IDLE RAINBOW

Miss Langsam glanced down at her work. "I'm afraid I couldn't today. I've got to get Tropical Nights off to the printer. Why don't you take along a couple of issues of Lasso and study them over a bit?"

Lindsay elated, went down on the elevator. Her heart sang over and over. "I've got a job. I've got a job. It seemed like the sudden ending of what had appeared to be a long, long waiting period when she remembered that she had done it all herself.

Once out in the street she felt an increasing lightness of heart. She stopped and bought a gardenia with a silver ribbon from a vendor who smiled and offered her conveniently a black-headed pin.

She was in the center of the crowd when she saw a girl who looked like a girl she had met in the center of the crowd. She had a look of familiarity about her.

"Well, you'd better wait until I go over to Aunt Spiddy's and get a check cashed," said Lindsay. "Toby slipped his arm in hers as they walked through one of the streets to Madison Avenue.

"I never care remember whether it's this block or the next one. Oh, there it is, with the blue glass in the window."

Toby read the neat lettering on the window. EXPERIENCE AB-ROTT. Interior Decorator. The shop was empty. A bell tinkled as they opened the door and went down a step. Aunt Spiddy came in from the rear to get them in the workroom.

"Hello, this is Toby, and I've come to cash a check. But I've got a job."

"You haven't got a job, have you? Sit down. We were having tea to fortify ourselves against some draperies. And, Toby, this is Christy Morris."

"There," said Aunt Spiddy to use herself. "I mustn't forget to use that shade of blue when somebody orders that wall paper."

Lindsay and Toby watched Clark Gable and Jean Harlow in "China Seas." And then they had dinner in an upstairs place with soft-footed waiters and indistinct music.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Lindsay. "I thought we were going to be good friends and now this spoils it all."

"But I told you the last time I saw you that I loved you and I know, and how many other girls have you told the same thing?"

"You're kidding me, aren't you?" Lindsay asked. "I love you so much I can't bear to have anybody else look at you! I want to give you everything I possess."

"Was that what you've been doing all these evenings?" Lindsay remembered something. "Was that what you've been doing all these evenings?"

"I hardly had to say a word. There were the facts in black and white. All I had to do was to open that folder and there you saw you had put together and show him those letters. It was a fine job."

"Toby closed her book. "Well, that's that, anyway. Business seems to be looking up all around. If you read, for better or for ill, the meeting tomorrow. Toby, there's some beer on the window sill and some ginger ale for Lindsay."

"No, just low and a little tired. All I need is a good night's sleep."

"You look," said Toby, "as if you had just found out why the sun rises and the moon sets."

"Well, you'd better wait until I go over to Aunt Spiddy's and get a check cashed," said Lindsay.

"You got your own dinner?" asked Lindsay. "Oh, I wasn't very hungry. I opened a can of beans. I've been wondering about your job."

"Listen, Lindsay, I'm crazy about you." He leaned over and kissed her suddenly.

"That's that, probably," said Lindsay and went back to bed.

"After Lindsay was asleep Poppy got up, slipped on her bathrobe and sat for a long time in front of the window where the street light shone in white on the floor like synthetic moonlight.

"I don't think I ought to go out with you any more. I mean it isn't fair because I don't feel the way you do."

In Memoriam

MR. NEIL PENPRAISE In the death on Tuesday, September 20th, of Neil Penpraise, the village of Victoria and the surrounding community lost its oldest male resident and a respected merchant.

Born at De Sable in January, 1851, the son of William Penpraise and Catherine McNevin, he grew up in that locality, but even before his marriage, located in the locality which has since developed into the village of Victoria.

Sixty years ago last February he married Miss Mary Cameron of Hampton, and at their diamond jubilee celebration they were the recipients of a message from their Majesties the King and Queen.

The funeral was held on Friday last, September 23rd, from the late residence in Victoria to Crapaud Cemetery. The services at the house, church and grave were conducted by Reverend George Ayers, a former pastor, assisted by Reverend Mr. M. Phai acting minister at Hampton.

Don't Keep on Having Constipation!

If constipation's got you down—so you feel heavy, tired and dopey—it's time you did something about it. And something more than taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat only the things most people do, the chances are that a very simple fact causes your constipation—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It means a kind of heavy food that isn't consumed in the body but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

It is in your trouble, eat crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran is not only rich in "bulk"—it also contains the natural intestinal tonic, vitamin B.
