Right Way to Sow Seed Lessons Work and Waste

Bean Seeds Sown in Pairs, Four Inches Apart, Insure Even Stand

There is good reason for sowing more seeds than will be allowed to grow; but when this is overdone, not only is there a waste of seed, but unnecessary work is created in thinning out. Care in sowing will be repaid many times by reduced work later.

Seeds that germinate slowly, such as carrots, parsley, and parsnips, should be sown more thickly than others because the seedlings are feeble, and the force of many seedlings together helps break the soil crust and bring the sprouts to the surface.

Liberty H. Bailey, dean of horticultural teachers, expresses this opinion: "It is much safer to sow even excessive amounts of seed, than to sow just as many as are theoretically needed on a basis of the number of mature plants to the row. Thinning is a process of selection, and the best are allowed to remain. It is evident the chances of securing the best are greater when the gardener leaves one plant out of ten, rather than one plant out of three.

But real selection is impossible if seeds are sown so thickly the roots of the tiny plants become entangled, and it is impossible to remove single plants, without disturbing neighbors. The thickest sowing therefore should allow each seed sufficient space to develop as an individual.

The surest way with small seeds is to take a few in the hand, and set them fall through the fingers into the drill which has been prepared. Get close to the ground, and with a little practice you can quickly acquire control so that the seeds will be evenly distributed, each sufficiently distant from the next to prevent interference.

Take Small Seeds in Hand and Drop in Drill So Each Can Grow Untangled With Its Neighbor.

Keep the seeds in line as well as you can. It helps to let the garden line which was used in making the drill remain in place until the seeds have been dropped.

It helps to mix the very small seeds with dry sand before you begin to sow, using two or three times as much sand as seed. This spreads the seeds out better.

Large seeds may be sown in pairs, spaced at the distance plants are to stand. If both seeds grow one plant of the pair can be pulled up. Bush beans, for example, give good results when standing four inches apart in the row. By sowing seeds in pairs four inches apart, an even stand is assured. In the case of beans, even if thinning is neglected, and the twin plants are allowed to mature together there is little harm, but with plants of a different habit, thinning would be essential.

ALLIES ARMED FORCES GROW

With the exception of France, the peace-time armed forces of the major Allies will be bigger than their pre-war ones. No official figures are available, but informed sources say five million men is a minimum estimate. The U. S. postwar military establishment will be about six times its pre-war strength and will cost approximately $6,000,000,000 this year.

U. S. S. R. Postwar 2,000,000
 France Pre-war 800,000
 Britain Postwar 750,000
 Poland Postwar 340,000
 Czechoslovakia Postwar 400,000

Painted Scarves Attract Fashion-Wise in New York

NEW YORK, March 12.—Blush is underfoot and colds are prevalent but out-of-towners continue to push their way into New York for sight-seeing and for curing winter melancholy.

True cream cheese doubles for New York butter. True, block-long stockings lineups on Fifth Ave. often make the pedestrian's course circuitous. True, "Nice, fresh, hard-to-get chocolate bars" has become the street vendor's newest chant. But despite the shortages of retail man can still take his pick of the most garishly painted ties on the neckwear market and, if women crazy, enchanting hats.

In a large store in the shopping mart you will find the fashionwise wringing blissfully through piles of large, silky, bright-colored scarves which they mean to tie rakishly across their fronts when they don spring ensembles. The scarves sell at fabulous prices—our favorite had green-draped blackamours painted on it—and can't miss being the accent furious to any costume.

Functional Scarves

Across from the scarves one catches sight of the functional belts. Made of fine saddle leathers and styled with great dash, they dangle a series of gadgets to hold your stamps, money, golf tees, pocket keys or the lead for your dog. They are veined with vestiges ruffled in Mr. Mowbray for shopper's attention on the main floors measured, you'll find no single shoe sample is available in a wide range, but there are lots of approximations.
