Pythians, to the number of 300 or more from all parts of the Maritimes and the State of Maine, gather in Charlottetown today to hold their 62nd annual Grand Lodge Convention, Maritime Domain, Knights of Pythias.

The three-day convention opens this morning at the Canadian Legion Hall with registration of the delegates and will conclude Wednesday evening with a buffet luncheon and dance at the Charlottetown Hotel.

Pythian Sisters will also participate and will hold their opening sessions in the auditorium of Prince of Wales College. The Sisters will hold a memorial service Tuesday evening in the auditorium. Wednesday, both Knights and Sisters will enjoy a sight-seeing trip by car and many of them will attend the afternoon horse races.

George E. Saunders, Grand Chancellor, Stellarton, N. S., will preside over the Knights' convention sessions while Grand Chief Evelyn Purdy of Waterford, N. S., will preside at the sessions of the Sisters which will mark the 62nd annual convention of Pythian Sisters, Jurisdiction of the Maritime Provinces, Montgomery Temple, No. 32, Pythian Sisters, Charlottetown, will be hostess to the Sister visitors.

Robert H. Saunders, chairman of the Hydro-electric Power Commission of Ontario, said Saturday he doubted if political developments in the United States would delay approval of the joint U.S.-Canadian St. Lawrence river power development.

The four youths who died in the flaming cab of a light truck after a collision with a heavy tractor-trailer near here Thursday were buried side by side in Prospect Cemetery here Saturday. All the caskets were flag-draped. John Morrison, 23, died in the truck. Reginald Smith, 22, had served in the army together. John's brother, Ronald Morrison, 19, served in the reserve army.

William Tobin, 21, and 27-year-old Florence Shaw, children of a man in the harbor here 10 days ago. The hearing is scheduled for next Thursday.

City Medical Officer A.W. Ormiston testified earlier that it is his opinion the child was alive when it was placed in the water. Police said both Tobin and Miss Shaw had confessed it was their child.

They quoted Miss Shaw as saying she delivered the baby still-born in her rooming house and kept the baby in a dresser drawer three weeks before Tobin disposed of it in the harbor.

At the inquest, Provincial Magistrate J. D. MacIntyre, acting coroner, said if the baby was placed in the water alive, "it was murder."

If it had been placed in the harbor after death it was concealment of birth and neglect, he said.

ONE MINUTE NEWS ABOUT JOHN MANVILLE WRAP JET ENGINE IN BLANKET

Everyone knows that a jet engine can propel a plane at terrific speed. But few realize the importance of insulation both to the engine and to the plane.

A Johns-Manville development known as the Thermoflex Insulation Blanket is now used in the aviation industry. Its job is two-fold. First, it protects adjacent parts of the aircraft from the intense heat generated by the engine. Second, it helps make possible greater engine efficiency.

The Thermoflex Insulation Blanket is only one of many Johns-Manville Insulations that control temperatures from 400 degrees below zero to 2800 degrees above. In fuel alone, these J-M Insulations save industry millions of dollars every year.

If you have an insulation problem, why not call in a J-M insulation specialist. Contact Canadian Johns-Manville, Sun Life Bldg., Montreal.

Heavy Damage Is Caused By Saturday's Gale

Saturday's early morning winds of gale velocity, accompanied by an unusually heavy rainfall, left a trail of uprooted trees, broken telephone and electric poles, and a disrupted electric and telephone service in its wake throughout the Province.

In the City the electric service suffered heavily. Shortly after midnight Friday the circuit serving Grafton and Prince Streets was put out of service and emergency crews were called out. They succeeded in repairing part of the damage. By mid-morning Saturday, however, practically all the City's electric service was cut off.

Most of the damage to the electric circuits was caused by the falling across the lines of trees or heavy branches and, in some instances, by breaking poles. By mid-afternoon, however, after strenuous work by the repair and maintenance crews, all circuits were again functioning.

The telephone cables on Elm Avenue were down Saturday morning and company officials said they had cables down in Summerside as well. But while the rural telephone subscribers, in some instances, suffered from a temporary lack of service due to the storm, they were not hit as hard as the city residents. However, maintenance crews working throughout yesterday in the City, officials said, and by last night there were few whose phones were not back in service. They expect to have all remaining damage caused by the storm repaired today.

Mr. R. C. Parent spoke in his capacity as Maritime Director. Mr. R. H. Rurst attended the convention as president of the Canadian Phytopathological Society and showed the group many fine colored lantern slides of different phases and personalities connected with the convention.

Mr. R. C. Parent stressed the growth of our organization membership which now stands at 2100. The immediate objective is 3000 members. As the National Convention is to be held in Charlottetown in 1960 the local branch will have to soon organize so as to handle the large group of Canadian agricultural societies which will be here at that time.

Mr. Whiteside in his address dealt with the topic "Agricultural Education" which was the theme of this year's national convention. There were eight or nine addresses and papers dealing with the subject. Speakers included Dr. W. H. Brittain, Dean of Macdonald College, Dr. Wilson, Vice-Dean of the School of Agriculture, Pennsylvania State College, Dr. McFarlane, assistant agricultural attaché, British Embassy, Washington, Dr. J. G. Althouse, Chief Director of Education for Ontario.

All speakers recognized the importance of a thorough background in the fundamental sciences. Dr. Brittain pointed out the need for more balanced curricula. He considered that in many colleges there was too wide a range in subjects with a consequent overloading with lecture periods and not enough opportunity for developing individual capacity. An important point brought out by Dr. Wilson was the need for more emphasis on the humanities and culture in college curricula. Dr. McFarlane outlined the level at which agricultural education is provided in Great Britain. A one year diploma course for semi-technical personnel, a two year diploma course for technical personnel such as district representatives and the four year course leading to a degree for those entering upon research work.

Dr. Althouse in his address urged a different concept of the objective in education. Too much emphasis has in his opinion been placed upon the monetary value of an education, its purpose as a means of increasing a person's opportunity to earn a living rather than upon the aesthetic side, the means of increasing the opportunity for better and more useful living.

Another speaker, Dr. Putnam gave a resume of a Dominion wide census he had made of the status of agricultural education in Canadian schools. He stated that only four provinces, British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Ontario and Quebec had a fairly complete course in agriculture. At the conclusion of Mr. Whiteside's address a lively discussion took place regarding agricultural education in P. E. I. It was generally agreed that individual members of the P. E. I. group could contribute much as all are specialists in some line of agriculture.

The meeting also heard reports from Mr. E. C. Pritchard and D. Schurman of the Region A.I.G. meeting held at Nappan, N. S., July 20, 21 and 22nd. Here Marilaine problems concerned with livestock, horticulture and soils were thoroughly discussed and recommendations made. Dr. Bennett, chief of soil conservation N.S.D.A., was the special speaker at this meeting. Details of his talk have already appeared in the press.

The local group deeply regret the passing of Mr. J. W. Boulier and Mr. F. S. Reeves both valued members of our organization.

Walter Bedell Smith, United States ambassador, declined comment on Pravda's accusation. So did the United States naval attaché, Rear Admiral Leslie C. Stevens. Reliable Embassy sources, however, said most details given in the Pravda article were essentially correct.

Pravda says Dreher, dressed in civilian clothes, met a Russian customs official — whom it termed a Soviet "agent of American naval intelligence" and identified only as "E" in the Moscow customs office to receive "secret military information."

The customs official had attracted the attention of Soviet security officers, Pravda says, because he gathered "secret information" and from time to time made trips to Moscow.

The newspaper claims that while the two men actually were exchanging written information, Soviet security agents entered the room and caught them in the act.

Dreher confessed on the spot, Pravda says. The customs officer also confessed on the spot in front of Dreher, the newspaper says, that "having been caught in the act, I am obliged to confess that I gathered and turned over spy information to Dreher at his assignment."

Local Branch Of Agricultural Institute Meets

At a recent meeting of the local Agricultural Institute of Canada members were privileged to hear reports from P. E. I. representatives attending the national convention held in Guelph, Ont. from June 21-24. Mr. George Whiteside, the official P. E. I. delegate gave a lengthy report.
