NO MORE GOOD-BYES

CHAPTER XX

The voyage home, which only lasted a few days, seemed to Susan to be unending. Her father met her in London and together they went down by train to his new home in Surrey. Eleanor was overcome with relief at her safe arrival. She took Susan upstairs at once to see the baby. They had a trained nurse in the house, Gillian's temperature had been fluctuating alarmingly, but now she seemed a little better and less restless. The doctor had been giving her some injections. Susan sat down beside the cot, pulled her hat off, and brushed her hair back with weary gestures from her forehead. She felt as though she had travelled across half the world. 'Yes, I do honestly, Susan. For the first time last night she has had high temperature. The doctor was very pleased this morning, he said there was every hope. "Oh, thank goodness!" Susan said. She felt an absurd impulse to burst into tears—an impulse which she restrained with difficulty. She sat instead very still in the chair beside the cot not at all to move. The room was warm and cosy and a bright fire burned in the grate behind the high nursery. The furniture was dark and painted white and the room had been newly papered, with a special nursery frieze of Noah's Ark animals walking two and two round the walls. Susan looked at Eleanor gratefully and thought, looked tired and certainly a little older; her figure had spread and her pleasant plump face had developed some new creases. "What a lovely room, Eleanor. All the peacocks in the nursery are kind of you and Daddy to take so much trouble."

"What do you think of the new house?" Eleanor asked eagerly. The house, Susan realized suddenly was very modern and worthy attention. It had been too occupied to see it before. But now she saw that, though small, it was new and compact and cheerful. There were basins with running water in the bedrooms and the windows were wide and wide. "Of course," Eleanor said. "We do miss the forest. I thought your father would never settle down at first. We look on this as a main road here, you can't see it properly at this time of night. But tomorrow when the lights are on, you won't get too much of a shock."

"But I think it's very nice," Susan said. "I think I must try to forget the forest." "It's a lovely easy-to-turn house, Eleanor, Mrs. MacEachern, what a change. The new at G.N., you know, everything's shabby. You ought to see it."

Eleanor looked up warmly. "And Martin?" she asked. "Martin is quite well, Susan dear." A shadow passed across Susan's face. She looked down at her hands, which were unconsciously with the gloves which she was still holding. "Yes, thank you," she said. "Martin's very well. He was very well when I left him. The trained nurse came into the room with a book 'Good evening.' Eleanor looked at the book and imagined that anything could ever ruffle that placid serenity. She called Peter to follow her and went out of the room, closing the door behind her.

Successful Buttermaker At the meeting the Secretary of the green cretonne curtains, reshaped to fit, and the new pale green carpet, now a little faded by the sun, she shall only have to look out of the window to-morrow morning." Susan thought, "and I shall see the forest." What an absurd thought. What was it Eleanor had said? "We look out on to a main road here."

SORE THROAT MISERY

Soothed-Relieved

Nothing will put you down faster than a deep-seated cold on the chest. Bacteria-laden mucus will clog the throat—this produces coughing and upsets digestion. You may pave the way for serious illness when you neglect a bad Cold—delay can be dangerous for you and for others near you. Why not be sensible and treat your cold now—24 days. Rely on Polson's Cough Syrup, it quickly attacks the bacteria that keep up the irritation. Help to clear your congestion! Help your sore throat due to Cold! Get rid of the mucus! Stop coughing! Ease that parched feeling at the back of the nose and throat! A helpful remedy is Polson's Cough Syrup. Use it regularly and try for better health. Polson's Cough Syrup, by the way is a tonic as well as a remedy for coughs and colds. Sold by all good druggists in 35c bottles.

Red Cross Starts Important New Branch

The Nutrition Committee of the Prince Edward Island Red Cross Society held its first meeting on Friday afternoon at Red Cross Headquarters to welcome Miss Estelle Haines, newly appointed Director of Nutrition. Miss Haines, whose home is in Montreal, won the Governor General's medal on graduating from Acadia University. She has recently completed a post-graduate course in nutrition at Cornell University.

Mrs. Allan Stevenson, National Director of Nutrition Services, was present to discuss with the committee plans for their program in Prince Edward Island. It was pointed out that a significant increase in the quantity of vegetables produced in home gardens and a more extensive use of vegetables in the diet could effectively free extra wheat flour to be shipped overseas. The Red Cross, Junior Red Cross, Department of Agriculture and Women's Institute, Department of Education, and Department of Public Health will cooperate in encouraging a larger number of home gardens this year. They will ask every citizen to do his share in increasing the quantity of vegetables for home consumption.

Girls and boys of the Junior Red Cross are expected to be active participants in this garden campaign. Some of the vegetables grown in their gardens might well be used for the Red Cross next winter. An ultimate aim of the Nutrition Committee is "A good lunch for every school child."

The services of this new department will be available to any community or group of persons desiring information or assistance in problems relating to food preparation and nutrition. The Red Cross is glad to meet with any mothers who wish to discuss with her the feeding of their families.

Members of the committee comprise: Mrs. J. Walter Jones, Chairman, Mrs. P. Heber, Mrs. M. MacEachern, Miss Hazel Sterne, Reverend Sister Loyola, Dr. B. C. Keating, Mr. L. W. Lang, Mr. J. H. MacEachern, Miss Pauline Goode, Regional Representative of the Nutrition Division, Department of National Health Services, Charlottetown, are also present at the meeting.

Annual Meeting Tryon Dairying Co.

The annual meeting of the Tryon Dairying Company was held at the creamery with a good attendance. Mr. M. Harper, President, presided over the meeting and gave a report of the company's operations for the year. The company manufactured 1,997,422 pounds of butter for which they received $71,935.83 from the Dominion Government subsidy bonus of $16-13/100. They paid the patrons the net sum of $78,194.37, an average of 10.5¢ per pound. The creamery's production was 2,200,000 pounds of butter worth $1,000,000. The factory handled $64,541.39 worth of milk feeds during the year, which was sold at the average price of 10¢ per bushel. This creamery was one of the first on the island to buy feeds for their factory. The factory was built in 1899 under the leadership of the late F. G. Lang who negotiated the purchase of the land and the buildings and under whose management the company flourished. The creamery was the first pacificated creamery butter churned from sweet cream on P. E. Island. Mr. C. E. Gamble came to Tryon to learn the butter making business, and upon the death of the late Mr. Lang in August, 1945, Mr. Gamble assumed the position of manager and secretary-treasurer.

Susan thought, "and I shall see the forest." What an absurd thought. What was it Eleanor had said? "We look out on to a main road here."

NEWS OF TERENCE

The weeks passed and Gillian was recovering. The trained nurse left and the tense harrowing atmosphere of sickness and anxiety which had hung about the house was gradually dispelled. In the intervals of looking after Gillian when relieved by either Eleanor or Edith, Susan went up to London to see her mother. Lydia had moved to yet another flat in the neighbourhood of Chelsea. The film mines were looking up and this time there were no tram running past the door. Lydia herself had not changed very much. Her figure was still trim and neat, her hair beautifully arranged in the latest style, her face carefully made-up. She was in excellent spirits nowadays and her growing interest in the American, Dwight Anderson, had all the gathering excitement of a school girl's first love affair.

NAVAL CUSTOMS AND TRADITIONS NO. 8 HANDS TO PAYMENT! Ratings, unlike Chief and Petty Officers, do not salute the Paymaster when being paid. They place their caps on the table and the paymaster places his cap on the table. A witnessing officer is present to see that ratings are properly paid, and to straighten out immediately any possible pay disputes. The custom dates back to the days when Paymasters were referred to as "Pay-bobs."
