Heart disease is characterized by its stealthy approach and its variety of forms, yet in all its forms nature gives unmistakable signals which warn us of its presence. One of the first danger signals announcing something wrong with the heart is the irregular beat or violent throb. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all gone" sinking feeling; or, again there may be the most violent beating, with flushings of the skin and visible pulsations of the arteries. You may experience a smothering sensation, gasp for breath and feel as though about to die. In such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is, beyond all question, marvellous. They give such prompt relief, such speedy restoration to health that no one need suffer.

Mr. Darius Carr, Geary, N.B., writes: "It is with the greatest pleasure I write you a few lines to let you know the great blessing your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been to me. I was a total wreck from heart failure, my wife advised me to take your pills, and, after using two boxes I was restored to perfect health. I am now sixty-two years of age and feel almost as well as I did at twenty."

Price 50 cents per box or 3 for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

GUARDIAN SHORT STORY

Investing In Fame.

By TAYLOR WHITE.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

Miriam, her arms full of flowers, stepped through the little door leading from the stage to the auditorium. Her eyes still sparkled with the excitement of the evening, and the clear skin glowed brightly pink as the little groups, still lingering in the hall, hurried forward to compliment the leading lady.

To John Temple, lingering in the background, it seemed as if Miriam had never looked so lovely, and he pressed forward to take his place in the little crowd.

"Take the flowers, please, Jack," she said as he caught her eye. "Every one has been so kind to me. I feel that I do not deserve it all. You should have heard what Mr. Stanley said. He wants to speak to Mr. Belasco about me. He is sure that he can place me with his company after a little technical instruction."

Temple dutifully took the flowers and stepped into the background. He hated these private theatricals at which his wife shone so brilliantly. Still more, he hated Stanley, the professional coach, who had played the lover. Of course the love was all a pretense, a sham of the stage, but just the same he did not like to see his wife in another's arms.

For half an hour Mrs. Temple held her little court while the janitor waited impatiently to close the hall. Then Stanley joined the group, and Mrs. Temple moved toward the entrance.

"I have asked Mr. Stanley to have a bite of supper with us," she explained over her shoulder to her husband, and it was Stanley who helped her into the carriage and took his seat beside her, leaving the front seat to Temple and his load of flowers.

It was over the table that Stanley sprang his mine. For an hour he argued in favor of Miriam's determination to go upon the professional stage, and in the end he prevailed. Temple, worn and exhausted with the struggle, pushed his chair back and rose from the table.

"It may be as you say," he said wearily. "If Mrs. Temple is destined to become an ornament to the American stage, I suppose I am selfish in withholding my consent."

"My dear fellow," cried Stanley, with offensive familiarity, "I tell you Mrs. Temple can't help being one of the stars of next season. It's in her, and it's bound to come out."

Temple made no reply as he moved away from the table and crossed to the library for a cigar. This was what he had feared from the time Miriam had scored her first success. Perhaps it was as well to have it over with.

A week later Mrs. Temple was established in New York with her mother, and daily she worked at her lessons in the dingy cavern of an unlighted stage, taking delight in the fact that she was treading the boards that of the foremost actors of his day.

Stanley was a coach of no mean skill, and he worked with a will to earn the large fees that were paid him. By spring he was able to place Miriam in a small part in a Broadway production. The cost of the costumes was double that of the salary to be paid for the entire engagement, and the manager was glad to get some amateur who would dress the part artistically, while at the same time he was shrewd enough to realize the advertising possibilities of the wife of a millionaire almost nationally famous.

Encouraged by her success, Miriam gave up her summer to study at the suggestion of Stanley, who was glad to move to the Temples' country home and drive the Temples' horses when lessons were not in progress.

He had obtained an offer of the same part for the coming season, but Miriam was not content to continue in a minor role, and Stanley, seeing that the end was near, suggested an invitation performance.

"Mrs. Temple can play small parts to the end of her days," he pronounced ponderously. "What we want to do is to force the issue—to show people what she is really capable of. We'll hire a theater, get a good cast and put on, say, 'Romeo and Juliet.' That will make the managers sit up and take notice."

"Very well," said Temple quietly. "Get the best company you can and do the thing right."

Miriam, to whom Stanley had already broached the proposition, stared at her husband. Temple was a multi-millionaire, but the ten or twelve thousand dollars that Stanley had declared the experiment would cost was a large sum to venture on a single matinee. Impulsively she sprang from her seat and ran to kiss him.

Temple smiled gently. It was the first voluntary kiss Miriam had given him since her greeting at the station. She did not realize in her absorption in her work how little attention she paid him.

The Ingredients of

Zutoo

One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda, that our grandmothers took to settle the stomach, and there is nothing better.

Among the other ingredients there is not one that did not come from Old Mother Earth herself.

There is not one that is not approved by both the British and American Pharmacopoeias—the highest medical authorities in the world.

There is not one that your family physician, even if a personal friend, would not approve of and prescribe.

If you are using some other headache remedy, why do you not change and use Zutoo instead?

It will cure your headaches and colds just as quickly and safeguard you against the bad after effects which may some day come from using the ordinary remedies. Zutoo tablets
