aid to the Allies without any authority, from Congress at least. The speaker charged also that President Roosevelt made secret commitments of United States aid to the Allies without any authority from Congress and without consulting that body. He charged the President with the United States to aid Great Britain and France in an "attempt to stop the dictators by force."

"The only reason we are in session — and there is no use trying to fool the people — is to help England and France to beat Germany," Holt shouted.

Not Neutral

Holt asserted that the Roosevelt administration "never had been neutral, never will be and never in fact has been." He said the United States aid to the Allies was announced in 1936 that he had been in 1937 that aggressors must be quarantined, and last January that the United States must use "methods short of war." American foreign policy has been patterned to suit British ends, he added, and early this year British statesmen were saying openly that cases of war the United States would help England.

"They knew," he said, "but the interests of the United States did not know." Meanwhile an administration group reported reaching substantial agreement on a change in the terms of the pending neutrality bill to lessen shipping restrictions. As introduced the measure would forbid United States ships entering ports of belligerents, their possessions or dependencies and the group decided cargoes might be carried without cargo to belligerent ports in the Pacific, Arabian, Indian and South Atlantic. Cargoes must not, however, include implements of war. The bill also would require the picture of soldiers bleeding and dying on the battlefields and declaring that every senator who voted to sell arms to belligerents would be a party to such killings.

Claims "Propaganda"

The 34-year-old West Virginia accused Great Britain of propaganda seeking to engage the United States in the war, Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born newspaper publisher of London who last week visited the President, "came here for other purposes" than to further the British cause, Holt charged. He realized there was German propaganda in the United States but it was out in the open and known as the German-American "bund." It could be fought. But British propaganda was disguised as American and was conducted by "Rhodes who are editing our newspapers."

U-Boat Captain

Prien claimed he recognized the Repulse because of the name and said the only other British ship of its class with two funnels is the cruiser Renown (sister ship of the Repulse) who are editing our newspapers. "English propaganda is the termite trying to undermine American neutrality," he declared. "We have internationalists here who are determined to give us democracy if they have to kill us to do it."

Could Not See Distinctly

"The British ships could not be seen distinctly but we could determine their location by dimmed lanterns at the anchoring buoy," he recounted.

"The Repulse was partly covered by the Royal Oak. Nevertheless her two funnels were towers protruded. "So I first aimed in their direction, then sent a second torpedo into the very heart of the Royal Oak. I saw distinctly how water first spurted high before the Repulse and then was followed by high red flames.

"On the Royal Oak water and fire rose even higher, both his being followed by detonations and by parts of the costly ships hurling into the air.

"The whole thing was over in 30 seconds. After that only a dark cloud of smoke was visible. The Royal Oak had disappeared while the Repulse listed heavily forward." "Immediately thereafter the British got busy with search-light and their destroyers loosed water bombs.

Seen By Man In Cove

"Only one man in a car apparently had seen us. He turned abruptly and drove off at full speed and evidently reported us. We could see him so well because we navigated quite close to the shore." Hitler shock binds with each man from the submarine and named them in the name of the German nation. He said the action "strengthened the entire German nation in the imperturbable trust of victory."

western front under the command of General Maurice Gamelin, the French Commander-in-Chief. This was the first official announcement that the Allied armies had been placed under the supreme command of the French leader, although it had been taken for granted for some months. Germany was apparently on a scouting mission, approached the Scapa Flow naval base again today, but did not drop any bombs, the Air Ministry announced.

Two raids were carried out yesterday by Nazi planes over the Orkney Islands, site of the Scapa Flow base where the battleship Royal Oak was sunk by a submarine Saturday.

The Admiralty announced in revised figures that 810 officers and men had been lost with the Royal Oak.

Mr. Chamberlain outlined these points in his seventh weekly review of the war—

Eight Bombers Destroyed

"We know that in the air battles during the last two days have for the other week fought over our coasts we have destroyed eight enemy aircraft without losing a single machine of our own."

2. That despite German "propaganda," the vast bulk of command of nearly all shades of political color in neutral countries is shown appreciation of the attitude of the Allied Governments."

3. That "the British expeditionary force has now finally taken definite peace with Adolf Hitler the French lines and all divisions are in position" with "complete" understanding between the British and the French general staff plan.

4. That British shipping lost to submarine attacks during the week ending Oct. 17 represented "only about one half of one per cent of the total number of sailings."

Mr. Chamberlain said the German Government had not answered issues he raised last week in London under warring conditions that recognized Nazi "conquests." He continued: "There is therefore nothing that I can add to my statement last week."

The King and Queen called on the London headquarters of the Dominions of Canada and Australia to see how they are being put under warring conditions. At Canada House Their Majesties were received by the High Commissioner, Hon. Vincent Massey and after a short talk, returned to the exact extent of the advance.

Tonight's programme said there was "no change on the entire front but great activity of scouting units notably between the Moselle and the Saar rivers."

Pope Pius Sees "Sinister Shadow" Over Christendom

By Richard Nassock Associated Press Staff Writer ROME, Oct. 18 (AP) — Pope Pius declared today that "the care and the peace of the Christian world are in a most serious and sinister shadow."

The Pope said Lithuania, whose national recently came under strong Soviet influence, had indicated their intention of remaining the "northern bastion" of the Christian world.

"The Pope said Lithuania, whose national recently came under strong Soviet influence, had indicated their intention of remaining the 'northern bastion' of the Christian world."

"As 'supreme pastor,' however, he said he could not close his eyes to the danger of the resurrection of souls arise now, incommensurable danger—when on the face of Europe, Christian in all its fundamental elements is being shadowed by thoughts and deeds of enemies of God casts itself clear and more threateningly every day.

"In such circumstances more than in any other period of its history the preservation, care and, if necessary, the defence of the Christian patrimony acquires for the future of the world a most important and perilous of all its peoples, large or small, a decisive importance."

The presentation of Lithuania's credentials marked the resumption of normal diplomatic relations, interrupted by a dispute seven years ago over administration of church property. Since then only nominal relations have been maintained by Lithuania with the Holy See.

Sweden, Norway and Denmark Meet In Conference

By Wade Warner Associated Press Staff Writer STOCKHOLM, Oct. 18 (AP) — The kings of Sweden, Norway and Denmark today discussed the preservation of their countries' neutrality and normal trade while Stockholm newspapers appealed to the northern states to make the conference a starting point for a general move toward peace.

The appeal, signed by "representatives of the Swedish industry and trade," said the reaffirmation of the northern states' neutrality and earnest desire for peace was good, "but not enough."

"We must also watch for every opportunity to promote peaceful contacts between belligerent powers before it is too late, the appeal added. "In this hour the influence of the northern states is not small."

GLASGOW, Oct. 18 (CP Cable) — Assertion that the sunken liner Denham carried guns as she sailed on her ill-fated voyage for Canada was categorically denied again here tonight by Norman Donaldson of the Donaldson Atlantic line owners of the vessel.

"There was not a single gun on board," he said, and the affidavit filed with the United States Department of State was termed "completely and absolutely nonsense."

Nazis. At other points they fell back before the German advance according to the French general staff plan. French military observers who originally said their assistance covered for the Maginot line, said tonight their main lines now had been withdrawn to a point more easily supported since it was close to the winter bases in the Maginot line.

Tonight's official French communiqué merely reported "great activity" on both sides scouting for weak places in each other's lines between the Moselle and Saar rivers.

Nazis Four Troops Into Lines

The morning communiqué said the Germans were using railroads, trucks and cars to pour thousands of new troops into the fighting zone.

German troops held fast to the strip along the French frontier northeast of the village of Apach which they took by shock attack in force on Monday. The strip was described as probably no wider than 50 yards on a four-mile front running east from the Luxembourg frontier.

Military observers said that while the Germans awaited reinforcements they were consolidating their new positions, stringing barbed wire along trenches and constructing tank traps.

French observers insisted the German forces had been unable to penetrate their main line of resistance, which they said was still on German soil except for the sector just east of Apach.

Holt's report was reported to be trying to locate the French main line while the French were equally interested in probing German lines to find the exact extent of the advance.

Tonight's communiqué said there was "no change on the entire front but great activity of scouting units notably between the Moselle and the Saar rivers."

Eloquent Tribute To Late Mr. Irving

There was a large attendance at the funeral Tuesday afternoon of the late Mr. James C. Irving. Rev. A. S. Weir, pastor of the United Churches of Orwell, Cherry Valley, and Vernon River conducted the services at the Irving home in Vernon and in Cherry Valley Cemetery where Mr. Irving was laid to rest.

The familiar hymn "Abide With Me" was sung and scripture readings from the 121st Psalm, verses from the 139th Psalm the Epistle to the Hebrews and the 7th chapter of Revelations were read by Mr. Weir who paid an eloquent tribute to the memory of Mr. Irving, taking as his text "Mark the sincere man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace" Psalm 37.

Mr. Weir spoke as follows: We are gathered together this afternoon in deep sympathy and sorrow, yet in quietness and confidence.

We mourn the passing, at a comparatively early age of one beloved as a husband, brother, neighbor, friend, whose going hence impoverishes the life of our community and province.

But we do not mourn as those that have no hope, for we share his faith in the life that is to be and the words of our text give us pause for comforting thought. "Mark the sincere man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

James C. Irving was one of our most highly esteemed citizens endeared to a large number and respected by all.

In public and in private life he held the highest reputation as a man of uprightness and integrity, a man whose character was above reproach.

He was a man of genuine humility however and would make no such claims for himself, but this great gathering today testifies to the fact that those who knew him share this judgment, as you have come to pay your tribute of respect to his memory.

Very simply I want to pay my tribute now, and I wish I could in some way express to our friends and family here today something of our sincere sympathy toward them.

I had been his minister for a number of years and often enjoyed the privilege of talks with him in his home. He always made visitors welcome and to feel at home with him, and people from every walk in life were received in a courteous and friendly way.

Sterling Qualities

And now he is gone. People will speak, as the press has, of the doing of his career as an agricultural student, farmer, legislator and business man. I want to speak of some of those qualities of his life which enabled this quiet worker to stand so prominently in the community, and of his qualities of heart and faith that enabled him to overcome even despite the discouragement in later years, of poor health, to endure until the end and to obtain spiritual victory.

He had a kind heart, a brave and calm spirit. His sympathies were wide and generous. He was ever ready to give a helping hand. To his colleagues and fellow workers in any undertaking or institution he was always kind and considerate, and many will treasure memories of their associations with him. Such men by their gentle presence and encouraging word make for men and women the hill less steep. He had sound judgment and a quick social conscience and always stood for the best things and for what he believed to be in the country's best interests.

His religious faith was simple but well grounded. It is said the faith of all great souls is simple. He believed in prayer in a real sense, and he revered the Sacred Word.

From his message he received guidance and comfort. Often I read to him from his pages and he always appeared to appreciate deeply the moments of worship.

His presence in the place of public worship was a great blessing. His permitted attendance was helpful to others as well as to himself. In that way he threw his influence in a good direction. His was devoted and his support of religious ordinances was always generous and freely given.

He was however never intolerant and people of other faiths than his own were among his best friends. With his demise the United Church loses a loyal friend, and the Church Universal and all good causes, one who wished them well.

His health had been impaired for some years and for the last several months he was bedfast. Through it all he was cheerful and glad to talk with his friends. But although he had the best of medical care and skillful nursing as well as the loving and constant care of his partner in life, the ravages of disease could not be saved. His health gave out with the falling of the leaves and he passed quietly away on the fourteenth of this month, about the sunset hour.

Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to his wife, now so grief stricken, and we extend sincere condolences to all the other members of the family and pray that they may be blessed by the upholding consolations of their religious faith in the Divine One who was their loved one's unfailing keeper. We can scarcely realize that he has left us but for the present we must farewell him surely for such is meant the "well done good and faithful servant." Should not the remembrance of Mr. Irving and of other such fine men whom we have been privileged to have with us, and the remembrance of their contribution to the finer things of life and their service of God, be a challenge to us that we be also to the good and true and as humble learners from the great Master, learn also "to do justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly with God."

He too when for us the evening shadows fall and our life's tasks are ended, we may find comfort in our childhood's Psalm, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. He leads me beside the still waters, he restoreth my soul; Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord for ever."

"Mark the sincere man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."
