—MUFFS IMPORTANT IN FASHION NEWS

It's good this season to match your muff (and large generously shaped muffs are particularly smart) with the fur collar on your cloth coat. One youthful coat of antique green wool is gently shaped to the figure in the back with cleverly placed darts and tied in front with half belts. The large turned-over collar and large rug muff are of soft sheared beaver. A new trick this season is to wear the muff pushed up on one arm like a huge cuff.

President Of Post Office Suspended

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Dec. 2—(CP Cable)—The Newfoundland department of Posts and Telegraphs today suspended President A. Anthony of the Post Office Workers Union after a strike partially affected telegraphic communication on the Island.

In an official statement, G. D. Fraser, Secretary for Posts and Telegraphs, said the strike was only partial, the St. John's employees remained loyal and the offices at Placentia and Topsail were functioning as usual. Railway telegraphers were not affected.

On Oct. 11 Anthony asked the authorities to enter into negotiations with the union for higher wages. Fraser then was in England but subordinates notified the Union that the matter would be submitted to him on his return. Subsequently, Anthony was requested to forward particulars as to the Union's size membership and constitution.

The Union head replied on Nov. 25 saying information regarding the number of persons in each office couldn't be disclosed but forwarded the constitution and asked negotiations be begun Dec. 2. Posts and Telegraphs believed the matter was one for the commissioner of finance who was in England. Just after his arrival fraser said he received a message from Anthony regretting no reply had been sent to his letter and stating that unless a favorable telegraph reply was received "today drastic action will be taken by the organization"

Officials immediately suspended An hony. At 9:17 A. M today (Newfoundland time) a message was received announcing a strike had been called for 11 A. M.

Fraser said at this stage no refusal to recognize the Union had been given but it was impossible to engage in discussion with employees under threat and a serious view was taken of the employees' conduct. Relief operators were available and the department would maintain the "fullest possible service."

BRITISH BID FOR CIVIL AIR DOMINATION

Government Orders Giant Long-range Transport Planes For Transatlantic Service.

(By ROBERT BATTLEFORT
Copyright, 1938, by The Havas News Agency)

LONDON, Dec. 1—(CP Havas)—Announcement the Air Ministry has ordered construction of a number of giant four-motored long-range transport planes coincided today with reports that Government plans to compete with Air-France and German Lufthansa lines in the Transatlantic air service between Europe and South America are about completed.

Regular air service will be inaugurated next year it was understood Planes flying the South Atlantic route with postal and freight cargoes will gather the necessary weather and technical data to pave the way for passenger service.

Flight Schedule

Planes on the South American run will leave Heston Airport and terminate their run at Buenos Aires, under present plans. Stops will be made at Lisbon, Horta and the Azores, and Bathurst, Gambia on the west coast of Africa.

It is expected Horta eventually will serve as a junction for two Transatlantic lines, one branching off to South America and the other proceeding to North America via Bermuda. It is also planned to have the South American line extended to Trinidad and British Guiana.

Tentative plans for the long projected air service to North America have called for flights via Bermuda, possibly in the winter time, to supplement the service to Canada, by way of Newfoundland.

For Regular Lines

It was believed the new craft will also be used on regular lines between London and European capitals and in the service linking Britain with the Dominions and Colonies.

The concession for the South American route has been granted to British Airways but the recent announcement that it soon would be merged with Imperial Airways into a new public corporation controlled by the Government will place the experience and resources of both companies at the disposal of engineers working out details of the new line.

Fairbridge Children In Canada

Speaking of a visit to British Columbia, from which he has just returned, Mr. W. A. McAdam, Acting Agent-General for that Province, says in "Canada's Weekly":—

"Of my own personal experience, not the least interesting were my meetings with some of the many people who had left the Old Country in recent years through the agency of British Columbia House to take up their residence in the Province. It was gratifying to be told that they had not regretted the change, and that they had found happiness in the serenity of their British Columbia surroundings.

"Especially memorable was my visit to Fairbridge, or rather, to be exact, were my three visits. A great work is being carried on there under the direction of Col. Harry Logan, in those 1,000 acres of farm and woodland in the Koksila Valley. There are now 139 children. I had seen them all at British Columbia House, party by party, before they left England, and well as they had looked then, it was really wonderful to note the improvement in physique and general bearing effected by their new environment.

"This making of young citizens is surely the highest expression of Empire building, and I am proud to know that British Columbia is associated with it. Of all that I carried away with me in the course of my six weeks' stay in the Province, nothing perhaps dwells quite so vividly in my memory as the picture of these boys and girls of the Old Country being brought to a happy maturity amid the loveliness of their island home on our Pacific coast."

Fox Educational Week Brought To Successful Close

Fox Experimental Station Staff Members Give Addresses — Demonstrations Given.

The Fox Educational Week, sponsored by the Board of Trade held at Summerside all this week was brought to a successful conclusion on Friday morning, with a final demonstration on live foxes. Mr. W. F. Burke, Mr. George Mayers described defects in the fur of animals on the table.

These demonstrations both of live animals and pelts which have been held every morning and afternoon have been of great value to the ranchers who attended.

Mr. G. Ennis Smith Superintendent of the Fox Experimental Station had a booth with charts and illustrations showing various stages in the growth of fur, and other interesting facts on fox breeding. The booth was visited by ranchers every day. The meetings on Thursday night concluded the addresses for the week.

Speakers were Messrs. G. Ennis Smith, Dr. C. K. Gunn, and Mr. Robert Inman, all on the staff of the Fox Experimental Station.

Mr. Smith opened the meeting by describing charts showing examples of line breeding and inbreeding and where common errors are made in such operations. In regard to the animals from which to start line breeding or inbreeding operations they must be quality foxes and with a strong fur as starting with soft furred foxes only leads to detrimental results. Mr. Smith stressed the value of adopting a regular system in the breeding operations of a ranch and feels quicker and more permanent results can be achieved in this way. Too many ranchers are following a loose method in mating up their foxes for each breeding season. In the course of his remarks Mr. Smith stated he believed in the course of time new types of silver foxes will be developed far superior to anything we have now.

Dr. Gunn gave a very interesting and valuable illustrated lecture on the testing of the female at the mating time and showed the beneficial results to be obtained by these testing operations. The charts shown illustrated very clearly the accuracy of the tests.

Mr. Robert Inman spoke on the comparative food value and food costs of several kinds of meats and fish and from his remarks it is plain that the cheapest food in price is not always the cheapest food in value. Mr. Inman evidently has put in a great deal of study on this question and during these days when costs of production are so very important an item in the industry the work being carried on by Mr. Inman should prove of great value to the industry.

Mr. G. Ennis Smith then resumed his talk and brought out that his experiments so far show that on pups a faster growth is obtained early in the summer with the cooked cereals but that by early September those fed the raw cereals made a longer and more steady improvement with a better color and texture. Questions were then asked Mr. Smith and a very interesting and valuable discussion followed.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

CONSTIPATION

In talking to a service club I stated that in my experience about half the patients who consult a physician were constipated and that if they would learn some simple method to keep the bowel active without the use of severe cathartic medicines, most of their feelings of illness and depression would disappear.

After the close of the meeting a physician from a large clinic conducted by a group of medical and surgical specialists, told me that in his clinic at least 70 percent of the patients gave a history of constipation.

To avoid purgative or laxative medicines, many naturally turn to foods for relief and there is no question but that in some inactive individuals with a lazy bowel coarse foods such as raw vegetables, raw fruits, bran, and whole wheat bread stimulate (without irritating) the bowel and cause it to move wastes downward and out of the body. But this coarse diet used in the high strung, nervous, or emotional individual will so irritate the lining of the bowel as to cause spasms which block the passage of the wastes downward thus causing or keeping active an inflamed condition of the bowel—colitis.

Every physician advises the patient to go to the toilet and attempt to make the bowel move, either on arising or immediately after breakfast. A hot or cold drink before breakfast helps a number of cases.

Very often the patient is not strong or else does not use enough muscular power to be effective, and sometimes the seat of the the toilet is too high from the floor to permit the crouching or squatting position that helps drive wastes from the bowel.

At the Race Betterment Conference, held at the Battle Creek Sanitarium some years ago I noted a stool or bench in front of each toilet. By placing the feet on this bench—a few inches from the floor—the proper crouching attitude, which brought the knees close to abdomen, could be attained. This position enables the patient to get more power from the abdominal and other muscles necessary in removing wastes from the bowel.

This should be a good point for mothers also because in many homes the toilet seat is so high that the youngster's feet do not reach the floor. A little bench or stool on which the feet can be placed may be all that is necessary to prevent constipation.

Heart Rending Hospital Scene

(By MURLIN SPENCER)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 1—(AP)—In a gray-stone Hospital a farmer bit his lips tonight and, addressing no one, said: "I lost one boy five years ago; this one was all I had left."

As nurses led him into a side room he passed farmers and farmers' wives, some openly crying, the men comforting their women — parents of the more than a score of Jordan district school children killed today when a train crashed broadside into a crowded school bus.

At the scene of the crash, two miles south of Midvale, a Salt Lake City suburb, a long freight train stood still, unable to proceed because of a solid, steel chassis wrapped around the locomotive cowcatcher and bent under its wheels.

Farmers and Sheriff's Deputies carrying canvas sacks and bushel baskets went about "picking up every little piece that's left" on orders of Sheriff S. Grant Young.

Hysterical children, survivors of the crash, told the story in short, jerky sentences. This is it.

The bus, picking up farm children to take them to the Jordan school high on a hill, was proceeding north. Close behind was "the Flying U," the Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad's fastest freight.

On the level ground, between snow-covered fields, with no buildings to obstruct the view, the bus driver turned sharply to his right, started up a slight grade to the track and stopped. Then he went ahead.

"I thought I heard someone shout 'train' and then I saw something black coming, and that was all I knew," said 16-year-old Margie Groves, a bus passenger, whose only injury was a cut on the head.

The remainder of the story could be told from the wreck. The engine crashed into the orange colored bus, a little toward the front. The bus body was thrown to the left and as the heavy train stopped some of the children, pieces of the bus and the children's belongings were tossed about. Children thrown from the bus at the impact escaped with their lives.

MONTAGUE P. E. ISLAND FOX SHOW

On November 15th at Montague 180 crates containing Silver Foxes entered in the Show were placed in six double lines from end to end of an unoccupied church shed, while crates or boxes containing 46 additional foxes were placed in compartments in the rear of the foxshow room. Parvin Cass and C. B. Rogers classified the foxes and P. E. I. Fieldman Burke and L. W Hancock did the judging which was by the group system, same as was originated by Mr. Burke at the Montague Show of a year ago. This group system of judging is based on Standards which seem reasonably fair to the exhibitors. Of (say) 20 foxes tabled, 3 may be of a quality that allows each to be regarded as a first prize animal, the next 7 foxes not being good enough to merit second prizes may be placed in group 3. Of the remaining 10 foxes 8 may be worthy of a group-four placing while 2 are not fit for even group 4.

Some very fine foxes were brought to the Montague Show table—foxes in some cases that were first prize animals at the recent Charlottetown Show —in addition to the Reserve Champion female fox at that show.

Among the interested visitors to the Show we would mention Hon. W. H. Dennis, Minister of Agriculture who expressed his appreciation of the quite necessary work that the Provincial fieldman is doing in furthering the up-building of quality in our fox herds. Naturally enough the Minister must be well pleased with the results so far achieved as a large share of the credit is due him for the inauguration and support he has given to provincial fox field work and study clubs. His department likewise gives financial aid to local fox shows.

Mr. W. R. Shaw, Deputy Minister of Agriculture locularly said in his address that he regarded the Kings' County Fox Exhibitors' Association in about the same way as the negro janitor did Deacon Jones when after listening to his long and comprehensive prayer he said, "That air Missa Jones am shur one great deacon to pray. He ast the good Laud for tings I guess He diden know He had." Mr. Shaw believed in "Ask and you shall receive," but suggested that the Department's contributions must be somewhat in line with its resources.

At this critical time in the Silver Fox ranching business, remarked Mr Shaw we all need to do our best to make a success of the business, and that towards winning success education and investigation were important factors. He considered the Montague Show then in progress a good one and that Messrs. Burke and Hancock were doing good work as judges. He commended Mr. Burke for his educational work in assisting the ranchers to improve their herds and said that Burke's was an arduous undertaking but with the cooperation of the ranchers it could not fail to be of far-reaching consequences in the improvement of fox herds on Prince Edward Island. Of the 226 foxes on this show the number of entries in the darker classes were small —not more than two or three foxes appearing with less than 30 per cent silver—while the silvery foxes were a much larger percentage of the whole than was the case a year ago when 153 foxes were on exhibition.

There was an evident approach to complete agreement in the judges' opinions of the different foxes and the result of their decisions met with general approval.

Among the visitors present at this Show we noticed in addition to the afore-mentioned, Mrs. W. F. Burke who followed the proceedings with evident interest in her husband's work. Miss Evelyn Johnstone of Fortune where they produce many good foxes and Mrs. Keyes wife of R. C. M. P. Keyes besides such fur enthusiasts as Col. U. G. Dawson, Major A. S. Robertson, Messrs. P. G. and Robert Clark and Douglas Bell.

Without further particularizing we feel justified in remarking on the good work of Secretary McLaggan who handled his rather difficult task very cleverly. In conclusion we congratulate The Kings County Fox Exhibitors' Association and judges Burke and Hancock on the success of their show.

INSULATION WILL KEEP FURNACE HEAT IN

Efficient insulating materials properly applied, serves three main purposes. It offers resistance to outside temperatures, helps to hold furnace heat within the dwelling, and in the event of a fire prevents the flames from rushing upward through the hollow walls and destroying the building.

It is, of course, less costly and easier to apply insulation at the time the house is built, but it is possible to insulate existing houses at costs that are not prohibitive in many cases.

There are a number of types of insulation on the market that have been found suitable for use in dwellings. The choice of insulation should be made by an expert, either an architect or an engineer.
