NEARLY A FATALITY — What might have been a very serious accident occurred yesterday afternoon in Bruce Stewart & Co. Machine Shop at about 2 p. m. when Mr. Archie Nelson was caught in a revolving shaft. Mr. Nelson had his neck pulled over the shaft, which was a long bar of hexogon steel that was being turned in a lathe. But for the prompt action of Mr. Frank Blatch, who stopped the lathe, Mr. Nelson would have been seriously, perhaps fatally injured. As it was, he escaped with bruises about the arms and chest but was able to return to his work the same afternoon.

Grand Master

names adorn the Membership Roll of our Order in the Maritime Provinces, the high and important positions which many of them hold in State and Finance, it is a matter of no little pride to us, out of a grand army of nearly fourteen thousand members, the mantle of leadership should have fallen on your shoulders, in whose eminent fitness for the office we most heartily concur.

Joining Wildey Lodge in February, 1915, and serving in the various positions which she had to offer ,with much faithfulness, ability and zeal, your brethren soon learned of your qualities for leadership, and you were made Noble Grand. Under your guidance a fresh inspiration was instilled in every member, and the call to "Go Forward" was promptly obeyed, with the result that the slumbering love for the cause which the Order represents was awakened, which has had its fruition in the Hall we have just dedicated.

At the Annual Meeting of the Grand Lodge in Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, August 8-10, when the most faithful, the best qualified to carry on the official duties of that Grand Body were required, it is not a matter for surprise to us who know you, that you, the youngest man to have attained to the position, should have been the choice of that Convention as their Grand Master.

We heartily congratulate you on the distinction conferred, and the honour you have brought to your Primary Lodge and the Province, and we beg of you to accept this in the spirit of Friendship, Love and Truth, emblematic of our Order whose virtues you radiate, and whose welfare you have entered into with so much vigour and ability.

May your tenure of office be crowned with much blessing to yourself as well as great prosperity to the Order throughout the jurisdiction, is the sincere wish of your immediate brethren in Charlottetown.

MRS. ELIZABETH WRIGHT McEACHERN
President of the Rebekah Assembly

Dear Sister McEachern:

It is with sincerest pleasure that we assemble here to do honor to our respected President. Through your pleasing personality you have won for yourself a large place in our hearts, and we are always glad when you can make it convenient to be with us.

By your splendid ability and noble endeavor you have efficiently met all the requirements necessary to entitle you to the highest honor the Order of Rebekahs can offer—President of the Rebekah Assembly. By attaining to that office you have been the means of winning honor to our Lodge for which every member is justly proud; and you have set an example to your fellow members that should point us to higher and nobler aims.

Nothing can more truly show us that we can make our lives sublime than the noble example of those who, like yourself, have reached out and attained to the highest honors.

You have worked faithfully and well and have left no duty unperformed, which convinces us that no one could more capably fill the office of President, and we extend to you our sincerest congratulations. May your term of office be one of great pleasure and benefit to you, and the Order progress successfully under your leadership.

Please accept this little gift as a token of esteem and good fellowship.

Signed on behalf of Alpha Rebekah Lodge, No. 10.

U. S. WANTS FISH; SCOTS BUSY.

Demand from America for Hebridean herring is bringing prosperity to many fishermen in Scotland. Prices for the fish at many ports of that country have soared above wartime figures. At Oban recently as high as $35 was paid for 45 gallons of herring, and one crew reports a return of $525 for one day's fishing.

Visitor Tells of Scott Institute Mission Work

Rev. Morris Zeidman, B.D., Superintendent of the Scott Institute, Presbyterian Church in Canada, at Toronto, is in the city. Rev. Mr. Zeidman, who is spending a brief vacation on the Island, is a prominent social service worker in Toronto and though still a young man, has attained a high reputation in his special field. He made the acquaintance of a number of Island delegates to the Maritime Provinces conferences at Toronto recently, and his hospitality on that occasion has won for him many friends in this Province.

The work in which Rev. Mr. Zeidman is engaged in Toronto is one of great national importance. Many newcomers from Europe who arrive at our shores have no knowledge of the English language. The Scott Institute conducts special night classes to give these people a working knowledge of English to instill into them British ideals and traditions. There are about 45,000 Jews in the city of Toronto. The foreign population, which would make three cities as large as Charlottetown, is a challenge to our churches and social organizations. The Scott Institute has accepted this challenge and is directing its efforts particularly to evangelizing these people of Hebrew race, who gave us the prophets and apostles and the imperishable books of the Bible, and to whom came, according to the flesh, our Savior Jesus Christ.

"We are only trying to give them back what they gave us," Rev. Mr. Zeidman declared, "the Messiah and Savior of all nations. Throughout the winter we conduct the English classes for the adults; boys and girls clubs, and young people's societies; sewing classes for mothers, and relief for the poor. On Sunday the Scott Institute is a busy place, conducting regular church services, Sunday schools in the afternoon, and also Bible classes for men and women.

"One of the most important features of the work is the fresh air camp, during the months of July and August. About 250 underprivileged children, most of them from the poorest district of the city, a number of Hebrew parentage, and many of them children of the Great War veterans from all parts of the city, have been provided with an enjoyable holiday which lasted twelve days at Bowanville Beach. Beginning when the schools closed, the children and many mothers also, some of them recovering from illness, have been taken to the camp in groups of sixty or more at a time. Four such groups have been entertained this last season at the expense of our church and through the voluntary contributions of friends who are interested in the work. Many more could have been taken but for the lack of funds.

"The camp is most beneficial to little tots in ailing health who live in the congested districts, without any fresh air, playing around garbage cans and back yards, breathing the smoke from the gas houses and the factories. Three days at camp makes new creatures of them, and gives them a new lease of life.

"The mothers, many of whom have been deserted by their husbands or whose wage earners are in jail, and yet others who are simply in impoverished circumstances and whose husbands have been out of work for months,—who are weary of life and break down under the burden of their cares and worries—have found the camp a haven of refuge, giving them new hope and courage to carry on."

Rev. Mr. Zeidman has devoted several years to this kind of work and he has been so successful in winning and holding the confidence and respect of the little ones, maintaining with kindness, that he has received a number of tempting invitations to do similar work in large centres across the border. He feels, however, that his work is in Canada as his intense desire is to develop and foster a true Canadian patriotism as well as Christian sentiment, in the hearts and minds of those under his charge.

Rev. Mr. Zeidman, who is speaking in Zion Church this evening on the subject of his social service work in Toronto, is leaving for Summerside during the latter part of the week on a short visit to some friends, but is returning again to the city next Monday.

NO SECRET CLAUSES

"Disarmament is the predominating quertion of the present assembly," Lord Cushendun said. "Its importance can not be over-estimated. I appreciate the disappointment of Chancellor Mueller of Germany, and others at the slow progress made. but I fear Herr Mueller does not appreciate the difficulties facing the preparatory disarmament commission.

"Resolutions cannot produce disarmament. Only work along practical lines can do that. Each state has a right to judge for itself the level of armaments necessary for its security. Hence it is impossible to apply any common denominator to all countries.

"I cannot suggest a solution of these difficulties, but mention them only as indicative of the difficulties confronting the preparatory disarmament commission. It is necessary for states to reach agreement among themselves, owing to their different needs and their constitutional, parliamentary, geographical and other differences. That necessitates long negotiations.

"Nevertheless, a great amount of disarmament already has occurred, even without common action. The British Navy personnel already is more than 40,000 less than in 1924. We also scrapped more than 200 war vessels totalling over 2,000,000 tons. The same proportionate reductions apply to our arsenals and navy yards." The acting British foreign secretary pointed out the difficulties created regarding disarmament, by the lethal methods of modern warfare and the ease with which commercial airplanes could be used for war purposes.

Lord Cushendun declared he could give the fullest possible assurance that it was the sincere desire of the British government to carry out in the letter and spirit, the obligations imposed by the League covenant. They were anxious to endeavor to find ground for common action. It was for that reason that they had earnestly striven for many months to reconcile their views with those of the French government regarding naval disarmament, and they had reached a compromise. When negotiating with a number of states, it was necessary to eliminate differences one by one, he explained.

After an eloquent appeal for greater confidence between nations, Lord Cushendun said the Kellogg anti-war pact would give a wholesome stimulus to international disarmament. The pact proclaimed a new era and created a new outlook, he said. In the generations to come, war, except in self-defence, would not be a gallant adventure but a national dishonor and armaments would be recognized as a costly and discreditable anachronism, the British stateman declared.

—SPECIAL PRIZES — Mr. A. E. MacLean, M. P., has kindly donated special prizes of $5, $3, and $2 each for the three exhibitors making the best showing at West Prince Exhibition, to be held at Alberton on Tuesday next and for which great preparations are being made.

—RAILWAY IMPROVEMENT — A great many improvements have been made and are yet in contemplation on the railway between Tignish and Borden. The work on the new track to the Railway Wharf and potato sheds at Summerside, the filling in of the Y and the erection of a new round house and bank, upon which over 100 men are employed, is now well under way. Amongst expensive improvements already completed this month are the crossing switches that have been put in at Northam, St. Louis and O'Leary. It is understood that improvements made necessary at Travellers Rest, St. Eleanors and Miscouche, owing to the largely increased shipment of produce, especially potatoes, have been approved and will be proceeded with at once. S

— ATTENDED ST. JOHN EXHIBITION—Premier Saunders reports a large attendance and excellent exhibits at the St. John Exhibition this year, which he attended as the principal speaker at the opening ceremonies. The poultry and live stock exhibits were particularly fine, and the main building has been considerably improved. The management is in very capable hands, and the exhibition is on a good paying basis. The sanitary conditions, the catering, and all the incidentals connected with the fair, are carefully supervised. Premier Saunders was particularly impressed with the showing of cattle. There were several Island exhibitors in this department. The exhibition is conducted by a private corporation, but receives a grant of $15,000 from the New Brunswick Government which has pledged itself to continue the subsidy for at least three years. A substantial grant is also received from the city of St. John. There were a great many American visitors at the exhibition this year.

RAMSAY MACDONALD SAILS FOR HOME

U. S. Investments in Canada

Q. What is the extent of U. S. investments in Canada?

A. The United States has $3,900,000,000 invested in Canada. This amount compares with United States investment of $4,300,000,000 in Europe and $5,200,000,000 in Latin America. Dominion residents who are in the habit of thinking of South America as a sphere of special United States commercial interest and the Pan American Union as a special arm of United States commercialism, may be interested to learn that until last year British investments in Latin America surpassed those of the United States, and that measured in pounds and pence Canada has about as much commercial interest at stake in Pan Americanism as Argentina.
