King Opens New Lloyd's Building

SAYS "LOYD'S" ONE OF THE GREATEST REPRESENTATIVES OF INSURANCE

The King, who formerly opened recently the new Lloyd's building in Leadenhall Street, London, speaking in reply to an address by Percy Mackinnon on behalf of the Corporation of Lloyd's, said:

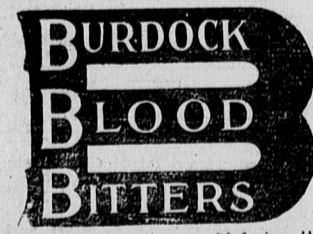

"I thank you very sincerely for your loyal and dutiful address. It gives the Queen and myself great pleasure to come here to-day and to associate ourselves with the inauguration of this magnificent building, of which, three years ago, I laid the foundation stone. The Corporation of Lloyd's are to be congratulated on this splendid addition to the architecture of the City of London. The size and fine proportions of your new hall, its dignity of style and skilful adaptation to the practical uses which it is intended to serve, will stamp it as a notable triumph of modern classical architecture. The builders of Roman London, who, nearly 2,000 years ago, erected their Basilica on this site, would see in your hall a lineal descendant worthy of the race.

"Lloyd's is one of the greatest representatives of insurance, especially of marine insurance, of which it was the pioneer; and it is the organized system of marine insurance which has transformed overseas trade from a daring and hazardous speculation to the orderly and smoothly working exchange of commodities on which modern civilization depends. The hazards indeed remain, but their disastrous consequences have been averted by the introduction of Lloyd's policy of insurance, and the unerring justice in dealing with these policies which has always been your proud tradition.

"Your Address rightly alludes to the beneficent principle which underlies all insurance, the sharing of one another's burdens. By the development of this ideal the community is linked together by mutual duties and service and in this way a shock, which would have overpowered the individual man, family, or partnership, is so widely distributed that it can be harmlessly absorbed. It was a very wise man who, nearly 3,000 years ago, said: 'Two are better than one...for if they fall the one will lift up the other; but were to him that is alone when he falleth, for he hath not another to help him.' And as insurance creates a bond of union between citizen and citizen and between nation and nation...

That Car Of Yours

By WILLIAM GILMAN

Motorists—Hear! Hear! With Automobile Owners and Drivers on How to Get the Most Out of Their Cars at the Least Expense.

TAKE KEY NUMBER FIRST

Many persons are acquiring new cars at this season and, in their enthusiasm over their purchases, they are inclined to put off one very important task that devolves upon the new car owner. That is the matter of taking the number of the key or keys accompanying the latest model. The task of duplicating a lost key is rendered doubly difficult unless a record of its number is kept by the owner. Many motorists discover this too late.

THAT MISS EXPLAINED

Fine weather, inducing motor car use on a broader scale and drawing a large number to the open highways where higher speeds are possible, is revealing that a number of engines that were running well enough in town driving develop a miss in the upper speed ranges. The first guess on the cause will be the spark plugs. Their condition may be satisfactory for ordinary traffic driving speeds, but not on those stretches where the accelerator can be "kicked" with safety. Plugs must be perfect for fine all-around performance.

APPLYING THE EYE TEST

A suspicion that the piston rings are responsible for compression leaks, particularly that represented by what is known as "blow-by," can be confirmed or refuted by a simple visual test in many cases. Lift the hood, remove the cap from the breather tube, and set the hand throttle for a fairly good—but not racing—engine speed. If there is a perceptible smoke or vapor rising from the breather, the chances are that the rings are guilty of one of the worst offenses, for blow-by demands immediate attention.

DRIVE TO SAVE MONEY

One's driving methods are more accurately reflected in car operation costs than is generally recognized by motorists. The driver who builds up a lot of speed which he knows is going to be entirely wasted—rushing toward a red light, for instance—is a first-class waster of gasoline and oil. Which, of course, runs high even without recognition of the cost of the brakes and tires consumed.

WHERE THE TASK BEGINS

Many an automobile's electrical equipment suffers at this season when the home mechanic is making minor repairs in order to get the last ounce of performance. This often is because the job was started the wrong way. Before attempting to do any real work on the generator, or to change a connection on switch or ammeter, the skilled mechanic invariably disconnects one of the battery cables. The amateur should do likewise.

THESE TWO DON'T MIX

Motorists who are aware that gasoline will remove grease from the car's finish can save themselves expense if they learn that it has its limitations in this respect. One of the most definite of these is that it should not be used on enameled fenders. It will remove the grease, that is true, but unfortunately it does not stop there. A soapy solution, vigorously applied and quickly flushed off, is better.

MAKES ADJUSTMENT RIGHT

When taking up lost motion in the steering with the front of the car jacked up, always turn the wheels as far to the right as possible before making any adjustment. In this angle, there is less wear on the mechanism than when the wheels are pointed straight ahead. If the adjustment is made in the latter position, there will be binding when the wheels are turned.

Montrose Notes

Once again the cheery honk of the motor horn is heard in the land—a proof that Spring is really here at last, and the roads are drying up nicely after the recent storm.

On Thursday evening, the 19th inst., a number of people assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Dunbar, the occasion being a denunciation of aluminum ware, by Mr. Wilfred Smith, of Alberton. Both the address and the demonstration of cooking proved very interesting, especially to the ladies, who were afterwards served with an excellent dinner. The Maple Syrup used in the dessert was the genuine, old fashioned kind, being the product of Mr. Dunbar's Maple grove, and needless to say, was much appreciated by all. At the close of the demonstration, each woman present was presented with a piece of aluminum ware.

Mr. Harold Simpson, of Summerside, was a visitor to Greenmount last week.

Miss Hazel Rayner has returned to Summerside, after a pleasant visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Rayner.

Miss Helen Dunbar, teacher at South Kildare, spent the week-end at her home in Alma.

The Tuxis Square met on Friday night in Montrose hall, under the leadership of Mr. John E. Mountbain, of Alma. A goodly number of boys were in attendance, and at the close of the devotional exercises they engaged in a lively debate on the following subject: "Resolved that country life is more beneficial to a boy than city life." Although several speeches were made on both sides, the question was left open for the next meeting and, after the usual sports and games, the meeting closed with prayer.—R.

Bow Island, Alta., April 30.—(Special)—"I have taken Dodd's Kidney Pills for backache and they have been a great benefit to me," writes Mr. E. A. Day, Box 10, Bow Island, Alta. Look at Canada, Mayor Thompson.

Condensed from Plain Talk (April '28)

BIG BILL THOMPSON should rest for a breathing spell from his pursuit of the shadow of His Britannic Majesty and take a glance into Canada. That peep might persuade him to remain taciturn for a period. He would learn that while he rants at the predatory designs of King George, statesmen in Britain's ward to the north are equally vociferous in their denunciations of the baneful influence of Uncle Sam upon their nationality. He would discern that while he belabors the historians who belittle the exalted patriotism of the Revolutionists of 1776, Dominion agitators are assailing textbook writers who depict American heroes in too favorable a light.

Blatant Bill should have attended the recent all-Dominion Conservative party convention in Winnipeg. To it came thousands of delegates, representing constituencies from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans. Literally, the convention "viewed" the land to the south "with alarm." It showed a fear of American cultural and economic tentacles, as they stretched forth to grip things Canadian, greater than Thompson's dread of British intrusion into the United States.

Every night several hundred thousand Canadians turn the radio dials to hear the stirring notes of the "Star Spangled Banner" and "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean." They catch reports of Tunney-Dempsey fights, world series baseball, or lectures on American prosperity.

Canadians spend $6,000,000 a year, it has been estimated, on American publications and only $33,000 a year on British periodicals. Add to that the comic strips, Sunday scandal pages, daily fiction, and general features of American origin in the Canadian daily newspapers, and you will understand why the flood may fashion the Provinces a la America.

Has the United States, in comparison, Mr. Thompson, anything to fear from Great Britain? How many English magazines are bought in this country?

The same effect is duplicated in the bookshops. The works of Canadian authors virtually gather dust beside the fast moving volumes of John Galsworthy, Theodore Dreiser, Upton Sinclair, Booth Tarkington, Harold Bell Wright, et al. Canada's best authors, the grief of the homeland, respond to the lure and wider markets of the States and settle in New York, losing their identity as Canadians. Even the modern historians, Mark Sullivan, David S. Muzzey and Professor Beard have their recent books displayed prominently in the bookstores of Canada. Isn't the Dominion being literally Americanized, Mr. Thompson, to an extent that makes the Anglicizing of the Union negligible?

Drop into a motion picture theater and notice the domination of American movies. Be amazed at the magnitude of American propaganda disseminated from the silver screen. Marvel at the rarity of a British or the nonexistence of a Canadian film. Literally Americanized, Mr. Thompson, to an extent that makes the Anglicizing of the Union negligible?

Such influences are growing year by year. How combat them? How keep intact the British ideals and traditions and mould them in the life of Canada? How restrain hundreds of thousands of Canadian youth flocking across the border each year?

The Conservative convention appealed for determined and organized effort to fight the adulteration of Canada by the States. The Hon. Richard Bennett, the Conservative leader elected by the conclave, declared: "The radio, with its stirring patriotic American airs, and the bookshops, filled with magazines, newspapers, written from the American viewpoint, are a great power in moulding the thought of the masses. Are we to lose our native individuality? Are we to drop our identity as a nation? Or shall we hold grimly to our traditions and make a distinct national consciousness—a true spirit of Canadianism?"

Sir George Foster, a most eloquent statesman, said: "We live side by side with the most progressive nation in the world. We live with in sound of its radios which daily and nightly teach the young and the old something of that nation's history and ideals."

The Hon. J. B. M. Baxter, premier of New Brunswick, added his lugubrious note: "We are using history books in some of the schools that extol the heroes of the United States, that talk of its greatness, that give it the credit for winning the war, that depict Woodrow Wilson as one of the world's greatest arbiters."

What are the antidotes to the poison, both subtle and overt, of America? There are several. The foremost is to glorify the heroes of Canada. That is already being done. Sir John A. MacDonaid, first premier of the Confederation, dead less than three decades, is already undergoing the deification process. A stock of legend and of lore is being built around him. A halo is being drawn about his head. He is going through exactly the same historical treatment given George Washington. His picture in colors was plastered all over Winnipeg during the assemblage.

Other pioneers of Canada, still fresh in their graves, are being can-onized in the same deliberate fashion. The second antidote is to build up a national spirit, strong enough to counteract the infiltration of United States propaganda. "What we must do in this country," explained the Hon. Mr. Bennett, "is to kindle a strong Canadian consciousness. We must establish a virile Canadianism. We must take pride in the soundness of our country's institutions and in the glory of our history and our achievements." This national temper can be brought about by training the new generation.

"We want the youths of this country to realize the breadth, depth, intensity and opportunities of this country," said the Hon. Mr. Baxter. "School textbooks should tell of the magnificence of Canada." Sir George Foster thoroughly agreed. He said, "We must visualize before young eyes the romantic history of our own country—a history more vivid than any novel."

The third antidote is to exist Great Britain, the mother country, and to arouse an affection for her. "The Conservative party has always stood for Canada distinctive, autonomous, but within the British Empire," perorated the Hon. Hugh Guthrie, present leader of the Conservatives in Parliament. "Not only because we believe it is the greatest agency for good in the world, not only because of the ideals of justice and fair play for which Britain stands, but because we find our chief security for our future guaranteed to us under our constitution in remaining in association with the British Empire."

Club Root Resistant Turips

The turip is probably the most valuable for winter feeding of our crops for all class of live stock. Mangles and sugar beets are of about equal food value, but for the reason that they are not so easily grown, require to be sown earlier, and a little more difficult to hoe and harvest, they will never become as popular with our Maritime Stockmen as the "Swede Turnip."

Unfortunately, during the past ten years, a disease known as "Club Root" has developed and has proved very destructive on many farms, and as the spores of this disease remain active in the soil for a period of five to six years, and may be transmitted through the droppings of animals Turip Crop.

There is, however, now available a variety of "Swede Turnip", that is "Club Root" resistant, known as "Bangholm", and the Provincial Department of Agriculture have this year secured from the Experimental Farm at Nanpan, a limited quantity for distribution, that has been thoroughly tested in this Province. While this variety is not quite as heavy a yielder, yet, having a smaller moisture content, the food value per acre, is fully equal to the ordinary "Swede" and we would recommend this variety soil for a period of five to six years, and may be transmitted through the droppings of animals Turip Crop.
