Paris Letter

By Boulevardier (British United Press)

PARIS, August 17. (B.U.P.)—Fewer Canadian fashion experts than usual have been sent over by their houses to see the winter fashion "opening," here at which winter styles are being displayed. This may mean one of two things—Canadian women will not have so much money to spend on expensive clothes this winter, or the forecasts of the new fashions have not attracted the sickle fancy of womenfolk in the Dominion.

The former explanation would seem to be the more tenable. Buyers from most countries have not been so numerous as formerly. I am told that even the London style houses, which ranked with the American as the best customers of the Rue de la Paix, have cut down their orders in quite astonishing proportions, causing alarm to the fashion creators here. All this reflects on the little Parisian individual who is the darling of fiction authors who write about Bohemian life in Paris. I mean, of course, the little midnette.

Unemployment among the midnettes and seamstresses has been serious recently. One of the biggest houses in Paris was recently forced to dismiss several hundred hands, while there have been vacant places caused around the sewing boards of other workshops where, once upon a time, busy needles and thread could not keep pace with the world of fashion's demand for gorgeous gowns.

The mannikins, those stately ladies who always seem to have the air of being far removed from such mundane considerations as food, are finding competition more severe in the task of earning their daily bread.

A charming story about the First Lord of the Admiralty and a French sailor is related in the Paris newspapers. Whenever a British statesman, or notability, comes to France, the French Government does its best to live up to the nation's reputation for politeness and courtesy.

Something like horror spread throughout the Government ranks when it was learned on a recent occasion that the British First Lord was in Paris and no one had been sent to greet him. The police, it appears, had learned of the visit by accident.

After communications exchanged with the French Ambassador to London, the fact emerged that Mr. Alexander was here in a purely private capacity, with Mrs. Alexander. Nevertheless, the French authorities could not let the matter rest there; they must make some gesture towards their distinguished guests. Further enquiries finally tracked Mr. Alexander down to his hotel, but instead of being one of the deluxe hotels to which eminent people usually go, the first Lord and his wife were in a cheap, obscure little place. When he was accustomed to come to Paris as a trade union delegate he had been in the habit of living there.

At once, a limousine automobile was sent to the hotel and the chauffeur, a French sailor, informed the First Lord that himself and the car were at the guests' disposal throughout their stay. Delighted by this gracious act, Mr. Alexander accepted and rode about Paris, with the sailor as his faithful servant, until the visit ended. Now comes the sequel. The sailor-chauffeur is to pay his first visit to London, on the invitation of the First Lord. "You're always the lucky one," say the other marines at the Ministry to the sailor-chauffeur. France is to participate on an important scale, in collaboration with Canada, in the forthcoming celebration of the Jacques Cartier centenary. Every French school child cherished the name of Cartier as a hero; he means to the French just what Wolfe, or Captain Cook, or Clive mean to children of British stock all the world over.

The committee France-America was recently advised that Quebec Province had voted a sum equal to two and a half million francs to erect a basilica on the spot where Cartier first set foot on Canadian soil. This initiative, sponsored by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, decided the French-America organization here to devise plans to mark the occasion in an equally fitting manner.

On this side, the suggestion has been put forward to construct at St. Malo, a replica of the memorial which Quebec is to put up, just as the Seine has an exact replica of New York's Statue of Liberty, which was designed by the French sculptor, Bartholdi. First of all, however, it will be necessary to consult various French patriotic bodies which may wish to participate in the ceremonies. To enable a concrete scheme to be formulated, a committee has been formed, representing such important bodies as the Academie Francaise, which will report in due time.

Cartier's native town of St. Malo, to which he returned from his wanderings to die in 1537, will have one of the greatest fetes of its existence to honor the memory of its most illustrious son.

UNSHOD CAMELS FAILED IN TEXAS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Aug. 17.—(U.P.)—Because camels could not be shod a grand idea of Jefferson Davis to solve the transportation problem across the vast deserts of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico failed.

Old documents unearthed here revealed in 1856, Davis, then Secretary of War, imported 72 camels into Texas for use in transporting cargo over the lonely wastes of the west.

Only lowly burros were used as beasts of burden in the desert and it appeared that the camel, which is a much faster animal, would solve the problem.

The camels did — during the rainy season. But after several weeks of work during the arid summer weather the camels, their feet torn to shreds by the small flint rocks, fell to their knees.

These small rocks, it seems, were peculiar to American deserts. As the camels could not be shod they were useless.

The entire consignment was pensioned on a grassy reserve in Arizona, but it was believed most of them were killed by Indians who were frightened at the lumbering animals as they raced about.

Her passing will be deeply mourned by a large circle of friends as her quiet disposition and kindly nature had endeared her to all who knew her. Sincere sympathy is extended to her only son, Mr. James C. Henderson, who is left to mourn. The funeral took place on Monday at North Bedeque and was largely attended. S.

—WORK COMPLETED—On every hand, words of commendation mark the completion of improvements to the Summerside Railway Wharf. The work done embraces the rebuilding and strengthening of the eastern face, strengthening of the western face, repairing and strengthening of the outer end which this spring was seriously damaged by running ice, and the installation of several much needed mooring posts. Advice has been received that the deepening of the boat berths is about to be proceeded with, and that when a few minor alterations are made in the driveways, etc., the general utility of the shipping pier will be much improved. The engineers of the Dominion Department of Public Works are to be congratulated on the excellent way they have handled this work. B.

FALL'S PRISON REPORTED GOOD

SANTA FE, N.M., Aug. 17.—(U.P.)—The New Mexico state penitentiary, in which Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, is now serving a sentence, was characterized as being in "fine shape" in the annual report filed with Governor Arthur Seligman by the board of penitentiary commissioners.

The report was filed with the governor since Fall entered the prison to serve his sentence.

The report recommends that some plan be adopted to obtain employment for discharged and paroled convicts.

The report shows an average of 507 prisoners during the year, with a maximum of 559. The average is 30 more daily than during the 18th fiscal year and the greatest number ever housed in the institution.

Convicts' earnings for the year were $37,467. Prisoners are engaged in 69 occupations at the penitentiary. Fall, however, on account of his ill health, does no work, but remains in the hospital. The institution sold 1,750,000 brick and tile, made in their brickyards by the prisoners, for $27,087.

Average daily cost of feeding prisoners was 22 cents a day, or $80.33 a year, or a total cost for prisoners and 24 employes of $42,772.

New Church At Egmont Bay Recently Blessed

Rev. F. X. Gallant and the parishioners of Egmont Bay and the surrounding parishes have every reason to be proud of their beautiful new church, recently completed. This magnificent brick edifice replaces the old wooden church which was one of the oldest on the Island.

About eight years ago the cement foundation was laid and as soon as the outer walls were completed the old church was torn down and worship began in the new building.

It has taken many years to finish the interior of the church but its beauty is such as one does not often see in a country church.

The beautiful altar is of pure marble as is the altar rail and side altars. Exquisite pendants light the sanctuary.

The church is supported with twelve massive pillars of imitation marble six on each side of the church. The work is exquisite and so perfectly is the work done that it is difficult to believe that one is not looking at a beautiful pillar of variegated marble. The pillars are of rose and the base of grey marble.

The lower half of the walls are of wood and the upper part pure white plaster. A splendid view of the whole interior of the church is obtained from the balcony where the organ is. This organ is one of the oldest pipe organs on the Island and is in good repair.

The beautiful statues and oil paintings have all been cleaned and give an added touch of beauty to the church. Hot water, heating and electric light place the church on a footing with any city building. The cost of the building has been greatly reduced by many generous donations and with contributions of lumber and other materials from the parishioners.

The building was recently blessed by His Lordship, Bishop O'Sullivan of Charlottetown, who complimented the congregation very highly on the beautiful building. B.

WOMAN PICKS NORTHERN MICHIGAN AS BEAUTY SPOT

P.—Seeking the most beautiful spot in the world for her home, Mrs. Elizabeth Cosgrove has found what she terms her paradise on the shores of Witch Lake, near here.

She has converted an abandoned lumber camp into a wooded wonderland, with her log cabin its center. Surrounded by forests and with wild life abounding at her very back door, Mrs. Cosgrove says she has attained fulfillment of her greatest desire.

Born in Ireland, and familiar with the beauty spots of Continental Europe, Mrs. Cosgrove passed them all by for the little spot here on the upper Michigan peninsula. She lived in Minneapolis and Chicago before coming here.

A VISITORS APPRECIATION—One of the most delightful gardens in the Province, is that of Mrs. L. E. C. Ferguson, Meadow Lea, New London, which is ideally located facing the Bay, while in the background is seen the old historical Geddie Memorial Church. With a love and appreciation for the beautiful, this energetic lady has collected many rare flowers, vines and shrubs, which she can readily call by name, from different countries. These she has trained over trellises and rustic arches with true artistic skill. Honey suckle and roses perfume the air, while the flowers are a riot of color to the eye. A sun dial and bird-baths are conveniently placed while inviting seats and an ideal summer house invite the visitor to linger. In Mrs. Ferguson's commodious home, visitors are cordially welcomed, and revel in the wonderful antiques she owns. Many of these are over two hundred years old, and others are reminders of loving romances of the early settlers when a visit to Charlottetown was made on horseback. It is certainly a connoisseurs paradise.

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR CARRYING CATTLE TO GREAT BRITAIN ON OPEN DECKS

The Dominion Government announces that through representations made by the Canadian High Commissioner in Great Britain, at the request of the Department of Agriculture, the Honorable G. Howard Ferguson has succeeded in securing an extension of time to November 1st, during which Canadian cattle on export to British markets may be carried on open decks. It is previous years the shipment of cattle on open decks was only possible from April 1st to October 1st. This means, in effect, that the open decks may be made use of for an extra month and, in consequence, an additional month's use will be had of the special deck fittings recently installed on certain boats at the expense of the Dominion Government. At the present time five boats are so fitted and each of these is likely to make one sailing during the month of October. In this event, the extra deck carried would total possibly 600 head, or the equivalent of an extra sailing by one of the larger cattle carrying boats.
