Established 1879

Whooping Cough, Croup, Bronchitis Cough, Grip, Asthma, Diphtheria

Cresolene is a boon to Asthmatics

Does it not seem more effective to breathe in a remedy to cure disease of the breathing organs than to take the remedy into the stomach?

It cures because the air rendered strongly antiseptic is carried over the diseased surface with every breath, giving prolonged and constant treatment. It is invaluable to mothers with small children.

Those of a consumptive tendency find immediate relief from coughs or inflamed conditions of the throat.

George Cresceus (2 yrs) 2.48-4

Something about the great Cresceus King of trotters and Sire of George Cresceus

In the first place there is the fact that Cresceus is Cresceus. His mere name, when flung in the balance, outweighs those of all the other trotting stallions "whose name the golden tongue of fame has uttered." His deeds, his achievements—they are household words wherever equine speed is known or prized. The gap that separates him from all others of his gait and sex is so wide that it is, in very truth, the case of "Eclipse first and the rest nowhere," over again. It is unnecessary to stop and enumerate his long list of world's records. Everybody knows them by heart. For one great thing that any other trotting stallion has ever done, he can show a dozen greater. His crown is thickly gemmed with stars, but one of which would be sufficient to confer celebrity on any other horse. With him they are only parts of a "stupendous whole"—a greatness so colossal as to be without precedent or parallel. He was—or is—not alone a speed marvel; but also a giant in strength, a lion in courage, a phenomenon in consistency and wearing power. In the sum of their attributes, some horses—as some men—seem to transcend the limits which nature, as we conceive it, has set. Of these is Cresceus. Every one readily admits this. It can not be denied. And out of it all stands this one important fact: that he is a stallion—THE ONLY STALLION THAT EVER HAS HELD THE WORLD'S TROTTING RECORD.

George Cresceus 42246, whose 2--year--old cutappears above, is a handsome chestnut horse of splendid conformation, Sired by Cresceus and is gaited and looks like his noted Sire. He holds the Provincial 2 year old trotting record mile heats for 1907 which he won at Halifax after a few weeks training, thus proving that "blood will tell." Below are some remarks made by the Halifax papers about this fine colt when he raced there.

"The big share of the stake went to the chestnut colt from Charlottetown George Cresceus by Cresceus 2.07¼ the champion trotting stallion of the world, and George bears a MARKED RESEMBLANCE to his noted sire. "The Cresceus Colt had the speed of the quartette. The Cresceus colt's speed again gave him the lead. The Halifax Chronicle Oct 1907.

After the second heat there was nothing to it but the Fredricton mare and the [illegible] of the great Cresceus whose SUPERIOR BREEDING seemed to tell in the two final heats which he captured in rather easy style. The Halifax Herald Oct 1907.

At Charlottetown against a field of six Commodore trotters and pacers (half mile heats) he beat the whole field by many lengths, except the pacer Arena Bell which he forced to go to the wire in 1.20 in the half mile heat.

THE GUARDIAN SHORT STORY

he denied. "The fifth bull he is what you call—more polite."

"Gentle?" suggested Bert. The Mexican nodded.

"Even so," he agreed. "The bull he is more a gentleman. He is not minded to be so wild. Horses? They are cheap, but even amateurs—it is not to kill, but to laugh at their awkward."

Bert nodded understandingly. He was not unfamiliar with the "amateur nights" in the vaudeville theaters. This, no doubt, was the Mexican equivalent. This pet phrase of his father's kept ringing in his ears: "Take the bull by the horns."

And so it fell out that when Corcita Chico had received the charge of the fourth bull lightly poised upon one knee and the dead bull had been dragged from the ring the arena was turned over to a score of young Mexicans—and Bert.

At the trumpet's blare the gate was opened and a fifth bull bounded into the ring. Like his predecessor, he was a black bull from Tayagua, but he was not a fighter. Twice on other days he had been sent into the ring, to be hissed out again because he provided such tame sport against the trained fighters, but he was lively enough for the amateurs and was less likely to inflict serious injury.

Corcita's staff lounged about the arena with their capes over their arms ready to rush in and distract the attention of the bull from a prostrate amateur, but most of the young men were nimble of foot and sprang lightly aside when the bull turned to charge, in emulation of the professional fighters. The awkward few provided the fun in their clumsy actions.

But though the amateurs stretched forth their hands to grasp the beribboned purses which hung on either horn of the bull, each containing a five dollar gold piece, they were not nimble enough to reach the prize.

Bert had been a famous athlete in his college days, and those days were not so far distant that his skill had left him. With a red cloth he attracted the attention of the bull, and as the bewildered animal rushed at him he half turned as he leaped aside. Several times he repeated the maneuver before he could reach over and grasp the horns, but at last he succeeded in getting a grip on the wicked looking shaft, and, while the frightened animal tore madly around the arena, he held on with one hand while with the other he removed the four purses.

The other amateurs closed in upon him, declaring it to be unfair for one man to take all the prizes, but the audience was with the plucky American, and the manager, wisely siding with his public, gained additional favor by announcing that two more purses would be put up with the American barred from the contest.

He escorted Bert from the ring, while the other amateurs waited for the bull to be sent back. The attendants had already coaxed him into the ring and there would not be long to wait.

Bert, hurrying through the corridor at the rear of the pen, did not notice a group of people at the entrance until a hand fell upon his shoulder, and he looked up into his father's eyes.

"It was a great deed, my boy," came in sincere praise. "Jessie told us of your straits, and Henry and I came down to look you up. I guess you didn't need help as much as we thought you would. We saw the fight and how cleverly you won out. Come back to the hotel with us and we'll tell Jessie all about it. She came along with us."

"And I guess you might as well make it up with her," put in Henry Picard. "You know how to take care of yourself and a wife too."

"I was taking father's advice," explained Bert laughingly. "He is forever telling a fellow to take the bull by the horns."

"I didn't mean it to be taken so literally," denied the elder Burnside, "but it was good advice even at that, since it brings you a wife. You can have the ring made out of one of those coins."

Bert looked at the four coins he still held in his hand.

"If the romancers are to be believed," he said laughingly, "from the bull ring to the wedding ring is not such an unusual happening after all."
