C. W. L. will be asked to do its part in establishing peace and in aiding to correct the spirit of hatred among nations. To have lasting peace we must do much to change this spirit, by example and precept. To have a lasting peace it must be founded on justice and charity.

Men must realize and put into practice the doctrine of Christianity. Social inequalities and social injustices must be corrected if the family life is to be good. The nation will be saved. The Catholic Women's League, he said, is to be commended for its work in recommending the re-establishment of family prayer. "Where two or more are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them," he urged that the beautiful custom of family prayer be renewed with zeal.

His recommendation was made that the members of the League endeavour to promote the education of youth, both secular and religious. Education is needed more than ever now in a mechanized world and "we must try and promote ambition in children to reach higher standards of education."

The standard of living must be raised, a more equal distribution of wealth be established, if poverty and distress is to be removed from the midst of plenty. Man must be taught to have dominion over himself, thus overcoming the spirit of selfishness and greed, the speaker said. Before strong in justice, social justice, he continued, strive that injustice may be blotted out, hatred and revenge eliminated from the human heart, so that a true and lasting peace be ours. All this will demand sacrifice, he said, but it is our duty to make it.
