

Third Night Of Forum Carnival Great Success

Upwards Of 900 Attended Rotary Night At Forum — Local Artists In Good Form.

It was Rotary night at the Forum last night and the social club had a number of talented local artists provide a programme of excellent vocal and musical numbers. Nine hundred attended. Miss Hornby's orchestra composed of herself, Miss Earl and the McFarlane brothers played a trio of appealing selections, and Mrs. Holl-Trainor sang with her accustomed finish and charm. Mr. Austin Trainor and daughter Mary appeared in a comedy singing duet which went over with eclat and the cornet solo by Tom Covey, accompanied by Monte Warren on the accordion was received well and heartily applauded.

Tonight the old favorites, Mr. Joe O'Brien and Joe McDonald are billed in a combination boxing-wrestling bout which holds possibilities for a new outlet to Mr. O'Brien's fighting ability. Joe promises that the scuffle will have a quick ending.

The musical end of the show will be left in the keeping of Billy McEachern with his harmonica, Frank Acorn, guitar and Percy Acorn at the piano. These three have equal ability either in old time renditions or the latest song hits.

A third attraction on the card is Jim Kennedy, in bag-punching and club swinging.

Mr. Joseph Hughes well known barber was the winner of the door prize last night, thirty quarts of milk donated by the Health Milk Co. The door prize this evening will be a 90 lb. bag of flour.

Sight must not be lost of the object of the Carnival, the refilling of the hockey coffers for the big advance on the Maritime title and perhaps a Dominion title.

Dispatches from Moncton state that the Moncton Hawks have secured Wooley of last year's Canadian Olympic team and that the Hawks will go into training October 11th, next, Tuesday. This is a reminder to all Charlottetown folk that the league fight is going to be even harder than was expected. It cannot be denied that the acquisition of Wooley is of immense value to Moncton and it is an indication to what lengths Moncton is going to win a hockey title. The slogan now is "Beat Moncton" because the railway town looks like the hardest proposition in the East.

The effort and work now being offered by the Charlottetown service clubs and by the firemen and others is all part and parcel of the hockey campaign. Without the generous help now being given so unselfishly the Abegweits would not be able to retain a franchise in the principal Maritime hockey league.

It is a hard long road from every point of view but thousands think it well worth the while and are proving their loyalty every day.

When Combs Was Caught

UNUSUAL PLAY IN DIAMOND CLASSIC
Combs, Yankee centrefielder, photographed in the fourth inning as he was trapped between home and third base in the second game of the world series in New York. He was put out by Hartnett, Chicago catcher. Then, just to polish off things, Hartnett and Jurgens trapped Sewell, for an unusual double play. All this helped little, as the Yankees won 5 to 2.

Canzoneri Meets Frankie Petrolle

(By Edward J. Nell, Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—A couple of world champions on one card, a gallant former king tackling the heaviest punching welterweight in the world on another, and a coy situation revolving around Jack Dempsey and Jack Kearns, lifted the fight business today into the sports picture Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, and the Yankees have more or less overrun for the last ten days.

Tonight at Ebbets Field, Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight king, heads the last big fight card of the outdoor season in a ten round bout against Frankie Petrolle, the Fargo Express. Petrolle has been substituted for Ray Miller, who was forced from the charity card by an attack of boils.

Maxie Rosenbloom, recognized in New York as champion of the light-heavyweights, has found business so poor lately that he is content with a semi-final berth on the same card against Jack Redman, a New York light-heavyweight suspected of being a puncher. Both Rosenbloom and Canzoneri will come in over weight, and thus avoid risking their titles.

Madison Square Garden anticipates a sellout for the final test of Benny Leonard's comeback ability against Jimmy McLarnin of Vancouver, Friday night, the first appearance of the former lightweight champion against an absolute top notcher.

Leonard has whipped a score of second raters over a year of struggle to get back to the top he left undefeated and seeks to regain only because of financial reverses. He has a fine chance to slip past McLarnin, who seemed to have lost most of his punching power when he lost to Lou Brouillard here this summer.

Kearns and Dempsey Again

Walker-Schmeling fight, either was dazed by the ring lights or in full possession of his faculties, dashed first to Kearns, now manning the colors of the Jack Kearns' stable, under the banner of the man who made him heavy-weight champion, and has been his bitterest enemy for the last seven years.

The feud broke up a week ago when Dempsey, leaping into the ring to be introduced before the

NEWARK TRIMS MINNEAPOLIS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 5.—(A.P.)—Coming from behind in the last three innings, the Newark Bears today defeated the Minneapolis Millers 12 to 9 in the fifth game of the Little World Series, which was finished under protest by the American Association champions. The victory was the Bears' third with only one more needed to clinch the class A championship.

RUGBY NOTES

THREE IN FRONT
 The Abegweits at practice yesterday afternoon tried out some new scrum formations with three men on the front line in accordance with the newly adopted rules of the Maritime Rugby Union. The scrum was formed up in various ways with a view of limiting the number of players in it to seven as heretofore. The 3-2-3 formation requires eight men, while the 3-2-2 proved loose and unstable. A 3-4 formation would appear to be most satisfactory.

SECOND DEFEAT
 The Caledonians for many years the first team in Cape Breton, sustained their second defeat in a league game in twelve years on Saturday last when the Guards A. C. took the opening game of the season by a score of 6-3.

FINDING FAVOUR
 Already it is reported that the three man formation for front line scrum is finding favour in Maritime rugby circles. It is claimed that the ball is heeled out cleaner and snappier and that the scrums form and break more quickly than is the case under the 3-2-2 system.

PRACTICES
 From fifteen to twenty players have turned out for each of the last four practices held at the Abegweit Grounds. Each day the improvement in condition is clearly noticeable in every case. Several players who have not been out yet or who have been absent for several days have signified their intention of being on deck henceforth.

Five o'clock this afternoon is the time to start.

The Saxby Gale

MONCTON, N. B., Oct. 5.—Old timers here are recalling the famous Saxby gale which occurred 63 years ago yesterday, or October 4, 1869. In conversation with George Ackman, retired claims agent, Canadian National Railways, and former fire chief of the city of Moncton, he recalled the tide very clearly. The lower portions of the city were badly flooded and the railway tracks which served the waterfront were covered with water to a depth of several feet.

The tides were the highest ever recorded in the Bay of Fundy and it was one of the most outstanding storms in the history of New Brunswick. Nova Scotia also felt the force of the tide and the gale which preceded it. At Grand Pre dykes were broken down and 3,000 acres of dykeland were flooded, drowning scores of cattle and horses. The effect of the flooding by the salt water made cultivation of the fields impossible for several years. It was called the Saxby Gale from the prophecy made by a man named Saxby who predicted the wind storm and accompanying tide. There was some loss of life also.

Just when we were beginning to feel a little more hopeful, a New Hampshire authority broke the bad news. We are suffering from occupational obsolescence complicated by technological surplussage.—The New Yorker.

NORWOOD

everything that had to do with it. He made a song out of everything Nova Scotian.

"He made a song out of the singing brook. And now his life has gone singing on down to the everlasting sea of infinite love."

"He loved his fellow men. You felt that as soon as you met him. His thought penetrated to the sympathy and courage and tenderness which are the common heritage of mankind."

"He loved Jesus. Is not that the best tribute we can lay upon his memory?"

A whole continent mourned Robert Norwood, the speaker said. People of every class and creed had found in him a brother and friend. Surely that fact would tend to lighten the burden of sorrow placed upon those who knew him most closely.

The body of Dr. Norwood, who died in New York last Wednesday night, was borne out of the church here by eight men who knew him as neighbors. They were Guy Harnish, Freeman Harnish, William Johnson, Clayton Dauphinee, Herbert McLean, Bazil Dauphinee, Granville Conrad, and Baden Conrad.

Varied Group
 With a glimpse of Blue St. Margaret's Bay looking through the trees, the casket was committed to the earth. Fishermen and farmers of the district, doctors and scholars and figures in the province's political life mingled in the throng around the grave.

In his last poem "Issa" Robert Norwood had pictured his ideal of a last resting place.

"Then let me have a home beside the sea,
 O let me be Forgotten in a garden plot until
 My spirit rises with the daffodil."

Between avenues of young pines his body was borne yesterday to find rest in the family plot where his son, Ted, was buried eight years ago.

ISLAND WRITER

The Island authoress also made reference to the loss of the Prince of Wales College building, remarking that "old Prince of Wales" did not mean to her the building which was destroyed last winter, but its predecessor in which she had attended classes.

With regard to a statement made in a recent newspaper article regarding a pond at Cavendish commonly supposed to be the "Lake of the Shining Waters," Mrs. MacDonald explained that a larger body of water at Park Corner with a bridge across it had given birth to the idea. The mistake arose from the very human tendency of attempting to make places and objects in real life correspond with those in the book. The "Lovers' Lane" is located on the farm in Cavendish.

Speaking of the pleasure she had felt at the prospect of her stay on the Island, Mrs. MacDonald remarked that the people of the Maritimes seem to know how to live. There is none of the feverishness of the larger cities. To the remark that even here an ever faster pace in life is becoming evident, she replied that wherever the motor car went it seemed to speed up the tempo.

Mrs. MacDonald, who resides at Norval, Ont., last visited this province three years ago.
