WAS TROUBLED WITH Weakness and Palpitation OF THE HEART.

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Little attention is paid to the slight weakness of the heart, but when it starts to beat irregularly or intermittently palpitate and throb, skip beats, beats fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can and will give prompt and permanent relief.

They do this by their restorative influence on every organ and tissue of the body.

Mrs. John J. Downey, New Glasgow, N.S., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I was troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart, would have severe choking spells, and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies, but got none to answer my case like your Pills. I can recommend them highly to all having heart or nerve troubles."

THE CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE.

Calgary has the honor for many years of being the residence of James Fidelle, as its most distinguished citizen, whose name and fame is world-wide. He is daily visited by distinguished visitors from every corner of the world and his vivid description of the Charge of the Light Brigade, in which he took part, has secured him a name on the eternal camping ground of fame.

The charge of the Light Brigade on the 25th of October, 1854, has been the talk of clubs and at great gatherings in and out of Parliament, wherever men and women congregate. The story has often been told, but brave deeds never die. The charge of the Scotts Greys at Waterloo, the charge of the Black Watch at Corunna, the charge of the Athenians at Marathon and of the immortal Three Hundred at Thermopylae have resounded through the corridors of time for the astonishment and instruction of the ages. And last but not least is the charge at Gettysburg under Gen. Armistead's Division of Pickett's Brigade with 4,900 men, when he attacked an army in position and took a partial victory out of a certain defeat.

In all these there were man to man and steel to steel, but the charge of Lord Cardigan and the Light Brigade was something of which the world had never dreamed. Its like for reckless gallantry is not found in the pages of history or in the wildest romance. Great deeds are often the result of unforeseen happenings and it was so in this case.

Late on the evening of the 24th October the Turkish commander sent a messenger to the British camp to Lord Raglan informing him of the disclosure by scouts of a movement in the Russian camp whereby it was indicated that they meditated a midnight attack, coupled with a warning to be prepared for it. Accordingly, long before daybreak, the Enniskillen Dragoons and the Second Dragoons, better known to the non-military reader as the "White Horses," or the Scots Greys, were silently moving along to meet the expected attack.

After some time an indistinct movement was heard and the Greys and Enniskillens remained motionless, their heads bent over the saddles. The day slowly dawned and as the troopers keenly watched they at length detected the points of the Russian lances. Then Scarlett made his famous charge and the remaining part of the Heavy Brigade rode up to their support. The Russians felt secure in their ambush, but a trembling of hearts as well as of lances took place at they heard the unwelcome order from a line not two hundred yards in advance—"Left wheel into line,"—and well and quickly was the order obeyed. An overwhelming dread took hold of the Muscovites and they beat a hasty retreat, and though the attacking party numbered but three hundred they left about 3,000 dead on the field.

The Light Brigade, several miles from the shore at the head of the Valley of Death, aware of the repulse of the Russian attack, began to thirst for blood and glory. Still there was no movement. But see! a horseman is coming at full gallop and to Lord Lucan, in command of the cavalry, he hands a note which Lucan slowly reads. The horses instantly became restless—"he smelleth the battle afar off." The note contained the words—"Advance for the guns—take a company of fresh horse if necessary—the French Chasseurs will support you on the left—immediate." Before Lord Lucan delivered the note to his brother-in-law, Lord Cardigan, he asked Captain Nolan who sat erect in his saddle. "Where are we to advance to?" Nolan in a haughty manner, as he unsheathed his sword, pointed down the valley and replied—"There are the guns, Sir, and there's your enemy," and galloped off.

Lord Cardigan on perusing the order, raised himself in his saddle and shouted the order—"Right wheel into line. Forward." Not another word was spoken. The horses moved first at a moderate pace which was later increased to a gallop, going at the rate of seventeen miles an hour. Scarcely had the line advanced three hundred yards when Lieut. Nolan, brandishing his sword in the air and wildly shouting at the top of his voice, was seen making straight for the batteries. A second afterwards his headless body, erect in the saddle, held its place for at least ten seconds. His horse, as the rest of the Brigade advanced, joined in the charge as if directed by his fallen master.

Exposed to a raking fire from the Russian artillery on three sides, the Brigade rode on, keeping their alignment as perfect as if on parade. The whole valley was one blaze of fire torn by shrieking shrapnell and exploding shells. On rushed the Brigade, breaking through the Russian lines in an instant, then captured the batteries, sabering the gunners and turned upon the enemy their own guns. Then friend and foe mingled in a hand to hand encounter. Infantry and the Chasseurs gave such support as was possible, but scarcely two hundred of the Light Brigade rode back again to the crest of the hill while every yard of the way was dotted with their dead.

Lord Cardigan was in great distress as he said—"My God! men, this was not my fault." "We know that," said John Reilly of the Lancers, "but give us the word and we are at them again." Lord Cardigan obeyed orders—Captain Nolan did the same and the question that can never be answered is asked again and again. In any case the famous charge had its results and perhaps more than once it has saved the peace of Europe.

Lord Cardigan was asked in the House of Lords how it was that he thought it possible to make that advance? In reply he said—"I did not think it altogether impossible and as a consequence I made the charge and took the guns."

On the crest of the hill about two miles from the valley of Balaclava stands a splendid monument recording the gallantry of the Light Brigade. Black Roland, Lord Cardigan's famous charger, was taken back to England where not only the man who led the charge but the horse that bore him through it on that dreadful day were objects of curious interest to the many. Black Roland lived to the age of 32 years.

The wizard pen of William Howard Russell attempted to describe the Charge of the Light Brigade but failed. Lord Tennyson made the attempt in poetry, but at last it seems as if he threw away his pen and in wild exclamation shouted—

Oh the wild charge they made!
All the world wondered;
Honor the charge they made!
Honor the Light Brigade!
Noble Six Hundred!

CAUGHT A BAD COLD.

DEVELOPED BRONCHITIS. SHE COULD HARDLY SPEAK.

Bronchitis begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty of breathing, hoarseness, and there is a dry, harsh, croupy cough.

After a few days mucous begins to be raised. This is at first white, but later of a greenish or yellow color and is occasionally streaked with blood.

Cure the first symptoms of bronchitis by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thus prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning to consumption.

Mrs. Edward Travers, Campbellton, N.B., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write and let you know what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I caught a very bad cold which developed into bronchitis. I was so choked up I could hardly breathe. I tried many medicines but they did me no good, and I had almost given up in despair. A friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle and felt much better, and by the time I had taken four I was completely cured, and I can assure you I cannot say too much in its praise, as it is all you claim for it, and more."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.
