A KNIGHT OF THE BEARD

It Was to Be as His Dear Wife Wished

Suddenly then my Josephine lifted her voice to me, crying:

"Augustus!"

To which I made my ever fond reply:

"My love?"

"Augustus! I think that beards are so distinguished—don't you-u-u-u-u-u?"

And her voice so trembled in its pleading and, when I looked at my beloved, her lip so quivered and her eyes so filled with the tears of her longing that I groaned in my spirit, for I knew that my fate was near at hand and that if I should deny my heart's desire she would peak and pine and fade away until her tender heart would break at last and my love would be no more.

"Augustus!" she whispered.

To which I bravely made reply:

"My love?"

"Augustus! I wish that you, my sweet, would grow a beard!"

And pressing my darling boldly to my heart I raised my hand and solemnly I swore that never more should razor touch my face till I was bearded like the pard and that I would ever emulate the pirate in his business till men should tremble at the mention of my name; whereat my darling kissed me with the kiss of pride and joy, and thus the pact was made.

And in fear and in trembling I fared forth into the world the following day, for never before had I faced my fellowmen in the morning until I had passed the gleaming steel over my lathered countenance. And my fears were all too justified and my trembling was not in vain, for as I walked along the thoroughfare it was as though I had walked along through a gauntlet of eyes; large, rounded eyes, insistently staring, bold eyes and prominent eyes that never winked or wavered; eyes to the right of me, eyes to the left of me, eyes all around me—and every eye upon my unshaved beard.

My glance fell in shame and confusion and I slinked along the pave.

"Augustus!"

To which I made my sorrowful, fond reply:

"My love?"

"Augustus! How slowly it grows!"

I pressed my darling sadly to my heart and soothed her, for I saw that she had expected my beard to flower like a plant that grows beneath the hand of the conjurer and that in a few short hours she wished to see it tossing in the breeze, triumphant, fiery and untamed. And sadly then I pointed out to her that the grand, imperial city was not built in a day and that only perseverance brought success in that field of endeavor where we had thrown our die and cast our unshaved lot.

And when the morning broke I fared out into the world again, unshaved, unshorn, and seeking the solitary places of seclusion; but all the friends that I had ever made and all the chance acquaintances that I had ever met; all, all were there to greet me and to look with pity and with wonder at my woe.

The policeman gave me the second look of sharpness, and when I passed the parlors of the tonsors they pressed their faces to the window, melancholy, mournful and full of deep reproach.

On the cars my neighbors sat away from me, and all day long when rising in the elevators I was always carried past my stated floor.

"Augustus!"

To which I made my fond, despairing cry:

"My love?"

"Augustus! Can't you hurry it?"

But in sadness and in sorrow I explained to her, my love, that the execution of our plan must take its own appointed time and that, come heat or cold, rain or snow, day or night, fire or sword, there was nothing that could hasten the even tenor of its way, and nothing, nothing, nothing that could soften now the blow.

And the third day came, and the third day fared I forth, looking no man in the eye except with a fierce defiance. At the restaurant no man would come and sit at the table where I was, and on the streets the youth of the land made capricornian cries, exclaiming also "Z-z-z-z-z-z-z-z!" and "Whish-sh-sh-sh-sh!"

"Augustus!"

To which I made my fond, lamenting cry:

"My love?"

"Augustus! How much bearded is the pard?"

"I do not know," I stammered forth, a great and sudden joy infusing me. "I do not know, my love!" I stammered forth.

"A strange and fearful name," then mused my Josephine, "and I am sure that he was bearded so. The pirate too, it was agreed that we should emulate, so that all men then should tremble at the mention of thy name. And do they tremble yet, dear heart?"

"They tremble exceedingly!" then cried I in my eagerness. "The barbers scarcely can restrain themselves, and when my friends must come and tall to me they tremble for fear they will be seen with me. My enemies tremble with happiness, and never an A. D. T but trembles with that fierce joy that the eagle feels when it sees its helpless prey—"

"Enough, enough!" she mused. "Besides—"

"Besides—my love? Besides—"

"I wish to go out with you to-night and so—"

And so—! And so another cloud was rolled away and the sun of my content beamed forth again and the birds sang and the young lambs gamboled on the green and love—deep, sweet, abiding love—came stealing back and pitched his feathered tent upon the sward.

FAMOUS BEAUTIES NEVER GET FAT

Womankind wonders why famous beauties grow old, but do not grow fat. They live at silken ease, amid the porcelain flesh pots. The wine, that puffs out obscure mortals, flows not illiberally down their alabaster throats. Yet their lifelong loaf does not thicken their limbs nor double their chins. What is the secret of the long-lived gracefulness of the hauton?

One-half ounce Marmola, ¾ oz. Fl. Ex. Cascara Aromatic, 4½ oz. Peppermint Water. This is the famous Marmola Prescription, long familiar to the fashionable pharmacists of the world and their clientele, but which has only recently penetrated to the knowledge of the hoi polloi of womankind. Since when, for convenience sake, it has been put into elegant pocket form, the Marmola Prescription Tablet, which can now be had of well nigh any druggist, fashionable and ordinary, or the Marmola Co., 1201 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., in large cases for seventy-five cents.

With this tablet any woman can reduce, be losing a pound a day, in a few weeks; take off fat (where it shows most) on chin, abdomen, hips, etc., without need for exercising, table restraint, fear of wrinkles, or the slightest physicial harm or uneasiness.
