BRAVE CANADIAN SPIRIT KEEPS THE BOYS CHEERFUL

The following letters received by Mrs. James Graham of Clinton, speak for themselves.

France,
July 23rd, 1917.

Dear Mother—
Got your letter a few days ago and now take the first opportunity of answering it. We are in a pretty little place with everything looking nice and the crops here are excellent. We often see turnips and grain growing in the trenches.

You were asking what a trench is like. It is just like digging a ditch through a field, then getting into it and let a party start sniping at you. That is a fair idea of a trench anywhere. The weather is certainly sunny here now. It will soon be fall though with plenty of rain and mud and a trifle of frost to temper it with. Say mother, I'm getting old ain't I, twenty-three! Last April, on the ninth, the day we saw a little real scrapping, Jim and I are working together, and although we have a little spat once in a while I don't know as it hurts for it wouldn't be like Jim and I if we didn't. We had a wrestle the other day while Fritzle was sending over his afternoon hate. One of our best liked boys was killed a few days ago. His brother was here too, though in a different company. He took it pretty hard and the next trip up the line a shell hit about ten feet from my dug out and wounded him in the shoulder. Jim and I helped him to the dressing station. I was glad he got to Blighty for it was hard for him to go on with his work. He will be all right in a couple of months and won't feel his trouble so much.

We are still going cheerily along with the same old spirits that carried us through last winter's lovely mud and rain and which will carry us easily through to the bitter end. Suppose Yankee Doodle is all the rage in Blighty by this time!

Guess I'll stop for now but tell dad I should like to have him with me just a while dodging whizzbangs. That is a shell that comes over with a peculiar, weird sound very hard on the nerves.

Remember me to all, lovingly,
Your son,
LEW.
France,
July 23, 1917.

Dear Mother—
Just a line as I have time to write. I am all polished up and have no place to go. It is lonesome here and sometimes, I wish I could talk French. There are a lot of French here, and it is funny to hear them talking.

Was I telling you about the raid we made a while ago? We left the trench about one o'clock and our Artillery opened up and we went through the Germans wire and into his trench. There was a corporal leading us, Baster, and a little fellow we call Whiz Bang. It was some fun. We went up the trench firing round boys and bombs. We took it all, there was only three left alive. It was comical to see them as they were scared pretty badly and threw up their hands and yelled "Kamarad!" pretty lively. We had one Corporal killed and a few slightly wounded. So we had pretty good luck. The Corporal I spoke about was from N. B. lived at Harvey Bend. Dad would know him. He was a brave man. It will soon be fall again. I hope it winds up the war as more, and our unparalleled Bible Distribution will be ended. But the cordial intimacy established by its means with our readers will endure for years. We have a few words today for the thousands of intelligent young men and women who make up a large proportion of our reading clientele, and ask them once more, to read and heed the words of counsel.

The Charlottetown Guardian urges its readers to lose no time in clipping the Daily coupon in this paper.

The Bible As Literature

(For Young Men and Young Women)

It is not sacrilege to study the Bible as literature. On the contrary, only when we first learn to appreciate it as the greatest literary treasure this world possesses, do we begin to understand its true religious value.

It is not theory but fact that the Bible is the chief book of civilization. In its moral teachings—its ethical standards—its unswerving adherence to the one Only First Cause—it is immeasurably above and beyond any other book that forms a basis of religion.

But it is as a literary book that we first learn to love it and study it from childhood. Its rhythm, its wonderful construction, its homely metaphor—heart gripping because homely—its message of hope to the down-trodden, its depth of insight into all the windy ways of man, its breadth of vision as to the inscrutable ways of God—all these seize the imagination and lay hold of the mind of humanity as no other book ever did or ever will.

The greatest names in literary history have paid lasting tribute to the Bible. It has exalted and enriched their genius, and given them their lordly dominion over language. In poetry, in sublime eloquence, in philosophy,—we can reach no higher elevation. The entire literature of civilization has drawn upon the Bible for its inspiration. It is the one book that has made other books in their tens of thousands.

To the young men and women of today—and their name is legion—who seek to understand literature, or who seek to make it—who have ambition to become writers or orators—we say: "Go to the Bible, the one source of all that is best and worthiest in literature or oratory! Read it—study it—absorb it—and you cannot fail to write your name somewhere—sometime—somehow, right worthily—upon the scroll of Fame!"
