The Third Warning

A Mystery Love Story

By Augustus Muir

It had been a day extraordinary to look back on. My talk with Marget, the attempt on my life in the glen; our return to find the case gone—these gave ample food for thought. In the evening at George's suggestion, we had entered the hall and in the library found that the cabinet had been replaced. Seymour must have returned to the farm early in the morning and gone through it to his satisfaction for there it stood, with the slight dent in the panel, as if it had never left its accustomed spot. It must have been replaced at dawn before any one was astir and he must have had one or more stout helpers.

A SURPRISE

I broke the silence. "How soon do you think they'll start operations?" George grunted and looked over his shoulder as if to assure himself the shutters of the room were closed. "Perhaps tonight—there's no saying. About any rate if your suggestion is correct about there being something of realizable value in that case, then somebody is hoofing it hard for the Continent tonight. So if we never see Seymour's sweet face again we'll know there's been a little old fortune in that case, and he's got it."

"But you've already said that was unlikely." In which remark George acquiesced with a curt nod, and I continued: "Well, suppose they do start operations tonight, how are we to know about it?" George smoked thoughtfully for a minute or two. "As a matter of fact," he said at last, "I had been pondering that point. I said we'd got to watch and wait. Well, any man can wait. But it takes a duced clever man to do the watching efficiently. Not a wary soul must suspect we've got a wary eye open. We must go on exactly as before, but at the same time your old family mansion through the trees there has got to be in the beam of our search-light. What I was going to suggest is this: Tonight you go to bed as usual. I won't undress, and every couple of hours or perhaps oftener I'm going to have a quiet stroll around. My little shooter will be in my pocket, so I'll be quite safe, and if I find there's any thing doing I'll pop back at once and give you the nod. Then we can get busy!" "But why should you have all the—"

"That's all right. Tomorrow night you act the policeman and I'll get a bit of shut-eye. Beside, one can always have a snooze after lunch. How does time go? Eleven o'clock, by jove! I'm going to have my first saunter now."

"Do you want the back door key of the hall?" I asked. "Not going in," said George. "I can see all I want from the outside. By the way, how did you leave the library—curtains this evening?" "Open."

"Right. I won't be ten minutes. Cheer-ho."

He was gone, pulling the door shut behind him, and when I was alone in the silence of the cottage I blamed myself for agreeing to George's proposal. It was an eerie job for one to be awake all night without companionship. Surely one of us could have lain on the camp-bed, while the other sat and read at the fireside, and we could have had turn about at keeping an eye on things. To have taken alternative watches, as in the trenches, would have been a much more cheery arrangement. I decided to broach the matter immediately on his return. Certain that I heard his footsteps, I got to my feet to open the front door which had an ordinary Yale lock and opened with a handle only on the inside. But after a couple of strides, I paused in the middle of the floor and listened. Sure enough I could hear footsteps coming up the path, but they did not sound like George's.

Was it George having a joke with me? It would be quite like him to keep up our spirits with some such jest. The footsteps were lighter and quicker than his, and then they stopped.

There was no means of taking an observation, for the fire was bright in the grate, and to have opened the shutters would have disclosed the interior of the room.

The only way was to slip out of my own bedroom window, and to creep down to the front of the cottage through the shrubbery. I was about to put this into operation when there was a knock on the door.

It was faint, but I could hear it distinctly enough; three soft separate taps, carefully modulated to give just sufficient warning to wakeful ears but not enough to disturb a sleeper. To creep round and try to see who was there would mean delay and delay locked suspicious. Suspicion was precisely the atmosphere we wished to avoid. Therefore, I felt in my pocket for a reassuring ridge of smooth metal, and lighting a candle walked firmly to the door and threw it open.

A figure stepped quickly forward. "Marget!" I cried.

The girl was hatless and was holding a cloak round her dress of some soft material. The blackness of the cloak made her face look dead white, and her eyes shining in the candle-light seemed large and troubled. "Come in," I exclaimed. "You mustn't stand out there. It's cold to-night."

"Just for a moment then," she whispered. "I am glad you're still awake."

"Why, is anything the matter?" I led her into the sitting room and seated her in a big chair before the fire. "George is out just now, but won't be long. We're quite alone tell me. Is something wrong?"

She looked up at me and nodded quickly. "Then I'm glad you've come to me dear." I said taking into mine the cold hand that lay on the arm of her chair. "What is it?"

"It's dad," she said. "He hasn't come home."

"Mr. Shaw? You mean something has happened to him?" She nodded again. I'm sure of it. I saw that I must do my best to calm her. "Don't worry, Marget. It's only a little after 11. What time did he go out?" "Shortly after lunch," said Marget. He should have been home by 8 o'clock. I wonder what can have happened? I'm so worried."

"Where did he go after lunch?" "I believe he was to visit some of the congregation. I don't know who they were, even if he went, but he hasn't come back. Dad never does that. He's always back in time for supper at 8 o'clock. What do you think can have happened to him? I'm—I'm really afraid..."

She Has No More Pains In Her Back

Says Nova Scotia Lady After Using Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. A. Eagles Is Enthusiastic Over the Remedy That Brought Her Relief—Dodd's Kidney Pills

Londonderry, N. S. Apr. 19, (Special) "I had a bad pain in my back," writes Mrs. A. Eagles, a well known and highly respected resident here. "My sister told me to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. I took ten boxes in all and now my back is as well as ever. I can do all my household work. I would not be without a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house."

The kidneys strain all the poison out of the blood. The very nature of their work keeps them constantly in danger. They need occasional help if they are to do their work properly. Dodd's Kidney Pills are just a kidney remedy—purely and simply. They can be taken by old and young alike.

If you wish to enjoy new health and energy all over the body, give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial.

St. Vitus Dance Sufferer Made Well

Nerves Strengthened Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Time after time cases are brought to the notice of the public where sufferers from nervous troubles have been relieved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—where victims of St. Vitus Dance have been made well through the use of these pills after other medicines have failed to be of benefit. The reason for this is that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly upon the blood—they make new, rich red blood and in thus banishing all impurities from the blood strengthen the nerves and make St. Vitus Dance impossible.

Mrs. P. Donnelly, Montreal, Que., is one more grateful mother who wishes to add her testimony to those already published. She says—"My little girl, aged eleven, was a great sufferer from St. Vitus Dance. Several doctors prescribed for her without benefit. She was in the hospital for two weeks—still no benefit. I then saw an advertisement recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for St. Vitus Dance, so I decided to try them. My little girl had only taken a couple of boxes when I noticed some improvement so I continued with the treatment till now she is completely free from the trouble and can enjoy herself as other children do. I can highly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to anyone suffering from St. Vitus Dance or any other form of nervous trouble, for what these Pills have done for my daughter I am sure they will do for others."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Smothering Spells Couldn't Walk Far Gaped For Breath

Mrs. T. W. Both, Kelowna, B.C., writes:—"For over a year I was troubled with smothering spells, and it was impossible for me to walk, even a short distance, on account of having to gasp for breath. A friend told me to try which I did, and in a short time I felt much better. I can now recommend them to everyone."

Price, 50c. a box at all druggists and dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
