heard after Sandys' announcement. "The question as to how far it is permissible to compel a member of parliament to divulge the source of information used by him in the discharge of parliamentary duties is in the process of being considered by this House," the 30-year-old Conservative said amid loud applause. "In these circumstances, I submit to you that it is a gross breach of the privileges of this House."

The Prime Minister offered a motion asking immediate submission of the question to the privileges committee. Opposition and Government members arose to protest the military action involving Sandys.

Mr. Attlee said it seemed strange the Government would authorize such action.

Automatic Proceeding

The Prime Minister replied that in a case involving violation of the Official Secrets Act "it would be an automatic proceeding to set up a court of inquiry, and a court has been set up, and the proceedings do not come under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of State (War Secretary) himself, but under the jurisdiction of the Government."

Mr. Churchill acknowledged that "in taking action himself, the Prime Minister has certainly acted in accordance with the high traditions of the House," but insisted that the order calling Sandys before a military court be immediately rescinded.

James C. Ede, Labor, was applauded by some Conservatives as well as by the entire opposition bloc when he said: "It is well to bring home to the right honorable gentleman on the front bench opposite (the Government bench) in view of the statements that have been made by the Ministers of this state cannot do what the ministers of state of Germany can do."

The executive must always be subordinate to the House of Commons," said Sir Percy Harris, opposition Liberal. "The Secretary of War cannot divorce himself from any action of the Army Council, and in turn the Government cannot separate itself from the decision of the Secretary of War."

Under Misunderstanding

Mr. Chamberlain replied he thought Sir Percy was under some misunderstanding. "The court of

Chemistry, Physics Can Remake World's Civilization, Claim

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH
Associated Press Science Writer
OTTAWA, June 29.—Chemistry and physics can remake the world's civilization, two of America's outstanding winners of the Nobel prize told the Association for the Advancement of Science today. "Men and nations abandon 'cowardly' wars as a solution of economic problems."

Dr. Harold C. Urey of Columbia University and Dr. Arthur H. Compton of the University of Chicago accepted for science much of the blame for economic upsets, unemployment, depressions and social and political revolutions in recent years.

However, they declared in addressing the third session of the Association's symposium on science and the future, "the peoples of the world passing through the present transition period should not lose faith in a greater and happier life which scientific developments already promise and seem to be feasible and cowardly wars as a quick solution for their temporary difficulties."

Speaking for the science of chemistry, Dr. Urey declared that "chemistry can and perhaps will destroy our European civilization because of its contributions to new explosives, incendiary bombs and poison gases." It is even possible that "a complete destruction of our civilization may result" from another world war, he added.

On the other hand, "if we act with courage our descendants will be born in an abundance of necessities and luxuries the like of which we cannot imagine," he added. "If we are not courageous, they may live with less than we have at present."

Counting up some of the contributions of physics to the modern world, Dr. Compton declared that electrical power and machinery, developed through the physical research of the 19th century, "is to the world's existence" and is much more significant than the result of any past war.

"Does the honorable member know he imposed a padlock law on the press in the House an hour ago?" asked Pensions Minister Power.

"I was not here," replied Mr. Coldwell.

(Mr. Power was referring to a provision in the new election and franchise act passed in the Commons which would make it an offence punishable with a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment for more than a year or both with any person publishing or broadcasting election results from any part of Canada in any province before the polls close in that province.)

Government Crisis Seen In Britain

(By The Canadian Press)
LONDON, June 30.—(Thursday)—The parliamentary storm over the Official Secrets Act and the case of Duncan Sandys, Conservative, who told the House of Commons he had been ordered to appear in uniform before a military court of inquiry investigating a "leak" in anti-aircraft defence information was re-echoed today in newspaper editorials.

The political correspondent of the Daily Mirror wrote that Prime Minister Chamberlain "may be forced to offer war secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha as a sacrifice."

The Mirror added: "The Premier, however, has been informed of every step his minister was about to take and it is believed in Commons that Mr. Hore-Belisha's departure would bring down the Premier too."

The Daily Herald (Labor) said: "The crisis may bring down individual ministers and may dangerously undermine the government itself."

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said that should the suspension be created the Official Secrets Act could be utilized to stifle dissent. "Such departments from the revelation of their own defects it would 'speedily become tyranny extended by the same power that brought it into being."

The Daily Mail (Conservative) said: "Such draconian of a private individual who at the worst can be reproached with no more than an excess of zeal in his country's service will have no approval of British public opinion."

The News Chronicle (Liberal) said: "This affair is only the latest of a series of incidents which shows the authorities are already infected with the vices of a police state."

The Daily Express (Independent) yesterday said: "The House of Commons is the grand jury of the nation. It is utterly intolerable that a member of that jury should be required to deliver up to a law officer the source of his information on a public matter. There will be one mighty uproar if the Act which is intended to safeguard our freedom from foreign pressure is used to stamp out common liberty in Britain."

Herridge Speech Is Approved By Premier Aberhart

EDMONTON, June 29.—(CP)—Approval of the so-called "national action" against money powers was expressed in a telegram sent by Premier Aberhart of Alberta to Hon. W. D. Herridge of Ottawa, former Canadian Minister to Washington.

Referring to an address made by Mr. Herridge in Halifax Monday night, Premier Aberhart today issued a statement and text of the telegram which he forwarded to Mr. Herridge yesterday after the caucus of Social Credit members of the Alberta Legislature discussed the address.

Text of Mr. Aberhart's telegram to Mr. Herridge:

"Warm congratulations on your stirring call for national action against money powers. This is matter above party politics and your timely urging warning to Canadians against forces of reaction and reactionaries is warmly endorsed by this Government and Social Credit caucus now meeting in Edmonton."

Text of the accompanying statement issued by Premier Aberhart:

"The masterly speech of the Hon. W. D. Herridge delivered in Halifax, though addressed to a party political convention, is of national importance at the present time. It is stamped with a brilliance which is a national asset and conviction and never in the history of our nation has there been a greater need for an urgent and eloquent appeal to the people of Canada to arouse themselves and demand action."

Mr. Herridge tears aside the veil of make-believe. He shows the insanity and the danger of permitting poverty to stalk a land so abundantly rich that it could support a population many times greater than its present eleven millions. He tells the people of the secret intrigue and trickery by which political parties and governments are made the mere tools of an international money power. He warns us that revolution and dictatorship will intervene unless the present crisis of economic importance in a land of abundant wealth is met by definite and fearless action to unite in demanding action and reform. I cannot help but admire him as long as he takes the stand he has and presses for the deliverance of the people. I believe that Mr. Herridge's historic speech marks the beginning of a new era in Canadian politics and the struggle of her people to shake off the yoke of a savage economic bondage.

Use of loud speakers, flags, signs, banners and other political propaganda on automobiles in parades is also prohibited before the close of polls on election day and on the day before. This will prevent a victory celebration on election night, however.

The House turned down a proposal to strike out a section disqualifying inmates of institutions from voting where they are disqualified from voting in provincial elections.

STRAWBERRY GRADE—Attention of strawberry growers and shippers was called by Mr. C. E. Shaw, Senior Fruit and Vegetable Inspector to the grade regulations for strawberries for fresh fruit purposes when offered for sale on a grade basis as described in the Fruit, Vegetables and Honey Act and Regulations. "No. 1" shall consist of strawberries with the cap (calyx) attached, which are well-formed, of good colour, firm but not overripe, free from surface moisture, bruises, bird pecks, mould and from damage caused by sand, disease or other means. The minimum diameter shall be 3-4 inch for each crate shall be placed in the grade designation. No person shall sell or offer for sale or have in his possession for sale any produce in any package of which the face or surface is marked with a false representation of the contents in that more than ten per cent of the produce is smaller in size than, or inferior in grade to, or different in variety or material from such face or surface. No person shall sell or offer for sale any produce in any package unless such package is well and properly filled. Slack measure and inferior grades and other common faults in strawberry packing.

hour of closing of the poll in such province, publish the result of the polling in any electoral district in Canada whether such publication is by radio broadcast, or by newspaper, news sheet, poster, billboard, handbill or in any other manner.

Party lines were broken on the question although most Conservatives favored a proposal for staggered hours of polling and all supported the proposal. The only opposition to staggered hours came from Nova Scotia and British Columbia members. The former objected to having polls in their province open until seven o'clock and the latter to polls closing at five o'clock, local time.

Howard Green (Con. Vancouver south) was the only Conservative to oppose staggered hours today although A. J. Brooks (Con. Royal) who was absent, spoke against them the last time the bill was up.

In other respects the bill puts the Canadian electoral system generally back where it was in 1930 as it discards arrangements made in 1934 for a permanent list of voters, revised each year. This bill repeals the Dominion Franchise Act of 1934 and makes the work of preparing voters' lists one of the duties of the chief electoral officers and his staff who will make a new list after writs are issued for a general election. The present franchise commissioner's office will be abolished.

An important new provision makes it illegal for a candidate to sign any pledge to follow a particular course of action or to promise to resign his seat if called upon to do so by any person, persons or associations.

New provisions were adopted to let voters know the names of the voters' lists. In cities of 25,000 or more people a copy of the preliminary list of voters will be sent to every voter as soon as it is prepared. In other cities and towns

Fur Farms Are Fish Customers

Fur farming and fishing had no relation a few years ago, but the situation's a bit different now. Fur ranchers in Alberta, for instance, are now using such large quantities of fish as herring, pollock, hake and cod. These are important species, of course, but no doubt some of the less important kinds of fish could also be used. Particular qualities or properties that are in fish foods which make them valuable on the fur farms is for the ranch expert to say, but in the case of lower animals. For example, fish have relatively high contents of easily digestible proteins. They contain vitamins. They have in them the important mineral nutrients such as calcium, phosphorus, copper, iron and iodine. Sea fish are the greatest known food source of iodine and it is the oils of some at least of these fish that Vitamin D is present in especially large quantities.

REARMAMENT BLOCKS Migration, Claim

LONDON, June 29.—Rearmament has interfered with over-populated Britain to the Dominions, the Marquess of Willingdon, former Governor General of Canada, told the annual meeting of Fairbridge Farm Schools today.

Expenditure of vast sums on armaments meant the Government "cannot apply itself now to a big scheme of emigration," Lord Willingdon said. "Special inducements were needed to encourage emigration because people no longer were willing to leave the country. Britain is ordered to take a chance in the Dominions."
