HOW THE MILLIONS ARE ROLLING INTO CANADA.

A point in Mr. Fielding's budget speech that is well worth consideration, is that a strong army of settlers are coming into Canada this year, a great gain. It is a gain in both population and wealth, and both of these are desirable. It is suggestive, too, that the tens of thousands of other settlers coming to Canada this year from the British Isles and the continent of Europe, although they will not bring anything like so much wealth with them as the Americans, may still prove a very valuable accession. This year stricter precautions than heretofore are said to be taken against unfit persons coming in. Thus wealth present and potential and population also are rolling into the Dominion. All this means progress and growth in both the immediate and more distant future. In that regard as in most others Canada seems to be doing exceedingly well.

THE CARNEGIE HERO FUND AND ITS WORK.

In March 1904 Andrew Carnegie conveyed to the Hero Fund Commission five million dollars of steel bonds paying 5 per cent interest. This is the Hero Fund. The opening words of his letter in making this splendid donation were: "We live in an heroic age. Not seldom are we thrilled by deeds of heroism where men and women are injured or lose their lives in attempting to preserve or rescue their fellows; such the heroes of civilization. The heroes of barbarism maimed or killed theirs." The field embraced by the Fund is the United States, Canada, Newfoundland and the surrounding coastal waters. A finely executed roll of the heroes and heroines is kept displayed at the office of the Commission in Pittsburg. The rewards are bronze or silver medals, setting forth the service performed, and in certain cases of disablement or death sums of money to provide for the disabled till again able to work, or to assist in the education or support of dependent survivors.

A report of the awards made covers 246 cases between July, 1904 and the close of 1908. The rewards have gone mainly to persons in the ordinary walks of life, to those employed on railways, steamers, in mines, manufacturing, and a multitude of callings, who have voluntarily imperilled their lives and in some cases lost them in the effort to save others from danger or death. It is indeed a noble record, for in forty-three cases recorded the rescuers gave up their own lives in the effort to save others.

The heroes and heroines include persons of all ages, from the little girl or boy of nine years to the aged man or woman of three score and ten years. In fifty-seven cases they were of the age of nineteen or younger. There were ten heroes of 19, three of 18, thirteen of 17 years, five of 16 years, twelve of 15, four of 13 years, two of 12, four of 11 and one, a little girl of 9 years. In the last-named case, Marie Trevor, who could not swim, boldly leaped from a bridge into the swollen, icy waters of a swift river, to save a little playmate of seven years, caught hold of the bridge and supported him till help came and both were rescued.

The Carnegie medal of which the report gives an imprint bears on its reverse side the image of the donor, with the words, "Carnegie Hero Fund established April 15, 1904." On the reverse side are the words, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." In the centre of the reverse side, surrounded by the words just quoted is a space to record the name of the hero and the nature and date of the heroic service rendered.

The Hero Fund is nobly conceived, and magnificently endowed. It is worthy of the twentieth century. The five millions thus invested by the princely donor are surely worth more to the world than a battleship costing a like amount. Truly has Mr. Carnegie drawn the contrast: The heroes of barbarism kill; the heroes of civilization save. Mr. Carnegie made his and the first magistrate of O'Leary, and always did my best to keep law and order, which all fair minded citizens admit. The noise of Saturday night being late, I was in bed and asleep and heard nothing about it until Sunday. On Monday morning a man whose house they had entered came to me and laid his complaint. I went over to consult P. N. Pate, my colleague, as magistrate I asked him if he had done anything to stop the row. He told me he had ordered some men to go and stop the row and they did not go. Were afraid they would get their glasses broken. We then issued papers. After getting the papers issued I went up and down the street to get some one to serve them. At last we succeeded by guaranteeing their expenses and had them arrested. Now Mr. Editor the stigma on the Magistrate was published for me, as the correspondent and clique have for three years been trying to injure me in my public capacity.

O'Leary knows this, Prince County knows this, and the whole island knows this. Trusting you will give this a place in your valuable paper, I remain yours, ROBERT ELLIS, J. P. for Prince County.

GO, WINTER.

Go, winter, Go thy way! We want again The twitter of the bluebird and the wren: Leaves ever greener growing, and the Shine of summer sun—not thine. Thy sun, which mocks our need of warm and love, and all the heartening fervency thereof, It scarce hath heat enough to warm our this Pathetic yearnings in. So get thee from us! We are cold, God wot, Even as thou art. We remember not How little we hailed thy coming—Get from us utterly! Ho! summer then Shall spread her grasses where thy snows have been. And thy last footprint melt and mold In her first martingold.—James Whitcomb Riley.

Death or Insanity

Ne vous. Sleepless. Worn out. Exp'cted to die or go crazy with nervousness.

"I could not sleep—I could not rest in was ready to cry on the least occasion—yet I was plump and fat. Can you imagine a more distressing condition than weakness of body and mind?" writes Mrs. Wensley, of Halifax. "I lost myself in a sort of self pity because health seemed so shattered and with the mental distress that grew with my bodily weakness, I was a burden to myself and a greater burden to my family.

"Though I thought and really needed pity, I got very little, for I did not look so very sick. It was only my nerves that were sick, and anyone who has sick nerves knows too well how awful a sickness it is. "From the first Ferrozone strengthened my nerves, and it seemed to help them for I became stronger, more composed, slept more and grew more hopeful. When I had taken Ferrozone for about two months I lost that miserable sense of dread. I never could tell what I was afraid of, but expected something dreadful was going to happen me. Ferrozone gave me the strength to throw aside all these fancies and made me well again."

Go at once to any druggist, get a few boxes of Ferrozone—start right on the road to health and vigor. Ferrozone will keep you there—will show you what it means to be healthy, vigorous, full of nerve energy. Once you're braced up and energized with Ferrozone you'll never again be content with ill-health. All dealers sell Ferrozone, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50.

LIVES AS AN INDIAN

up a conversation with the Indian-like fellow who sat by him. "No, I am a white man," the bronzed face frontiersman said, "but I have lived forty years with the Indians and do not even know my own name. They call me 'Two Braids,'" he continued, shaking out the heavy plaits of hair which he wore across his shoulders. "That's the only name I ever knew. But somewhere there are some of my own people who know my own name, and I am going to keep on hunting until I find them. I know that the Indians captured me down here somewhere north of Corpus Christi many years ago, and that they killed my father and mother."

By one of those strange coincidences that occur so frequently in life, Two Braids was talking to a relative, Mr. Burris met him again in San Antonio last week, telephoned his nephew, J. L. Burris, at Stockdale, and the next day Two Braids was talking to his cousin. Family resemblance between the cousins as well as bits of story which the two were able to piece out made it certain that Two Braids was actually "Tommy" Stringfield.

But the crowning identification was made when Mrs. Ida Hatfield, the matron who has grown from the little girl whom the Indians left dead, came from her home in response to a telegram from W. C. Burris. Both Two Braids and Burris went to the station to meet her.

From a dozen or more women coming from the train Two Braids' gaze centered on one.

"This is Ida Hatfield?" stepping to her side, and almost before she could nod her assent he embraced her.

For him the sight of this woman, his sister and the only surviving member of his family, rushed away in an instant all doubt as to whether he instinctively for the sister who, forty years before, had tended him as "baby brother."

Not so the matron, who saw, instead of the chubby boy she remembered, a brown man who wore his hair in two straight looking braids, and it took her several minutes to recover from the shock of this sudden embrace.

But when the party had taken the car and Mrs. Hatfield could look more closely at the face of the man, slowly and then rapidly she began to
