painted a speckless blue and adorned with brilliant nickel fittings, rolled up to his shop.

Through the plate-glass door he could see a perfectly uniformed chauffeur rapidly descend from his seat and open the door of the car with great deference. A tall man with iron grey hair stepped out of the car. His whole appearance spoke of wealth and social position.

Signor Enrico put on his best smile and rushed forward. "What can I have the honor of doing for Your Excellency?"

"I want to buy a birthday present for my wife," replied the stranger briefly.

"May I venture to enquire"—almost faltered Signor Enrico—"to what price Your Excellency would go?"

"Show me the best you have and we shall see."

The distinguished customer was offered a comfortable seat and tray after tray of costly jewels were placed before him by Signor Enrico himself. He examined them all, but only with his eyes. Never once did he take his hands out of his overcoat pocket.

Signor Enrico noticed this, but he had no time just then to wonder at anything. The customer made a few brief remarks about some of the glittering jewels, and it almost appeared as if he was going to walk out without making a purchase, when he suddenly remarked: "Show me that pendant in the left-hand corner of the tray."

The pendant was held up for his inspection. "Till have that," he said, "How much?" The Jeweller told him the price was $3,000.

"Very well—will you be good enough to take my wallet out of my breast pocket. I have no hands. The war, you know."

Signor Enrico's exclamation of surprise, not mixed with pity, was genuine. The assistants, who had withdrawn to a respectful distance eyed the war-hero with distressed admiration.

Signor Enrico did as he was told. He counted out the necessary notes and replaced the wallet, together with the jewel, in the stranger's breast pocket. Preceded by the obsequious Jeweler, the stranger left the shop.

But a few seconds later he was back again. "I just saw a bracelet in your window. I want it." The jewel, priced at $3,500 was taken out of the window and held up for his inspection.

"Will you be good enough," said the distinguished stranger, "to see what money I have left?" Signor Enrico took out the wallet once more. It contained barely $250.

The stranger thought for a second, then he turned to the Jeweller: "Will you write a note for me. I'll send it to my wife for the money and the chauffeur will collect the trinket in half an hour."

Signor Enrico was only too pleased to oblige. A sheet of paper was brought to him and the stranger began to dictate: "Dear Eleanora.....

"My wife's name is Eleanora, too," smiled the Jeweller. The stranger smiled back politely and continued: "Please hand bearer £700 which require to settle for a purchase Enrico."

"Now is not that curious," laughed the Jeweller, "my name is Enrico too. The stranger again replied with a slight smile.

The note was given to the chauffeur who immediately drove away in the big car, and the stranger made a final exit, ushered to the door by the delighted Signor Enrico.

An hour later the Jeweller returned home in high spirits, bursting to tell the wife of his bosom about his good fortune that day. But his wife inquired him with the remark, "I got the chauffeur the 70,000 lire, dear
